ACCIDENT IN NEBRASKA.

We clip from the Evening News, of Plattsmouth, Nebraska, the following account of the death of a son of Wash Young. Mr. Young is a native of this county, a son of the late George Young:

George, the nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wash Young, lies cold in death at the home of his parents, four miles west of this city, as a result of a sad accident, which befell him late yesterday afternoon. After school yesterday he went to the barn and saddled his pony in order to go out into the pasture after the cows. Mr. Young, who had been to town, came home about 9 o'clock and found the boy had not returned. The father at once set out to search for the missing boy, but found no trace of him. He returned to the house, thinking that the lad had probably put in an appearance in the meantime. Finding that he had not done so, Mr. Young decided to make another and more thorough search of the premises—this time accompanied by his dog. As if by instinct the dog bounded ahead and led Mr. Young directly to a place where a sad sight was revealed to the horror stricken father. The boy and pony were found—both dead—lying in a hollow, which, from a distance, slightly hid them from view. The animal had evidently stumbled while galloping down the incline, falling on top of the unfortunate lad.

Thinking that the boy had only been stunned by the fall, Mr. Young immediately got him out from under the horse and carried him home.

Dr. Schildknecht was at once summoned by telephone, but when the physician arrived he found that the little fellow had been dead for several hours. His neck had been broken, and the pony suffered a similar fracture.

The members of the afflicted family have the sincere sympathy of the entire community.

The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the family residence. Rev. Asa Sleeth of the Methodist church will conduct the services.

A telegraph office has been established at Marlinton. Tickets are sold by the Marlinton agent, Mr. Fleshma, to any point. The new railroad is referred to in the late circular issued by President Stevens of the C. & O. as the Greenbrier Division, announcing as superintendent and general agent H. C. Boughton, office at Ronceverte. Contractors have commenced improvements on the yard at Ronceverte.

The state of Oregon has hit upon a device to make men sober that would delight Woody himself. Every man who drinks has to take out a license costing him $5 a year, and unless he is armed with a document he cannot be served with liquor at any hotel or saloon. Every six months the names of all persons who take out license are to be published in the paper so that the public may know those who are authorized to drink.—Exchange.

Some apprehension exists in consequence of the Wimer brothers both being taken sick soon after their return from Hall Kramer's road camp near Marlinton. An agent was sent to ascertain whether there had been a death at Kramer's camp from smallpox. Up to last account the physicians had discovered no symptoms of the disease in the case of the Wimer brothers.

A Leaf from My Note-Book.

I pick up my Note-Book this morning, December 17, and give you a leaf from it. Starting out on a ramble from the Pine Bush heights, or as Senator McNeil suggests Pine Tree, being too large to be called a bush, we mark signs of decay on it as we pass on our way. This tree has braved many a storm but none of them seem to have injured it like the memorable thunder storm of the 28th of last May. Our favorite tree may die from the injury received in that storm.

We hasten on to Big Spring on our way to the Mountain. Passing the mills we exchange a few words of good cheer and pleasantry with Prof D. L. Barlow and others as we we go. There is some delay in the work at William Sharp & Co's saw mill as the engine needs some repairs. We do sincerely hope that those people connected with this mill will soon get under head way again and do good and paying work in their line of business. Prof Barlow is just getting his planer in operation. Mr Barlow, in this work with his planer, corn and, perhaps later on, feed mill, bids fair not only to utilize the water from these beautiful springs which come gushing out from the mountain side, but to do a good paying business here.

In our ramble we do not forget to give A. N. Taylor at the McLaughlin mill a passing notice. Mr T. is comfortable and happy. He is a good miller and we hope he may always have a grist to grind.

But passing Taylor Moore's neat and quiet dome on a nice elevation to the left of us we would, if time would permit, like to say at least "How do you do," to him and his, but on we go and pass Asa Barlow's residence, recently built, among those beautiful sugar trees. Asa is from home, busy hauling walnut logs. We admire the location and will go on to Uncle Henry Barlow's home. Here in the yard we find Anderson Barlow and George VanReenan preparing wood to keep Uncle Henry and his folks this winter. On inquiry we learn that the old gentleman is sick. We go in and talk matters over and find him better. He is not too sick to talk and joke. Uncle Henry is three score and ten years old with three or four years additional. We hope he may see at least several winters yet in this life and then go finally to a clime that is blessed and glorious in the "sweet fields of Eden," where we will all want to be found in our turn to leave this mundane sphere.

The "Good-Bye" is given, and away we go to reach A. C. Curry's dwelling place high on the mountain above Stony Creek before night fall. Glancing to and fro at things generally on our way we have no time to take notes, but hurry on up the valley, around the mountain and go winding up until we reach the level and healthful top where Amos Curry lives. We learned here the name of the mountain, but not noting it at once we have forgotten it. Here and about here we stayed nearly twenty-four hours. In our walks we reach William Vanreenan's quiet home, but Will had taken his gun and gone into the mountains, and we did not see him. We are told that Joseph Barlow is preparing to build a house here and move into it as soon as practicable. Mr Vanreenan talks some of moving to Williams River.

We talked with Mr Curry about things generally, but neither of us said "yes" to every thing the other said, but we got along well together. If you want to have a social talk visit our friend Curry.

DUNMORE.

A Happy New Year, Mum.

Peace on earth; good will to men.

Paddy Gay, of Elkins, was in town last week looking for fine horses. Mr. Gay has the largest and best equipped livery stable in the State at Elkins.

Emery Conrad has opened up a harness shop at Arborvale.

Miss Gertie Yeager is visiting in town.

We were at Cass Saturday and saw the first passenger train and the pay car come in. Capt. Frazier was in charge. Quite a crowd of people was present, and business was very lively. The big store at that place will receive about six car loads of goods this week.

The daughters of Dr. Moomau, Dr. Austin and E. N. Moore came home Friday from Lewisburg to stay a week.

Most all the boys from the railroad and lumber camps are home this week.

The County Court should make some arrangements about some of the county roads at the January term. The roads must be fixed up before they become impassable. The longer they are put off, the more it will cost to repair them. There should also be something done at once with the new road down Laurel Creek to Cass. It is almost impossible to get there with a wagon.

The people of Dunmore and Green Bank gave Rev H. W. McLaughlin a [illegible] pounding Monday night.

Drs Barlow and Bosworth, of Beverly, were in town Thursday.

Sterl Ward, of Huttonsville, was in town Saturday and bought Dr Austin's saddle horse.

Mrs Mary Ann Wooddell, relict of the late Andrew Wooddell, is on the sick list at this writing.

The Misses Moomau and Austin came up on the train last Friday to spend Xmas at home.

J. H. Curry is on the sicklist, don't think he is taking small-pox.

Mrs Caroline Nottingham is visiting her daughter, Mrs J. H. Curry, who is on the sick-list.

There will be a watch meeting at Wesley Chapel on December 31 by Rev J. W. McNeil.

E. O. Moore is on the sick list.

We hope the road overseer will remove the blockade in the road near the post office.

PUGH—DILLEY.

Married, At the residence of the bride's father, Clark Dilley, Emery E. Pugh and Miss Sarah A. V. Dilley, Rev J. W. McNeil officiating. After the ceremony all the friends pacsent sat down to a bountiful dinner which was enjoyed by all. May their married life be as bright as the day on which they were married, without a cloud.

A WELL WISHER.

DIED.

Memorial.

Died, November 25, 1900, Robert Keith, infant son of P. P. and L. J. Oliver, aged 4 months and 28 days.—An empty cradle on earth, but a bright little angel has gone to swell the angel band in heaven. May the sorrowing parents bow in submission to the will of God, who said suffer the little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." We know he cannot return to them but they can go to him. As death has left an empty void this world can never fill. For they knew not how dearly they loved him until he was gone.

Our father knows best and we trust him,
He takes back the jewel he gave;
Christ knoweth our sorrow,
For he has wept at the grave.

This world be dreary without him:
Our path is wet with our tears,
But out of the night of our sorrow
The dawn of the morning appears.

JOHN B. KENNISON.

Died, December 18, 1900, at his home near Hillsboro, Pocahontas County, John Barlow Kennison, aged more than 80 years. This worthy and much esteemed citizen was a grandson of Charles Kennison, one of the two brothers who were the earliest pioneers of the Little Levels. Our lamented friend passed a busy life farming and operating a flourishing blacksmith business. He was a noted expert at the anvil, and by patient industry and judicious economy acquired a fine property now occupied by his children. He was a devoted adherent of the Methodist church for many years. From youth to old age all who knew him had a good worn for John B. Kennison.

W. T. P.

JACOB K. TAYLOR.

Died, at his home Tuesday night, December 18, 1900, at 11 p. m. Jacob K. Taylor, 66 years old. Mr Taylor had been afflicted for about a year with some sort of throat trouble, but bore it all without a murmur. He was a member of the M. E. Church South, and his funeral sermon was preached Thursday by his son Rev John A. Taylor, assisted by Revs McNeil and McLaughlin, his six oldest sons acting as pall bearers—first, Jacob B. and J. Edward; second, Daniel and William; third, Rev John A. and G. S. His other two sons Ham and Frank were present, also his daughters Mrs Zinn and Mrs Fowler, of Huttonsville, and Miss Sallie. Mrs Cook was not there.—Mr Taylor leaves a wife and twelve children and hosts of friends to mourn him. He was a black smith and farmer, and served through the war from 1861 to 1865. He was born in Rockingham County, Va., and lived in Pocahontas County about 41 years. He was a good citizen. Peace to his ashes.

CIRCUIT COURT.

Judge McWhorter came up Wednesday and held a special term of the court. The case of the subcontractors Cogan, Noble & House was taken up and S. J. Payne moved to dismiss the attachment suit against Strang & Co. on the ground that it tied up the funds of Strang & Co. Geo. J. McCanus for the railroad company attacked the attachment proceedings also as representing the garnishee.

The attorneys for the receiver and the creditors opposed the motion on the ground that if the money was paid over there would be danger of loss to the credirors.

The court released the attachment as far as it applied to the outfit and personal property but held the attachment as far as it applied to the money in the railway company's hands, and ordered that Commissioner Bratton proceed with the report and finish in time if possible for a special term to be held in January.

The attorney for the railroad attacked the mechanic's liens filed by some of the laborers of Cogan, Noble & House and the court held the lines not good. The protection afforded laborers by our mechanic's lien law amounts to nothing in this State and every effort to amend the law so that a large corporation may be held responsible for work done by laborers for its contractors has been defeated in the legislature. The law as it stands now is a dead letter.

A decree of sale was entered in the partition case of Lottie R. Hill vs. George Simmons and others for the sale of 114½ acres of land which Jacob Simmons willed to his six youngest children. The land not being susceptible of partition it was considered best to sell it and divide the proceeds.

The case of Burnsides vs. Greenbrier Railway Company was heard on bill and demurrer. The demurrer was sustained and the plaintiff given leave to amend. This is a case in which 3.30 acres of land belonging to infants was taken for the right of way for the railroad for $1.00 damages and involves the question of just compensation. The land was partly farm land and partly a sugar camp. The owners not knowing the result of the action of the railroad condemnation proceedings waited until the statutory time had elapsed without protesting. They now ask a review of the case and just compensation.

In the case of Cogan, Noble & House there is a wide difference between the parties. The creditors who are so numerous that you might as well call them for short, the public, claim that they should be paid in full and that the earnings under the contracts of grading and bridge building are sufficient to pay them. On the other hand Strang & Co claim that nearly all the funds that would be available to the indebtedness which is nearly $9000 has been used to finish the work.

The accounts are long and complex and the public will have to remain calm until the courts decide who is right in the contention.

Geo. W. McClintic spent Christmas in Marlinton.

Try Compound Syrup of White Pine for coughs and colds. It is absolutely safe and reliable. Formula on each bottle, and is recommended by all physicians. Prepared and for sale by Harry R. Echols, Druggist.

Christmas passed off quietly in Marlinton. Some drank to the health of the season but since the town authorities have taken to making a charge for using the town as a place to whoop it up, it is considered the proper thing to be drunk and act sober, while being sober and acting drunk is a grave offense.

B. F. Hamilton has moved into his new building near the crossing and desires his friends to know of his present whereabouts. The building ranks among the best in the place. He will take poultry on Thursday, Dec. 27th, and will be more than pleased to see his patrons on that day and at all times. He takes this opportunity to express his hearty thanks for their patronage in the past and feels sure he is now able to do better by them in the future.

To our customers and friends—We wish you a merry Christmas and a happy and prosperous New Year. With these greetings, permit us also to convey our appreciation of your support and patronage. Our business during the past year has surpassed our most sanguine expectations. We feel grateful to you for our success and heartily thank you for it. Anticipating a continuance of your patronage, and hoping that the new century may bring much happiness and joy to you and yours, we beg to remain,

Yours very respectfully,
A. HARRISON & CO.

How to Cure Croup.

R. Gray, who lives at Armenia, Duchess Co., N. Y., says: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best medicine I have ever used. It is a fine children's remedy for croup and never fails to cure." When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough has developed it will prevent the attack. This should be borne in mind and a bottle of the Cough Remedy kept at hand ready for instant use as soon as these symptoms appear.

Nov. 19, 1900.

Barlow and Moore
vs.
Mary M. Cook and others.

Pursuant to a decree of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County, West Virginia, rendered on the 5th day of October, 1900, at the October term thereof, I will proceed at my office in the town of Marlinton, West Va., on the 15th day of January, 1901, to take, state and report to the next term of said Court the following matters of account, to-wit:

First.—An account showing all the subsisting debts against the estate of Charles Cook, deceased, with their priorities.

Second.—A statement showing all the real estate owned by the said Charles Cook at the time of his death.

Third.—A statement showing to whom the debts secured by the deed of trust filed as Exhibit "A" of this bill are now due and coming.

Fourth.—Any other matter deemed pertinent by the Commissioner or required to be specially stated by any party in interest.

At which time and place you may attend.

T. S. McNEEL,
Com'r in Chancery.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

To the creditors of Charles Cook, deceased:

IN PURSUANCE of a decree of the Circuit Court of the County of Pocahontas, made in a cause therein pending, to subject the real estate of the said Charles Cook to the payment of his debts, you are required to present your claims against the estate of the said Charles Cook for adjudication to T. S. McNeel, Commissioner, at his office in the said county, on or before the 15th day of January, 1901.

Witness, J. H. Patterson, clerk of the said Court, this 12th day of November, 1900.

J. H. PATTERSON,
11-15-6 Clerk.

Pneumonia Prevented.

Among the tens of thousands who have used Chamberlain' Cough Remedy for colds and lagrippe not a single case has resulted in pneumonia. Thos. Whitfield & Co., 240 Wabash Ave Chicago, one of the most prominent druggists in that city, in speaking of this, says: "We reccommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for lagrippe in many cases as it not only gives prompt and complete recovery but also counteracts any tendency to result in pneumonia.

Getting Thin

is all right, if you are too fat; and all wrong, if too thin already.

Fat, enough for your habit, is healthy; a little more, or less, is no great harm. Too fat, consult a doctor; too thin, persistently thin, no matter what cause, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil.

There are many causes of getting too thin; they all come under these two heads: overwork and under-digestion.

Stop over-work, if you can; but, whether you can or not, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, to balance yourself with your work. You can't live on it—true—but, by it, you can. There's a limit, however; you'll pay for it.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the readiest cure for "can't eat," unless it comes of your doing no work—you can't long be well and strong, without some sort of activity.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other. If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

Content—A Sonnet.

Sweet are the thoughts that savour of content:
The quiet mind is richer than a crown:
Sweet are the nights in careless slumber spent:
The poor estate scorns Fortune's angry frown.
Such sweet content, such minds, such sleep, such bliss,
Beggars enjoy, when prince's oft do miss.
The ho[illegible] house that harbours quiet [illegible]
[illegible]age that affords no pride nor care,
The mean that 'grees with country music best,
The sweet consort of mirth's and music's fare.
Obscured life sets down a type of bliss

County Sketches

The Accessory.

The grand jury had been empanelled, and the judge and prosecuting attorney after a perusal of the docket had failed to find a case in which all parties were ready to trust themselves to that palladium of modern liberty, the petit jury. It was about 11 o'clock, and a subdued young man who was in court technically under arrest would be ready to stand his trial for disturbing religious worship immediately after court convened in the afternoon. This was the best the court could do in furnishing entertainment for the crowd which had gathered in the court-room on the first day of Circuit Court.

The judge intimated that he was ready to hear any motions the bar chose to make, and the prosecuting attorney called the court's attention to the case of Aunt Fanny Duval, who was in jail charged as an accessory to a felony.

He said in part: "If the court please, there is an old colored woman in jail at this place who is charged with being an accessory after the fact in the killing of Hiram Skipworth, in the Big Bear Flats two weeks since. She was working as housekeeper for John Hass Powell who was charged with the murder, and after he had committed the murder he fled to his house, closely pursued by a constable of the Big Bear District. When he arrived there the colored woman was instrumental in aiding Powell to escape. The constable arrested her, and a justice of the Big Bear District sent her to jail as an accessory after the fact. The constable arrived at the jail with a commitment, and she had been confined in the jail since then. This is the only charge against her, and I would like to have your Honor examine her in the presence of the constable, who is the prosecuting witness, and ascertain whether she should be kept in custody or not."

The prisoner was brought in. She was a very fat old colored woman, who was very much alarmed concerning her situation, but chock full of indignation for the constable.

"Well, Aunt Fanny," said the Judge kindly, "what have you done?"

"I aint done nuffin', marster, 'deed I aint!"

"Well, tell me all about it."

"I was cookin' fo' Mistah John fo' mo' dan a yeah. Mis' Clara Hass, she ma'd Mistah John's pa way back fo' de wa', an' day went up No' to lib. [illegible]

[illegible] home?' I 'plied: 'Mebbe Mistah Powell is at home, and mebbe he yaint; what yo' want?' He say dat Mistah John done killed a man wif his knife, and dat he come to 'rest him. Den I went to de stahs and holler up: 'Mistah John, come down yere; dere's a man says he wants to 'rest you!'

"Den dat yaller dog comes up to me and puts his han' on my shoulder and says: 'Shut up dat hollerin', I'll 'rest you.'

"Jes' then we yeard Mistah John jump out of de upstahs window an hit de ground kerplump. Dat po' white trash sta'ts to run round de house, and I nails him. He frows me down but I falls on top. Den de odder men he lef' out in de bresh come runnin' hollerin', 'Hol' him tight!' I 'plied dat I would if I could.

"When dey got dat cornstubble up he was de maddest pup you ebber seen. Mistah John runned off and dey say he's goin' yet. Dey captu'd me, and tuk me to de Squire, and de Squire say: 'Gotter go to jail!' Den I beg and plead 'I ai'nt done nuffin'; 'I'se not guilty!' and de Squire say: 'Gotter go to jail!'

"Den I say to de Squire: 'Mis' Mittie Jefferson 'specting to be 'fined, and she 'pends on me to nu'se her!' and the Squire say: 'Cayn't help dat, gotter go to jail!'"

The Judge turned to the prosecuting attorney and asked to see the constable. The constable came forward and the judge asked him if it was true that this woman was employed by the escaped prisoner as a housekeeper, and the constable said that it was. The judge then said:

"I see by your warrant that you have have charged this woman with being an accessory after the fact in enabling John Hass Powell a person charged with felony, to escape by shouting up the stairs that there was a man there waiting to arrest him. Now if you will hand me the Code, Mr Clerk, I will read the section referring to this crime of accessory after the fact.

. . . . 'But no person in the relation of husband and wife, parent or grand-parent, child or grandchild, brother or sister by consanguinity or affinity, or servant to the offender, who after the commission of a felony shall aid or assist a principal felon, or accessory before the fact, to avoid or escape from prosecution or punishment, shall be deemed an accessory after the fact.'

"Now you see that in this case this woman is incapable of becoming accessory in the way charged in the warrant. If you wish to bring a charge against her for interfering with an officer in the discharge of his duty you would have a better case by far."

The constable, who was a good fellow enough, and for whom Aunt Fanny held a grudge because of his name, said that so far as he could see that would do no one any good, and it was thereupon decided that "the said Fanny Duval go hence, the court being of the opinion that she hath done no wrong," and so said we all.

Delightful English Humor.

The mortal terror of newspapers to which even the most intelligent horse is a prey is certainly a mystery. If a horse meets a torn newspaper in the middle of the road, he is seized with a conviction that it is on the point of tearing him to pieces, and accordingly he falls into a spasm of terror. LIFE AND TIMES OF A MEDICAL STUDENT.

By Susie A. Price.

Should you ever come to Baltimore,—an elephant of a town,—big quiet, and inoffensive at most times, but as at the present—a great festive season—it is very obstreperous and noisy. During the last week before Christmas it was almost as much as a person's breath was worth to venture into the crowd thronging the two principal streets in the shopping district—Lexington and Baltimore. The big stores were wonderful sights. What the Baltimore Jewish merchant can do with his shop window when Christmas comes, to catch the eye of the passerby, is a revelation to mere uncommercial minds.

But it is not of the life and times of a Christmas shopper I would speak of. I will speak of a far more pleasant life, and not so wearing on the brains and nerves.

If you ever come to the Womans' Medical College of Baltimore, (I do n't suppose you ever will, but as you hardly ever know what you are heading for ontl you bump up against it, you might as well be prepared), the first thing that will strike your eye (that is what it is meant to do) is a huge white marble slab at the entrance. If you do n't see it you are at the wrong entrance. On it is this inscription in big gold letters:

WOMANS' MEDICAL COLLEGE OF BALTIMORE.

INCORPORATED FEBRUARY 1882
Under the Laws of the State of Maryland.

Indies Fieri Meliorem.

The English of the inscription appears harmless enough to the the average freshman. She knows she has nothing, or once and rather, nothing to do with that; but that outlandish Indies Fieri Meliorem seems to point directly to her and she feels it keenly. That, together with the general awfulness supposed to hover over a medical college night and day, so different from any atmosphere on land or sea, makes the newcomer feel, well a little "queer" you know at first; but only in rare instances has the girl felt so very queer as to rashly discard all idea of studying medicine henceforth and forever more, disposed of her books, and medical outfit at a howling sacrifice, and returned home, nevermore to brave the terrors of a medical existence.

Such instances are rare, but they do occur, I am sorry to say. Perhaps the only reason they do not occur oftener is because there are not more students, but that sounds rather Irish. The number of women and girls going into a medical career does not seem to be great enough. In this college, the third in age in the United States, there are only thirty students. Taking from that number those coming from other countries, Persia, Denmark, and Lapland, the average is about a half, or a quarter, or some fraction of a girl from each State. That is a dreadful state of things and surely ought to be remedied. I know that there is an idea that a woman who pulls up old traditions by the roots, so to speak, and studies medicine like a man, (there is no other way to study it, I regret to say), must be mistaken about herself. But she has not been mistaken yet. [illegible] that after reading a medical book or attending a lecture, he could hear the same thing gone over and over again, and the last time he heard it, it was all as new and fresh and entertaining as it was the first time. That seemed to surprise and please him very much.

Medical journals, ancient and modern, are supposed to make the study of medicine so easy that he who runs may read, and keep out of the way of them if he likes; but the fascinating little way they have of likening the bones of us to things we can see is nothing but a delusion and a snare. A lecturer, for instance, taking his cue from the book, may give a most exhaustive discourse on "bones," taking all the pains of showing us samples of each, even urging us to take it in our hands, and inviting us to take them home with us to study them at our lesure, which invitation is required to be accepted. To resume. The Professor says: "This is called the scaphoid, because it resembles a boat; the sphenoid, a wedge; ethmoid, a seive; trapezoid, a table," &c. A definite number of bones seems to have an indefinite number of things to resemble. One girl gets it all in her head maybe; eleven don't. It would have been just as well in the end if that girl had stayed by the eleven perhaps.

It may be, it is pretty certain to be, at the end of the next lecture we are questioned on the preceeding one. Not one of the eleven knows a blessed thing about the scaphoid, the ethmoid, or even the sphenoid, but this one girl. She will say: "The scaphoid's the boat, the sphenoid's the wedge, the ethmoid's the seive," and gets laughed at for her pains.

"The valiant warrior famoused for fight,
After a hundred victories, once foiled,
Is from the book of honor razed quite
And all the rest forgot for which he toiled."

There is no royal road to learning anything, and the woman medical finds she must be brave and ever more be brave. May they multiply and prosper in the land.

Pride of Manhood

From the Memphis Scimiter.

The happiest time in a boy's life is the day he dons his first short trousers. Mrs Poyser's bantam cock, which imagines that the sun rises every morning to hear him crow, could not strut with more conscious pride than did this little fellow, and he felt the importance incident to his first pair. Finally he stopped before his little sister and delivered these indisputable facts:

"Sister, you can't never wear pants! Sister, you can't never have a mustache!" and finally as a complete cincher: "Sister, you can't never be a man, nohow!"

Overcome with the gloom of her future, "sister" burst into an uncontrollable flood of tears.

The Modern Magazine.

The magazine editor calls his assistant to the awe-inspiring precincts of the sanctum. "Have you," he asked, "accepted that poem on 'The Power of Love,' by John L. Fitz Jeffries?" "It is done," replies the assistant. "Well! Here is an article on 'Higher Culture,' by Richard Broker; an essay on 'Business Life,' by Professor Greek Root; another on 'American Politics' by the Rev Darkhouse; and yet another on the 'Efficacy of Prayer,' by Senator Boone. See that they are paid for at once. But who is the man who waits in the anteroom?" "He says he is a great author." "An author! Show him the door. I have no time for authors."—Life.

ACCURACY.

Why on earth should one be accurate? I never could understand the craze for accuracy to which so many people are a prey. There are men who are never satisfied unless they know how many miles it is from New York to Pekin, or what is the precise population of the capital of Madagascar. In order to arrive at accuracy in such matters, they will undertake toilsome journey and risk their lives and frequently loose them.

Think how many lives have been expended and what fearful sufferings have been undergone in search for the sources of the Nile, or for the North Pole. Of what earthly use is it to know precisely where the Nile takes its rise, or whether the North Pole is planted on a rock, or stands in the midst of the sea? If a man should ask me the population of the capital of Madagascar, I should tell him that it is forty-seven thousand, six hundred and fifty three, and he would be perfectly satisfied unless he should discover afterwards that I know nothing whatever about it, in which case he would become instantly miserable.

When Herodotus told the world that the Nile sprang from a fountain—one stream from which flowed north and the other south—everybody was perfectly satisfied with the Nile, until doubt was cast on the veracity of Herodotus. Immediately men set about discovering just where and how the Nile arose, and they persevered until they finally found its sources. The people who believed in Herodotus were precisely as happy as those who now believe in Speke and and Stanley. Why then should we have gone through so much in order to gain so little? As for the North Pole, its discovery would not give one helpless cripple a bicycle, or furnish one [illegible] with a cigar. It ought to make no sort of difference to us whether the Pole is reached or is not reached by man, but nevertheless, we are willing to undergo any sacrifice in order to reach it, and to say with accuracy just where it is situated.

If we could only bring ourselves to realise that in most things accurate knowledge is of no sort of consequence, life would be far easier than it is. We punish the unhappy schoolboy who fails to learn that nine times eight is seventy-two. Why should he learn it? Personally, I have always believed that nine times eight is eighty-seven, and the belief has never done me a particle of harm. We despise the man who thinks that Charles the Fifth was King of Sweden, but in point of fact the accurate man who knows that Charles the Fifth was King of Prussia and was decapitated by Robespierre, will not live a day longer or enjoy life a particle more because of his accurate knowledge.

The desire to know things accurately, is the source of woes unnumbered. We know what we suffered in our youth when we were compelled to learn Latin accurately. [illegible]

Government Paid The Dollar.

From the Chicago Record.

When the committee of Treasury officials went out to select a location for a Government building at Salt Lake City they were offered two sites, one of them by the Mormon church, opposite the Temple, free of cost, and the other by Walker Bros., nearer the centre of the town, for the consideration of $1. The latter was selected, the deeds made out, signed and recorded, and the property has belonged to the government ever since August 1. Several days ago Secretary Gage received a letter from Walker Bros. dunning him for the dollar which was set down as the consideration in the deed. They said they had sold the land for a reasonable price and they expected the Government to keep its agreement and pay them the $1 cash.

Secretary Gage had a cabinet maker in the Treasury Department make a box of rare woods inlaid, lined with velvet, and in the lid placed the following letter, written by the best penman in the Department:

Gentlemen: In full payment for a certain lot of land in the city of Salt Lake, conveyed by you to the United States August 1, 1899, I hand you this, the price stipulated as a nominal consideration therefor, towit, one dollar. It is to be hoped that the Federal building to be erected upon the authority granted by last Congress and approved March 2, 1899, will nobly represent the dignity of our Government. It is certain that the titles of transfer will always remain a tribute to your liberal public spirit."

Upon the top of the lid of the box, inlaid, are these words in Latin: "Non sibi, sed omnibus," which mean "Not for self, but for all."

A Kentucky Comedy of Errors.

From the Polk County News.

She meant it, but he took it for the usual feminine bluff of such occasions and repeated the dose on the spot. She ran out of the room to the back porch, where her father had just finished oiling his gun.

But by the time she had arrived there she found out she wasn't as mad as she thought she was, and hatching up an excuse for her sudden appearance, said: "Papa, go in and show Mr Blank your gun. He is a great authority on birds and guns!" "I will," said the father who is an enthusiastic sportsman, and he made for the parlor, gun in hand.

When her father entered the parlor that young man didn't even wait to say good-by, nor was he particular about his manner or place of exit. He broke through the window and struck a speed he thought would distance the gun as well as the old man.

It was with difficulty the father cornered him a few days later, and explained; then it was a month later before the girl could persuade him she had not intended a practical joke. [illegible]

THE END OF THE CENTURY.

Next to the Sampson-Schley controversy in point of merit comes the discussion over the true end of the century. Some persons insist that we are now in the 20th century. It would be a sad thing if we were compelled to cut the 19th century out of the only year in which the figure 19 figures. The century begins with the first day of the first year, 1801, and ends with the last day of the hundredth year, 1900. But what doth it profit a man to gain the argument if he lose his own temper. If the century ended last Sunday, there must have been a year 0.

Suppose that French scientist had discovered his elixir of life earlier and had squirted it into the veins of a child who was born on the 1st day of the 1st month of the year 1. On January 1, 1900, he would have been 1899 years old, being in his 1900th year.

When we write January 1, 1900, we do not mean that the Christian era is 1900 years old, but that it is 1899 years and one day old. We reckon the months and days the same way, but in computing the age of a man we say he is 40 years old during his 41st year. We write 1-1-'00. It would be proper to write what we mean: 1st—1st '00th—the first day of the first month of the 1900th year. We often see a date written as follows: January 1st, 1900. To make it conform strictly it should be either January 1, 1900, or January 1st, 1900th.

A friend of ours has a great desire to see a certain article published in the Greenbrier Independent about two years ago discouraging the building of a railroad from Caldwell up the Greenbrier to the forks of the river. It would be very interesting reading to us also, and if we had only not lost the copy in which it appeared we would take a malicious delight in publishing it ourselves. The Times had published a statement saying that that the route along the banks of the Greenbrier was the only practical route for a railroad to develop this section of the country. A correspondent who is to us, and, doubtless, "to fortune and to fame" unknown, answered it in the Greenbrier Independent; which able journal said neither yea nor nay to it, but published it in a conspicuous place. The correspondent was very hard on us for presuming to tell Mr Axtell anything about building railroads, but the burden of his song was the absurdity of the idea that a railroad could be built into Pocahontas by way of the river.

The Wetzel Democrat calls attention to the impropriety of ex-Senator Faulkner taking the case of N. B. Scott as an attorney. The Democratic party of West Virginia is united in opposition to Scott's retaining his seat under the election. It was only secured by depriving State Senator Kidd of his vote and consequently his district of representation. Scott might have had the benefit of the doubt if Kidd had been turned down for good, but afterwards his seat was miraculously restored to him. It is to explain and uphold such practices that Senator Faulkner has accepted a fee. Such a lawyer would take a case against his mother. He is to use his influence and his knowledge of law and precedents in cases of this kind which he has acquired as Democratic representative from West Virginia. He has been loaded with favors by his party all his life and this is the result? To quote from the Latin: "When you have pronounced him an ingrate you have said all."

THE ABSENT-MINDED BEGGAR.

By Rudyard Kipling.

When you've shouted "Rule Britannia"—when you've sung "God Save the Queen"—
When you've finished killing Kruger with your mouth—
Will you kindly drop a shilling in my little tambourine
For a gentleman in kharki ordered South?
He's an absent minded beggar and his weaknesses are great—
But we and Paul must take him as we find him—
He is out on active service, wiping something off a slate—
And he's left a lot o' little things behind him!
Duke's son—cook's son—son of a hundred kings—
(Fifty thousand horse and foot going to Table Bay!)
Each of 'em doing his country's work (and who's to look after their things?
Pass the hat for your credit's sake and pay ! pay ! pay!

There are girls he married secret, asking no permission to,
For he knew he wouldn't get it if he did.
There is gas and coal and vittles and the house-rent falling due,
And it's more than rather likely there's a kid.
There are girls he walked with casual. They'll be sorry now he's gone
For an absent-minded beggar they will find him;
But it ain't the time for sermons with the winter coming on—
We must help the girl that Tommy's left behind him.
Cook's son—Duke's son—son of a belted Earl—
Son of a Lambeth publican—it's all the same to-day!
Each of 'em doing his country's work (and who's to look after the girl?
Pass the hat for your credit's sake, and pay ! pay ! pay!

There are families by the thousand, far too proud to beg or speak,
And they'll put their sticks and bedding up the spout,
And they'll live on half o' nothing paid 'em punctual once a week,
For the man that earns the wage is ordered out.
He's an absent-minded beggar, but he heard his country call,
And his reg'ment didn't need to send to find him:
He chucked his job and joined it—So the job before us all
It to keep the home that Tommy's left behind him!
Duke's job—cook's job—gardner, baronet, groom—
Mews or palace or paper shop—there's some one gone away!
Each of 'em doing his country's work (and whose to look after the room?)
Pass the hat for your credit's sake and—pay! pay! pay!

Let us manage so as later we can look him in the face,
And tell him—what he'd very much prefer—
That while he saved the Empire his employer saved his place,
And his mates (that's you and me) looked out for her.
He's an absent-minded beggar, and he may forget it all,
But we do not want his kiddies to remind him
That we sent 'em to the work-house while their daddy hammered Paul,
So we'll help the homes our Tommy's left behind him!
Cook's home—Duke's home—home of a millionaire.
(Fifty thousand horse and foot going to Table Bay!)
Each of 'em doing his country's work (and what have you to spare?)
Pass the hat for your credit's sake and—pay! pay! pay!

WEATHER NOTES.

We can generally count on winter weather for Christmas in West Virginia. This year it set in on the 23rd of December and since then we have had cold, dry, enjoyable winter weather. Up to that time the fall weather was almost perfect. It was a season of frosts and clear blue skies, with little rain-fall. A gentleman who has lived in the West said that it was typical Montana weather. That every year that section experiences weeks of such sunshiny days and cold nights. It has been a long time since West Virginia had such a fall season.

The contractors on the public works in this county did not miss a single day in over two months. The rains we had fell at night or on Sunday. Most of the laborers would have stopped for the holidays anyway, though the contractors moved heaven and earth trying to keep them here. But if they had remained it would have been impossible to have done any work. The snow covers the right of way, hiding all signs that the work has recently been done.

There is more ice in the county than ever we remember seeing. Forty or fifty years since there came a winter when the Greenbrier froze so solidly that it was used as a highway. Owing to the lowness of its tide the river is frozen so that it would be good sleighing on the ice.

There is an old saying which is true in a general way, that if there is a break up in the ice before Christmas there will be three that winter. Otherwise there will will be but one. If the flood comes suddenly there will be a great breakup this year. In addition to the vast amount of ice formed on the river there a lot of logs, cut in clearing the right of way for the railroad, lying in the bed of the river. Altogether we may expect a notable breakup.

We have not had a flood since last spring. When the railroad men came to Marlinton in August they hauled some logs in the bed of Knapps Creek, arranging them conveniently for footmen to cross upon. Since then there has not been a flood to move them. On many farms of this county water for stock has been very scarce, especially since the freezes came drying up many of the smaller streams.

Unpopular Army Officers.

"Whether young Major Logan was shot by his own men is a question that will probably never be settled," said a Confederate veteran last evening; "but it is an undeniable fact that things of that kind do sometimes happen in battle. During the Civil War such incidents were by no means unknown on either side. They were kept from the public as much as possible, but were none the less notorious in the armies. It is a very dangerous thing for a company officer to incur the hatred of his men, because he is generally mixed up with the line during the engagement, and can be picked off without much trouble.

"During the second year of the war I was a first lieutenant in an Alabama regiment, and the captain of my company, who was a good soldier but a man of ungovernable temper, had managed to make himself very unpopular with the rank and file. One day a corporal, who was a fine fellow and universally liked in the company, made some trifling blunder in carrying out an order, and the captain as usual turned loose. He gave the poor fellow a most unmerciful public 'cussing, and ordered him under arrest until he could think up some unusual and humiliating punishment. Just then our kindly old colonel happened along, heard the story, and called the captain to his tent. When the latter came out he was the most subdued and thoughtful individual I ever saw, and he immediately ordered the corporal released.

"Later on he told me the substance of their conversation. 'You are fixing to get killed in our very next engagement,' the colonel said and then went on to relate how he himself had been severely wounded by one of his own men during the Mexican War, all on account of unnecessary severities. 'It was a life long lesson,' he said, earnestly, 'and I want you to profit by my experience.' From that day on the captain was a changed man and eventually the soldiers became devoted to him. He was finally killed, poor fellow, but by a Yankee bullet. I have purposely refrained from mentioning any names, but several Alabama veterans now living in this city remember the incident."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

THE END OF THE CENTURY.

Next to the Sampson-Schley controversy in point of merit comes the discussion over the true end of the century. Some persons insist that we are now in the 20th century. It would be a sad thing if we were compelled to cut the 19th century out of the only year in which the figure 19 figures. The century begins with the first day of the first year, 1801, and ends with the last day of the hundredth year, 1900. But what doth it profit a man to gain the argument if he lose his own temper. If the century ended last Sunday there must have been a year 0.

Suppose that French scientist had discovered his elixir of life earlier and had squirted it into the veins of a child who was born on the 1st day of the 1st month of the year 1. On January 1, 1900, he would have been 1899 years old, being in his 1900th year.

When we write January 1, 1900, we do not mean that the Christian era is 1900 years old, but that it is 1899 years and one day old. We reckon the months and days the same way, but in computing the age of a man we say he is 40 years old during his 41st year. We write 1-1-'00. It would be proper to write what we mean: 1st—1st '00th—the first day of the first month of the 1900th year. We often see a date written as follows: January 1st, 1900. To make it conform strictly it should be either January 1, 1900, or January 1st, 1900th.

A friend of ours has a great desire to see a certain article published in the Greenbrier Independent about two years ago discouraging the building of a railroad from Caldwell up the Greenbrier to the forks of the river. It would be very interesting reading to us also, and if we had only not lost the copy in which it appeared we would take a malicious delight in publishing it ourselves. The Times had published a statement saying that that the route along the banks of the Greenbrier was the only practical route for a railroad to develop this section of the country. A correspondent who is to us, and, doubtless, "to fortune and to fame" unknown, answered it in the Greenbrier Independent; which able journal said neither yea nor nay to it, but published it in a conspicuous place. The correspondent was very hard on us for presuming to tell Mr Axtell anything about building railroads, but the burden of his song was the absurdity of the idea that a railroad could be built into Pocahontas by way of the river.

The Wetzel Democrat calls attention to the impropriety of ex-Senator Faulkner taking the case of N. B. Scott as an attorney. The Democratic party of West Virginia is united in opposition to Scott's retaining his seat under the election. It was only secured by depriving State Senator Kidd of his vote and consequently his district of representation. Scott might have had the benefit of the doubt if Kidd had been turned down for good, but afterwards his seat was miraculously restored to him. It is to explain and uphold such practices that Senator Faulkner has accepted a fee. Such a lawyer would take a case against his mother. He is to use his influence and his knowledge of law and precedents in cases of this kind which he has acquired as Democratic representative from West Virginia. He has been loaded with favors by his party all his life and this is the result. To quote from the Latin: "When you have pronounced him an ingrate you have said all."

According to the will of D. S. Ford, the late publisher of the Youth's Companion, that paper will be conducted hereafter for the benefit of the Baptist Social Union. He left an estate valued at $1,000,000, all of which goes to charities.

THE ABSENT-MINDED BEGGAR.

By Rudyard Kipling.

When you've shouted "Rule Britannia"—when you've sung "God Save the Queen"—
When you've finished killing Kruger with your mouth—
Will you kindly drop a shilling in my little tambourine
For a gentleman in kharki ordered South?
He's an absent minded beggar and his weaknesses are great—
But we and Paul must take him as we find him—
He is out on active service, wiping something off a slate—
And he's left a lot o' little things behind him!
Duke's son—cook's son—son of a hundred kings—
(Fifty thousand horse and foot going to Table Bay!)
Each of 'em doing his country's work (and who's to look after their things?
Pass the hat for your credit's sake and pay! pay! pay!

There are girls he married secret, asking no permission to,
For he knew he wouldn't get it if he did.
There is gas and coal and vittles and the house-rent falling due,
And it's more than rather likely there's a kid.
There are girls he walked with casual. They'll be sorry now he's gone
For an absent-minded beggar they will find him;
But it ain't the time for sermons with the winter coming on—
We must help the girl that Tommy's left behind him.
Cook's son—Duke's son—son of a belted Earl—
Son of a Lambeth publican—it's all the same to-day!
Each of 'em doing his country's work (and who's to look after the girl?
Pass the hat for your credit's sake, and pay! pay! pay!

There are families by the thousand, far too proud to beg or speak,
And they'll put their sticks and bedding up the spout,
And they'll live on half o' nothing paid 'em punctual once a week,
For the man that earns the wage is ordered out.
He's an absent-minded beggar, but he heard his country call,
And his reg'ment didn't need to send to find him:
He chucked his job and joined it—So the job before us all
It to keep the home that Tommy's left behind him!
Duke's job—cook's job—gardner, baronet, groom—
Mews or palace or paper shop—there's some one gone away!
Each of 'em doing his country's work (and whose to look after the room?)
Pass the hat for your credit's sake and— pay! pay! pay!

Let us manage so as later we can look him in the face,
And tell him—what he'd very much prefer—
That while he saved the Empire his employer saved his place,
And his mates (that's you and me) looked out for her.
He's an absent-minded beggar, and he may forget it all,
But we do not want his kiddies to remind him
That we sent 'em to the work-house while their daddy hammered Paul,
So we'll help the homes our Tommy's left behind him!
Cook's home—Duke's home—home of a millionaire.
(Fifty thousand horse and foot going to Table Bay!)
Each of 'em doing his country's work (and what have you to spare?)
Pass the hat for your credit's sake and—pay! pay! pay!

WEATHER NOTES.

We can generally count on winter weather for Christmas in West Virginia. This year it set in on the 23rd of December and since then we have had cold, dry, enjoyable winter weather. Up to that time the fall weather was almost perfect. It was a season of frosts and clear blue skies, with little rain-fall. A gentleman who has lived in the West said that it was typical Montana weather. That every year that section experiences weeks of such sunshiny days and cold nights. It has been a long time since West Virginia had such a fall season.

The contractors on the public works in this county did not miss a single day in over two months. The rains we had fell at night or on Sunday. Most of the laborers would have stopped for the holidays anyway, though the contractors moved heaven and earth trying to keep them here. But if they had remained it would have been impossible to have done any work. The snow covers the right of way, hiding all signs that the work has recently been done.

There is more ice in the county than ever we remember seeing. Forty or fifty years since there came a winter when the Greenbrier froze so solidly that it was used as a highway. Owing to the lowness of its tide the river is frozen so that it would be good sleighing on the ice.

There is an old saying which is true in a general way, that if there is a break up in the ice before Christmas there will be three that winter. Otherwise there will will be but one. If the flood comes suddenly there will be a great breakup this year. In addition to the vast amount of ice formed on the river there a lot of logs, cut in clearing the right of way for the railroad, lying in the bed of the river. Altogether we may expect a notable breakup.

We have not had a flood since last spring. When the railroad [illegible] Marlinton in August they hauled some logs in the bed of Knapps Creek, [illegible]

Unpopular Army Officers.

"Whether young Major Logan was shot by his own men is a question that will probably never be settled," said a Confederate veteran last evening; "but it is an undeniable fact that things of that kind do sometimes happen in battle. During the Civil War such incidents were by no means unknown on either side. They were kept from the public as much as possible, but were none the less notorious in the armies. It is a very dangerous thing for a company officer to incur the hatred of his men, because he is generally mixed up with the line during the engagement, and can be picked off without much trouble.

"During the second year of the war I was a first lieutenant in an Alabama regiment, and the captain of my company, who was a good soldier but a man of ungovernable temper, had managed to make himself very unpopular with the rank and file. One day a corporal, who was a fine fellow and universally liked in the company, made some trifling blunder in carrying out an order, and the captain as usual turned loose. He gave the poor fellow a most unmerciful public 'cussing, and ordered him under arrest until he could think up some unusual and humiliating punishment. Just then our kindly old colonel happened along, heard the story, and called the captain to his tent. When the latter came out he was the most subdued and thoughtful individual I ever saw, and he immediately ordered the corporal released.

"Later on he told me the substance of their conversation. 'You are fixing to get killed in our very next engagement,' the colonel said and then went on to relate how he himself had been severely wounded by one of his own men during the Mexican War, all on account of unnecessary severities. 'It isn't [illegible] a life long lesson,' he said, earnestly, 'and I want you to profit by my experience.' From that day on the captain was a changed man and eventually the soldiers became devoted to him. He was finally killed, poor fellow, but by a Yankee bullet. I have purposely refrained from mentioning any names, but several Alabama veterans now living in this city remember the incident."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The students whose homes are in the Levels who returned to spend Christmas are: F. R. Hill, John Sydenstricker, Paul Smith; Misses Bessie Edgar, Marigold McNeel, Pearl Beard, and Ena Stulting.

Lee Simms' house on Beaver Creek, near Huntersville, was burned one night last week. He succeeded in saving a portion of his furniture. The fire was caused by a live coal which was in some ashes which had been taken from the stove and left near the house.

With each dozen order of our $3.50 photographs and 99c additional, we will give a life size crayon portrait—16x20. This is a holiday offer and will be good for 30 days from this date. Don't miss it.

PEERLESS ART GALLERY.
December 20, 1899.

One of the very useful things for a housekeeper to know is to keep on hand a package of plaster of Paris. It can be made useful in mending broken chinaware. Mixed with the white of an egg an excellent cement is made. Apply to one side of the fracture and join the edges quickly. This cement is strong, and when the ware is white it does not show.

A meeting of the securities of J. C. Arbogast on his school bond was held at the court-house last Tuesday. We are authorized to say to the school draft holders that the money to pay them in full will be paid to the receivers appointed for that purpose by January 17, 1900. The receivers will immediately disburse the amount to those entitled to receive it.

A party of young people from Buckeye came up the river as far as Marlinton on skates and returned Monday. Those composing the party were Misses Anna Silva, Lena Duncan, Myrtle Silva, Nora Overholt, Winnie Buckley; John B Buckley, Harper Adkison, Lete Young, Charles Young, Park McNeill, Jay Buckley, Job Buckley, D. P. Barnes, George Lightner, and Elmer Duncan.

Five miles of track has been laid on the Greenbrier Railway. The work will progress steadily, it is thought, until the road is done. As the lower end is completed the labor will fall back and find employment on the sections remaining unfinished, so that the work will progress more rapidly as it nears the end. A man connected with the railroad, and who is in a position to judge, said last week that trains would be running into Marlinton by June 1st. If this be the case the whole line will be completed next year.

By common consent the grippe is spoken of as one of the most [illegible] that has ever befallen afflicted humanity. Among the remedies that have been used the following is recommended as one of the simplest, and very efficacious when used in time. The recipe is as follows: Take 40 grains or a half teaspoonful of bicarbonate of potash, [illegible] which is the same thing [illegible] baking soda [illegible] in a cupful of milk. This [illegible] repeated every two [illegible] hours until relief is secured, which will seldom require over twenty-four hours.

Against the Pulp Mill.

The following dispatch to the Baltimore Sun shows that Cumberland is not taking its defeat very quietly.

A decidedly animated citizen's meeting was held in the Council chamber to-night (Cumberland, December 28) to discuss the verdict of acquittal in the pulp mill case. It was decided to form a league to make an organized fight against the alleged pollution of the Potomac river. General Joseph Sprigg, who was chairman, said he believed in appeals to Congress and to the Maryland Legislature. He suggested trying to have a statute passed prohibiting the introduction or testimony with regard to other pollutions.

A committee on resolutions was appointed, consisting of Robert Schriver, president of the Council; J. W. S. Cochrane, Sigmund Tanner, George P. Hart, ex-Justice J. B. Widener, Samuel D. Young, C. C. Hedges, William P. Riser, William C. Devecmon, and Justice R. Morris. Upon advice of this committee it was decided to meet again Saturday to formulate definite plans.

Dr Hervey Lane suggested the formation of a league to fight for pure water, in which Rabbi J. L. Stern concurred, and a motion prevailed that the secretaries gather names for membership in such a league. J. Semmes Devecmon said he proposed to get a shot at the pulp mill himself tomorrow, when he would swear out three warrents against them. Mr David J. Lewis emphasized the necessity of spending money in fighting the issue. He said he was willing to have his own taxes doubled. Ex-Councilman Isaac Hirsch said a leader was necessary and Mr Cochrane declared strongly for a permanent league. Mr J. Semmes Devecmon, who is a member of the Cumberland bar, went to Luke yesterday to obtain a sample of river water at the pulp mill. He waded toward the Maryland shore, and says he was interrupted by a dozen men, who told him he could n't get any water there, and taking him by the arm conducted him to the office of the pulp mill. He wanted to know by what authority he was arrested and the reply was: "By the company's authority." Mr Devecmon says he was taken before Mr Luke, who told him he was or private property.

W. A. Bratton Fights Fire

W. A. Bratton, attorney-at-law, saved his house from burning last Sunday, but was himself badly burned in the effort. His parlor had been profusely decorated for Christmas with paper festooning, bunting and evergreens. He was sitting in the room Sunday afternoon about 3 o'clock, reading a Pearson's, when the decorations caught fire. In a few moments the whole room was blazing.

He pulled the light inflammable stuff down, throwing some of it out of the window and putting the rest in the stove. The alarm of fire was given and several neighbors rushed in and succeeded in putting out the flames. The entire interior of the room was damaged, the piano, carpet, pictures, couch, etc., being badly burned. Mrs Bratton lost the greater part of a valuable lot of sheet music.

When the excitement was over to some extent Mr Bratton noticed that his hands were terribly burned. At one time it was thought that he might lose some of his fingers but it is thought that with care he will recover the use of both hands. He will be confined to his room however for sometime to come.

The loss to his personal effects is fully covered by an insurance policy which expires this month.

Wm. T. Beard Seriously Hurt.

Wm. T. Beard, one of the best known citizens of the county, is lying at his home near Mill Point in a very precarious condition. Last Friday afternoon the hands on his place were engaged in harvesting ice, and thinking that they might not be in until late he started to the barn to do some feeding.

He came back to the house in a few minutes and has been in a helpless state since, not able to give a clear idea of how he came to be hurt. It is supposed that he started to climb a ladder to the mow and fell back on the frozen ground.

Mr Beard is 73 years of age and has been in delicate health for some time.

General Shryock's Response.

At the banquet of the Baltimore Traveling Men, General Shryock, of the St. Lawrence Boom and Manufacturing Company responded to the toast: "The State of Maryland."

General Shryock was introduced by the toastmaster as one who had shown that "in the State of Maryland a man could be a gentleman and a politician at the same time," a sentiment which brought forth tumultuous applause, especially since Mr Lerch had previously said that General Shryock had tried to be a commercial traveler when he started out in his business career, but that he failed because on his very first trip he took the wrong train and got a hundred miles in the wrong direction before he found it out.

"GENTLEMAN AND POLITICIAN."

"I have always had some idea," said General Shryock, "that I was a gentleman, but I think it has been demonstrated quite recently that I am a pretty poor politician. (Applause and laughter.) I have during the last four years tried to do many things for Governor Lownes, and I tried to do something for him during the last State campaign. I would not be surprised if he were sorry that I had ever undertaken the job. Once upon a time I believed that there was a chance for me some day to respond to this toast with real right, but that dream has since gone glimmering. The trouble with me is, I guess, that I have stuck to one party too long. [Laughter.]

"The traveling man should always be a thinking man. He should not be led astray by any hurrah or any partisan feeling. His is a great and influential power to wield, and he should wield it in the right direction. Take the question of trusts, for instance. I regret to say that it seems likely that this important question is about to be made a subject of partisan debate. I am not much of a partisan in a matter which concerns 70,000,000 of people. The settlement of the trust question will demand the best minds of all parties, and the commercial travelers, who are so vitally interested in the matter, can do much toward bringing it to a satisfactory settlement.

Serious Accident.

John Shrader, a teamster at Wm. Irvine's Camp on Knapps Creek, was found last Monday morning lying insensible with a fractured skull on the slide near his team. He had started to work about 5 a. m., and it is supposed he had been lying an hour before he was found. Dr Lockridge attended him. It is supposed that he was struck by the trail bar.

He is a young married man about 33 years old. He is a son of Luther Shrader, of Davis.

Accidental Shooting.

Last Thursday evening Sherman Curry of Frost was accidentally shot by C. C. Sharp with a breech-loader shotgun and No. 6 shot. They were out rabbit hunting about a quarter of a mile from Curry's home; Curry was walking about twenty feet in front when the gun went off, shooting him through the left side not entering the abdominal cavity. Medical aid was rendered at once by Dr Lockridge, and he is improving rapidly.

From Colorado.

G. W. Duffield, of Niwot, Colo., sends us a dollar for a year's subscription to The Times, and writes:

"By the kindness of my sister, Mrs Auldridge of Tipton, Iowa, I came in possession of 3 copies of your excellent paper. I got so much news of the country that I was well acquainted with 40 years ago, and saw the names of old friends and acquaintances of that country, it made me wish I was back among them."

Railroad Extension.

A dispatch from Elkins to the Baltimore Sun says that the contracts will be let this month for an extension of the West Virginia Central Railroad from Huttonsville to the Forks of the Greenbrier. This proposed extension includes two tunnels.

Rocking the Cradle.

J. Delaughter, Sparkman, Ark., says: For the past fifteen years I have consulted physicians and used patent medicines, but Ramon's Liver Pills and Tonic Pellets excelled them all. I could get no relief from constipation, and after using one box I was as sound as a dollar. After telling a number of my good friends, they tried the medicine and were cured, and now we are rocking the cradle of life away in perfect health and enjoyment. My advice to all, is never be [illegible] without a box of Ramon's Pills.

GREEN BANK.

C. L. Barner, C. P. C., was in town Monday.

The thermometer registered 18 below last Sunday morning.

J. H. Curry was on the sick-list last week.

Mrs Caroline Nottingham is visiting Mrs J. H. Curry at this time.

Norley Burner and James Burner of Durbin were in town Friday.

Ed Jackson, Charles, Bland and Lawrence Nottingham were up from the Frost camp for Christmas.

William M. Sipple turned a summersault and lit on his whiskers—Its a girl!

Harrison Sheets and Willie E. Arbogast are on the sick-list threatened with pneumonia.

F. H. Warwick was home from camp Christmas and returned last Tuesday.

Did you ever see a spider weaving as cold a day as last Sunday? I saw one, and I wondered if it was a sign of warm weather. Lets see?

Mrs J. P. Wooddell gave a social dance on last Thursday night, which was enjoyed by those present until near morning.

W. A. Eskridge has finished painting the church here, and he has done a first-class job. We recommend him as a fine painter.

We are having some very cold weather at this time with about 6 inches of snow, and the jingle of the sleighbells is heard in the land.

P. D. Yeager of Travelers Repose was in this vicinity last week a few days wanting to buy cattle. He bought some nice yearlings from C. A. Lightner.

Christmas in Green Bank was very quiet. Not even a firecracker was heard on the streets. One boy had eaten a frozen apple, but it did no harm. Only run his horse and holler a time or two.

The Christmas tree at Arbovale was very pretty and well supplied with presents, but whiskey spoiled the enjoyment of many of those good wives and mothers. What a shame, boys!

Owing to the cold weather there was not a large turnout to the festival, but a nice sum was realized for which the members of the Society present wish to thank the people for their generous liberality. The society has painted the church nicely, and all paid for; and they think of covering it and papering the inside in the near future. They deserve great credit for their work, and we wish them success and hope the community will give their aid in so good a cause.

SUNBEAM.

EDRAY.

The holidays have passed off and they used us as we used them.

Asa Barlow has moved into his new house on the banks of the Big Spring among the sugar trees.

Henry Barlow was called out to Marlinton last Friday on business and has not been very well since.

Prof Barlow is preparing to boom the Big Spring. He is erecting a plainer just below Grandpap McLaughlin's grist mill.

George P. Moore figured prominently in erecting a telephone line from Edray to Clover Lick. The line is in good working order.

George Baxter, our County Surveyor, wrapped up well and started out yesterday on a surveying expedition.

Samuel Moore and wife, of Alleghany, visited Mrs Moore's relatives during holidays.

Elmer Moore was at home from the Buchannon school, and came to Edray last week, so Dame Rumor said, to see his girl.

There was a gathering at Rankin Pouge's Saturday. The occasion was said to have been interesting and passed off pleasantly.

A. J. Smith passed the sixty-first mile stone of his life last Friday and called in some of his friends to have a social time with him.

Our people are enjoying the sleighing as well as they can, notwithstanding the cold and stormy weather we are having. The thermometer was ten degrees below zero Sunday morning. According to Irl R. Hicks we may look for colder weather still this week.

We wish the readers of The Times a happy new year. That they may enjoy the blessings of this life and live in readiness for whatever may come. So if they are called to quit this life in an unexpected moment they may be ready to go, "To clap the glad wing and soar away to mingle with the blaze of day." Truly, A. M.

Wanted—A good girl to do general house work in small family. Wages $1.25 per week. D. W. [illegible], Bath County, Va.

LOBELIA.

Christmas passed very quietly in this section.

P. Henry is on the sick-list and has been for two or three weeks.

Cold and frosty now, thermometer ranging from 10 above to 10 below zero.

W. B. Hill and family returned from Loverage yesterday after a few days visiting his sister.

The boys are fixing for fox-chasing as soon as the hounds can stand the cold.

Miss Annie Sullivan has returned to Missouri after a long stay with her relations.

Peter Hill of Jacox has captured ten foxes this season, all trapped by himself, 5 reds and 5 greys.

There have been on the roads across the creeks from here to Loverage free bridges the past week, and they are of great benefit to the public.

Prof A. L. Anderson of Alderson is in our midst at this time. He makes us feel good whether we do or not,—full of life and sport.

There were 40 deer killed on the headwaters of Cranberry, Cherry and Williams rivers this fall. This will set them back below par. The wild turkeys have all left this part.

What is the matter with the newspapers? Mr C. J. Hill of this place was married about two weeks ago to Miss Jennie Hedrick of Blue Sulphur District, Greenbrier county, and we have not heard it mentioned. Yet it is so and we all must join and wi[sh] him much happiness and success and prosperity. He deserves all that can be bestowed on him as he is one of the best citizens in our county.

More anon. OBSERVER.

Spanish shepherds, ranking among the best in the world, have a saying, "the sheep has a golden hoof." It is the opinion of some flock-masters that sheep will restore the worst of worn-out ranges to a better condition than the original fertility. While the stones may remain, yet if bushes are cut sheep can prevent their growth again; briars and blackberry bushes when mowed will soon disappear from the soil, along with most of the noxious weeds. Nutritive grasses will appear in their places, and farmers will soon realize the significance of the Spanish proverb referred to above. As long as warm clothieg will be needed wool will be essential to human comfort and sheep must be reared, and experience shows that when sheep are properly cared for they make better returns for the care given and the money invested than any other live stock that can be handled in our county.

In writing the new date a singular sensation is experienced. It seems strange to cease 18 and substitute 19 for the next hundred years. Before the time comes to displace 19 and write 20, it is strange to think that few or none of the living will be here. These lines so aptly come to mind that we repeat them as fitly spoken and appropriate:

We all within our graves shall sleep
A hundred years to come.
No living soul for us will weep
A hundred years to come.
But other men our land will till
And other men our streets will fill,
And other birds will sing as gay,
As bright the sunshine as to-day,
A hundred years to come.

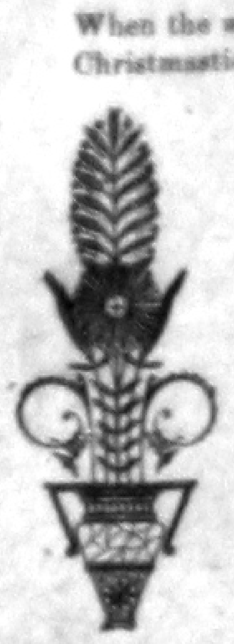
DON'T TALK MERCHANDISE

When the world is rejoicing over the return of another Christmastide!



It is a pleasure for me to look over the increase of business which my friends and customers have given me in 1899—the greatest volume of business I have ever enjoyed. With the beginning of the year 1900 we will make special efforts to keep prices down and style up. Dealing with the Golden Store means more than simply low prices—it means strictly high grade goods—it means satisfaction.

My line of underwear for cold weather is of good quality and as cheap as a gold dollar for 75c.

The little darling has also been provided for with little winter vests in wool and cotton from 12½ to 35c a garment.

YOURS AS EVER,

PAUL GOLDEN.

CIGAR LABELS.

They Do Not Indicate the Quality of the Goods.

There is much difference between a "brand" of cigars and a "label." "A good brand" is very often taken to mean "a good quality." Very likely that was the original intention of cigar brands, as it still is of whiskey brands. But by the actual present custom of the trade the name which is burned or branded on the wood of the cigar box—the "brand" properly so called—has no necessary connection with the quality of the cigar, but only accidentally, so far as some particular make, peculiar to one factory, may be for the time exclusively applied to the manufacture of good tobacco. The "brand" tells the cigar seller something about the size and shape of the cigar. As years go on the application of these brands becomes more and more loose and irregular. Until recent years there used to be a regular gradation of size in about this order, beginning with the largest: (1) Perfecto, (2) Puritano, (3) Concha, and (4) Conchita. Even this arrangement was not by any means the earliest. "Regalia" was known to the trade as a designation of large size long before anybody ever heard of "Perfecto." "Henry Clay" was once a brand indicative of both size and quality, a brand and a label in one, when the cigar was made in only one Havana factory. And later results of competition, as well as of Cuban disturbances, are seen in the actually prevailing scale of brands. As brand differs from brand in shape as well as in length, it would take much complicated mathematical research to place the brands in the exact order of the volume of tobacco indicated by each.

Roughly speaking, however, they run, beginning with the largest, as follows: (1) Perfecto Elegante, (2) Perfecto Fino, (3) Puritano Fino—a thick cigar; (4) Puritano Extra, (5) Breva—thick and blunt; (6) Breva Chica, (7) Concha Regalia, (8) Concha Especial, (9) Conchita, (10) Reina Fina, (11) Petit Duc, (12) Opera, and (13) Chiquita.

About all this matter of brands nothing is so certain as that the whole business is in a shifting and revolutionary condition. Thus, the Panetela, not mentioned above, would be placed by some after the Perfecto, because it is about as long, and by others after the Concha, because it is thinner. It was much easier to maintain a hard and fast rule when the whole cigar making industry was ostensibly confined to Havana, and all cigars, even if made elsewhere, had to pretend to Havana origin and conform to Havana customs in order to maintain the illusion.

It is curious to note, however, that factories all over the world still stick to Spanish words and traditions in branding and labelling their output. If a Rhode Island cigarmaker wishes to say that this box is something really uncommonly fine he marks it "Deliciosos." The colors of Spain still rule in the ribbons that tie the bundles of cigars—yellow and red, the latter very rare. When Cuba has become Americanized red, white and blue ribbons may make their appearance in cigar boxes, but that sign of the times has not yet been observed.—N. Y. Tribune.

Canada's Greatest Glory.

The greatest glory of Canada is not its modern progress, but its vast and ancient wilderness. If you weary of the sameness and unprofitableness of everything you know, go where I went last year, to the upper waters of the Ottawa, where the beaver is the master architect and the moose is king of the woods. See for yourself, as I saw, that the Ottawa and the Gatineau, appearing to come from widely distant regions, have their origin close together and are twins. Behold these two children of the lakes, nourished from the same generous breast. Trace their courses and see that, though journeying far, in widely different directions, they finally arrive at a common destination.

Nobody knows all about that headwater country around the sources of the Ottawa. It is a prolific game region, where sportsmen rarely go, for the simple reason that they can get all the hunting they want nearer to the railroad. There are plenty of deer close to almost any Canadian Pacific station west of Pembroke, and it is not much trouble to get a chance at a moose in two days from Deux Rivieres, Rockcliffe, or Mattawa. Not many hunting parties start from there either, and I suppose the reason is that for thousands of miles to the west the woods, prairies, and mountains lie close to the railroad and afford almost limitless opportunities.

The territory inclosed by the Ottawa and the Gatineau has been from immemorial times the home of the Algonquin Indians, and they still remain there, in such primitive innocence that they receive no annuity from the Dominion Government. In this they are unlike the Indians of the United States or their brother tribes of Canada.—Scribner's.

Decision Against Tugboat Marriages.

Judge Dougherty, of Santa Rosa, Cal., has rendered a decision in the case of Bonham vs. Bonham, recently brought to annul a marriage contracted on board a pleasure schooner outside San Francisco Heads. The Court declares that weddings taking place at sea in contravention of the statutes or by contract, or under any circumstances without a proper license and some form of public solemnization are clearly illegal.

The Court further holds that children resulting from such unions, where contracted since March 26, 1895, when the statutes governing such cases were changed by the Legislature, are without doubt illegitimate. Plaintiff and defendant in the case at bar were married by a sea captain on Aug. 11, 1896, but Bonham having acknowledged the paternity of a child born to him the Court holds that it becomes the plaintiff's legitimate and adopted son.

A newspaper is an educator; there are all kinds of educators, but the man who spends money judiciously and liberally is better able to impart his knowledge than the man who has little or nothing to spend.

THE SUN is the highest type of a newspaper.

THE SUN'S reports from all parts of the United States are unsurpassed.

THE SUN'S Cable Service is the finest known; the troubles in the Philippines and in South Africa demand competent correspondents and vast expenditure of money and labor in getting the news. When you get THE SUN you get news and intelligent presentation of facts with it, as well as carefully prepared articles of editorial writers of highest standing. When you get a daily paper, whose principal recommendation is its cheapness, you get the dregs—generally very poor dregs at that.

Virginia University,

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in th e country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Preparatory Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

TO CELIA.

Drink to me only with thine eyes,
And I will pledge with mine;
Or leave a kiss but in the cup,
And I'll not look for wine.
The thirst that from the soul doth rise,
Doth ask a drink divine;
But might I of Jove's nectar sup,
I would not change for thine.

I sent thee late a rosy wreath,
Not so much honouring thee,
As giving it a hope that there
It could not withered be.
But thou thereon didst only breathe,
And sent'st it back to me;
Since when, it grows, and smells, I swear,
Not of itself, but thee.

County Sketches

Sequel to

A Bargain in Real Estate.

If poor old Stephen Bradford, who was so hard pressed to make both ends meet and buy a piece of land each year to add to the thousands he owned already, could have known Miss Ainslee, the free school teacher, better, he might not have been so opposed to his son Gabe marrying her. Miss Ainslee was teaching her second term at the Cedar Hill School-house to the satisfaction of all the patrons. She was the bright, pretty daughter of a preacher, whose home was in a Virginia town.

She had experienced the hardest kind of poverty—the trying to keep up appearances on inadequate means—but the Cedar Hill neighborhood could not realize this, for she was better dressed than those who were well off. Her good taste and skill with the needle accounted for this, and while she was but twenty-two she had managed her father's and her own resources so that he had a piece of ground and a house of his own, where the family could live and be in a measure independent of the Church,—that institution so grand to live for, and so bad to live by. If old man Stephen had but known it he would have found a kindred spirit in Miss Ainslee.

Gabe had fallen in love with the school teacher after the manner of men, and Mamie, after the manner of women, had considered the pros and cons and decided to return his affection. But even after Gabe had wooed and won her—and that is no slight task according to the rules and regulations laid down by these latter day angels, his father's consent was lacking.

Gabe had taken her to see his folks one day, and the poor little girl knowing that she was going to see the richest people of the countryside, put on her most fetching dress and her most graceful pose, and was ushered into the room where an old man sat on one side of the fireplace mending a set of harness, and a old lady on the other side darning socks.

Miss Mamie realized that the visit was a failure, especially as far as the old man was concerned. He got out of the room as soon as he could and went to town and was seen no more that day.

As Mrs Bradford did not need any winning, going it blind as she always did on the side of Gabe, nothing was accomplished by the interview.

Matters had been drifting along for a year or so without any definite results. If Gabe but hinted at the fact that it was time he was marrying and settling down his father would treat it as a good joke and ask if he thought he could make a living on his 20,000 acre survey for two. A year before he had walked into a trap and bought the 20,000 acres for the taxes.

He concluded that he would play his trump card, and if that failed he would marry the girl any way and risk it. So he waited for a suitable time and asked his father point-blank if he would marry Mamie Ainslee and bring her home, and his father had told him plainly that he would not marry her or any other high falutin' woman. Things had come to a pretty pass when a Bradford had to go away from home to get married.

Then it was that Gabe fished out a single threat and said that he would go West. Now his father had been considering in anticipation this direful threat and had come to the conclusion that that was no bad way to break off a match which was distasteful to him, and so he very calmly inquired:

"How fur West did you 'low to go?"

Gabe had shot his bolt but managed to say to this unexpected question that he was "Thinking some of going to Montana."

His father frowned and remarked:

"Gabe, your old dad has called your little bluff. Your ma and me would n't mind your pickin' your own wife of you had a leetle more management about you. You aint fit to be trusted, you aint; and your only chance is to git the right kind of a woman, and we don't believe that that school teacher would suit this family."

"When did I ever have a chance to show I could n't be trusted? You have treated me like a child all my life, father."

"There was a small matter of 20,000 acres of land"—

"What can I do to make you forget that, father?".

"Why, if you was to make your money outen it would dull the mem'ry some," replied the old man.

"And do as I pleased about every thing too, I suppose?" asked Gabe scornfully.

"Yes, your ma and me kin safely promise that," said the old man; and this interview being reported to the young lady by Gabe they shared each other's sorrow.

Now a short time after Mamie's visit to the old folks, she was in the kitchen of the house where she boarded, making herself useful to the lady of the house, when a wail came from upstairs from the six year old son of the house, Jim-Dent: "Ma, I want to get up!"

"All right, dearie, in a few minutes."

"Why can't he get up?" asked the school teacher.

"I have to patch his pants," said his mother but Miss Mamie was patching them in short order, for she had not been the eldest daughter in a large family for nothing, and if her prospective father-in-law had seen the skill with which she made a large, invisible patch on the little breeches he might have been won out of hand; and it was thus she had a talk with Mrs Dent.

"How did you like Pa Bradford?"

"I don't know anyone of that name," blushingly replied Mamie. But he was identified, and Mrs Dent told her how unbending old Bradford was, and how he had never spoken to or had anything to do with his youngest sister who married against his will, and there grew in Miss Ainslee's mind a determination not to break up the Bradford family. This being conveyed to Gabe made him more desperately in love than ever.

But things were about to take a turn. In a city on the other side of the State the magnates of the Hillside Lumber Company were about to make an advantageous sale of their 20,000 acre tract which they had won from Samuel Stringer. The purchaser was a New York millionaire and his legal representative had just returned from Wauchope County, where he had thoroughly investigated the title of the 20,000 acres.

"Gentlemen," he was saying, "I am sorry to tell you that I do not like the looks of your title to this tract. That Stringer claim is dangerous and always will be dangerous."

"But that matter is adjudicated," said the President of the Company.

"Not exactly," said the lawyer. "A test case was made of the 100 acre tract adjoining the big tract and involving the same question. The suit could be brought on the 20,000 acres any day, and another court may look upon that question of possession very differently."

Then Haskins, the Wauchope County lawyer who was present as counsel for the lumber company, said: "If we were to secure the Stringer title as well as our own would that satisfy you?" And the lawyer said that it would.

About one year and one month after the sale of delinquent lands heretofore mentioned, when Gabe Bradford had bought in his 20,000 acre tract, Haskins saw Gabe on the street and called to him to come into his office. Gabe hated the lawyer as the source of the most of the trouble he had ever experienced, and was very loath to comply.

After some fencing around the bush the lawyer said he wanted to redeem the 20,000 acres; but Gabe, to whom was vouchsafed the one and only gleam of business sense he has ever experienced, asked Haskins $5000 for his title and stuck to it for several days and got it. He had been substituted to all the rights that Stringer ever had and he made the sale.

When he laid the $5000 down at his father's feet he could have married a butterfly of fashion and not been rebuked. As it was he married his sweetheart, who soon became a favorite with her father-in-law. They talk over the heads of Gabe and his mother; but whenever Gabe is hard pressed he can remind his father of the deal he made in real estate.

THE PEACE CONFERENCE.

All right thinking persons who have respect for both the form and power of Christian godliness are humiliated by the stupendous farce played off at The Hague.

There was America in one of the chief seats of the peace promoting synagogue. England on another, if anything higher. America, with a war that may be classified under many names on hand, would favor no interference practical or sentimental, but at the same time her trusted representatives were more than willing for an agreement securing from danger through foreign complication, with the reservation that America should hold a free hand in western world affairs.

During the conference Great Britain seemed to have nothing in hand except some police duty in Soudan, and so there was no war to embarrass the situation. Nevertheless, as the event has shown, there were plans for territorial expansion in Africa in process of maturing. The Boer Republic,—good, peace-loving, Christian people tho they were, yet they had no invitation to the love-feast of the nations such as they could accept with due self respect.

It is pleasant to read the proceedings, for the gathering was very agreeable. Much was said in a very taking way of the beneficial results of a peace universal; yet these broad-minded, well paid delegates merely comforted the lovers of peace with nothing but words, while all the time any and all obligations were carefully excluded, that were essential to the realization of universal peace.

Victor Hugo gives his idea of what tact or common sense will do by this fable: "Who is stronger than thou?" asked Brahma, and Force replied, "Address." Bovel remarks that, "Address or tact makes opportunities, but the want of tact gives them." Eliza Cook expresses herself about the tactful person in this couplet:

"He'll suit his bearing to the hour, Laugh, listen, learn or teach."

And the genial Dr Holmes puts in his opinion in this wise:

"Tact clinches the bargain,
Sails out of the bay,
Get's the vote in the Senate,
Spite of Webster or Clay."

Among the phenomenal reports of at the expense of an absent minded person is one told of Lessing, one of the intellectual celebrities of his century. [illegible]

SCOTS FLED FROM BOERS.

Awful Fire, at Magersfontein, Was More than Highlanders Could Stand.

The most appalling battle picture, from a British point of view, yet painted by a correspondent in the field comes by mail from J. B. Whigman, the representative of the London Morning Post with Lord Methuen's column. It shows the collapse of the Highland Brigade at Magersfontein. Describing the effect of the unexpected Boer fire when the Brigade was just about deploying from quarter column, he write:

"Some one shouted 'Retire!' and the day was lost. The Highlanders broke and ran—there is no other word for it.

"In a few minutes the brigade had been decimated, and the issue decided.

"They did not run far, only a few hundred yards, but when they rallied they were shaken and confused for hours. They lay flat on the ground between the British and the Boer trenches.

Highlanders in Flight.

"About 2 o'clock the Boer rifle fire greatly increased. Simultaneously the brigade was seen in full retreat. Back they came in a wave. No officer could stop it. It was perhaps the most unpleasant sight the British soldier has ever beheld; certainly a sight never to be forgotten.

"It is difficult to say what happened next until Major Ewart rode up with an order from General Methuen, which was almost an entreaty, to the effect that all he asked of the brigade was to hold the position until dark. So riddled and scattered was the brigade that Ewart actually had no other officer to help him give the order to the scattered men. It was no small thing to ask of the Highlanders that they should again face the galling fire for five mortal hours.

"Still a very fair rally was effected. The pipers played somewhat dolefully and the brigade got back to a spot where it had a certain amount of cover.

"There the men lay until Boer guns, until then absolutely silent, suddenly came into play. It wanted but this last straw to break the nerve of the rallying Highlanders. When the first shrapnel burst what remained of the brigade with one accord came right back as far as the field hospital, hopelessly beaten for the day. They were not even fit to guard the baggage. They had lost 57 officers killed or wounded. Could human nature stand more?"

An Indian Tale.

In Ohio many years ago when Indians were troublesome, an excited man galloped up to the log-cabin of the Moore family.

"Get ready for the redskins!" he called out, "and give me a fresh horse as soon as you can. They killed a family down the river last night, and nobody knows where they 'll turn up next!"

"What shall we do?" asked Mrs Moore, becoming very pale. "My husband went away yesterday to buy our winter supplies and will not be back again until morning."

"Husband away? That's bad! Well, shut up tight as you can, cover up your fire, and do n't show a light to-night." Then mounting the horse the boys had brought he galloped away to warn other settlers.

Mrs Moore carried the younger children up the ladder into the loft, leaving Joe and Obed to watch as they insisted upon their mother to do. Seeing several shadows moving across the fields early in the evening, Obed whispers, "They are coming, Joe. Stand by that window with the ax while I get the rifle pointed out of this one."

Upon opening the bullet pouch to take out a ball, Obed nearly fainted when he found it was too large for the rifle; his father having taken the wrong pouch. While Obed was feeling around to see if there was any smaller balls in the cupboard, he almost stumbled over a large pumpkin, one of the two which he and Joe had been saving to make jack-o-lanterns, when the scout alarmed them. Pulling it out [illegible] candle inside.

"They will sound the war whoop in a minute if I give them time," Obed whispered as he raised the covered lantern to the window. "Now for it," he remarked upon pulling the coat away.

The Indians uttered a terrible yell when they saw the grinning monster and fled pell mell to the woods. "Quck, Joe! Light up the other one. Don't you see that it was what scart them so?" demanded Obed. At the appearance of the second fiery face the Indians gave a final yell and vanished in the forest. Mr Moore and daylight came together but the Indians were gone for good.

A LACK OF GUMPTION.

There have been people in this world, and possibly some of the breed is still left, who show their lack of gumption by resenting every slight and petty insult, however unworthy it might be of their notice. Others make Don Quixote's mistake of fighting a windmill by engaging in controversies with public speakers and editors who always have the advantage of having the final word. One of the most marked elements of strength in the character of Washington consisted in the forbearance when he was unjustly attacked or ridiculed. Artemas Ward, the noted humorist, punctured the bubble some people call sense of honor with a sharp pointed pen when he wrote this squib:

"It was in a sertin town in Virginy, the Mother of Presidents and things, that I was shamefully abused by a editor in human form. He set my show up steep and called me the urbane and gentlemanly manager, but when I for the purpose of showen fair play all round went to another offis to get my handbills printed what does this pussillanermus editor do but change his tune and abuse me like a injun. He sed my wax works was a humbug, and called me a horey-heded itinerant vagabone. I thort at fust Ide polish him orf ar lar Beneki Boy, but on reflectin that he could polish me much wuss in his paper I giv it up; and I would here take occashun to advise people wh n they run agin, as sometimes they will, these miserable papers, to pay no attenshun to 'um. Abuv all don't assault a editor of this kind. It only him notoriety which is just what he wants, and don't do you no more good than it would to jump into any other mud hole. Editors are generally fine men, but there must be black sheep in every flock."

The Supervision of Banks.

The New York Sun is constantly harping on the necessity of preserving the credit of the nation by gold standard legislation, as the that was the one and only thing need. But it prints the following letter from a correspondent which explains itself:

"While smoking my after-dinner cigar I read in the columns of The Sun the following under the head of 'The Currency,' an editorial: 'The National Bank act should be repealed and the supervision of banking restored to the States.'

"The State banking system is the same as the English banking system. It was brought to this country by Robert Morris, the famous financier, during the Revolutionary War in the creation of the Bank of North America in Philadelphia, whose shares now sell at $500, and it has always been one of the best fiscal institutions in this country. It was formerly a State bank, but is now a national bank, owing to the 10 per cent tax on State bank notes.

"It is more in accordance with the business of the country [illegible] with our constitutional laws [illegible] the banks to be regulated by the State governments. [illegible]

MARLINTON, THURS. JAN. 18, 1900.

Entered at the post-office at Marlinton, W. Va., as second class matter.

COUNTY POLITICS.

The outlook for a Sheriff is brighter. During the past week two very good men have appeared on the horizon, either of whom would fill the office admirably. They are Uriah Bird of Marlinton and George W. Callison of Academy. Their friends are urging them to enter the race. A factor in the sheriffolty fight always to be counted upon is the deputies. While they are appointive officers yet the sections they serve usually depend solely upon them and do not see the high sheriff during his entire term. If the deputy's plays a part in the campaign this year Samuel Sheets, the present deputy of the upper end, will add great strength to the head of his ticket. A deputy is not eligible for sheriff, but he can be a deputy indefinitely. The office suits Mr. Sheets. During the past term his promptness and efficiency have been noted and favorably commented upon, and he will probably have his choice as to the head of his ticket.

S. B. Hannah of Green Bank has been talked of as a candidate, but we do not know whether he has any idea of offering himself. He is one of our foremost citizens.

Colonel Levi Gay, twice sheriff of this county, and who is as good in figures and the handling of public money as any man we ever knew, said that he was not in the race,—adding that he was too old. We were not greatly impressed with his age, but it set us thinking that was the first time we had ever heard of a man being too old to be sheriff of this county.

All the sheriffs we have had since the reconstruction days have been men of middle age, at least,—a good many of them grave and reverend seigniors who had arrived at the age when they find more joy in sitting by their firesides than in the hard work entailed by this office. Some day the young men will combine and elect one of their number sheriff, and give their fathers a rest. Men like Davis Barlow of Edray, or John Andrew Moore of Knapp's Creek, would make as good sheriffs now as when mellowed by age.

A gentlemen (from the upper end of the county, by the way,) said that if they could get nobody else to run, and the people would volunteer to go on his bond, and do numerous other things, he would not mind accepting the place.

It is rumored that Hon. C. E. Beard will not offer for the County Court at the expiration of his term. In fact he is about as tired of serving his country by sitting on the bench as ever was a poorly paid county commissioner. His successor will be chosen from Edray or Levels district. Colonel Gatewood, over at Linwood, would make a good commissioner; or J. S. McNeel in the Levels. J. C. Price, the minority candidate of 1896, will not run this year.

For the State Senate it does not seem probable that Pocahontas will have a man in the field from either party. Senator McNeil has announced the fact that he is not a candidate, and the question of rotation seems to bar Pocahontas from the Democratic nomination. It lies between Monroe and Greenbrier this year. If Marlinton would hurry up and get a saloon and the railroad we might secure the convention to nominate a Senator, for many of the delegates would like to take a trip over the new railroad.

A Card from Attorney H. S. Rucker.

Editors Pocahontas Times,
Marlinton, West Virginia.

GENTLEMEN: In the past few months I have heard so much about my being a poker player, and here recently I have heard that I am fast becoming a drunkard, so I have concluded, (as I can not play the sneak, as most of the parties are who are doing this talk,) I will quit both whiskey and poker, so there cannot even be a pretense for the falsehoods that are being circulated to injure my business.

In future I will never play any game of chance, and will never take a drink of whiskey unless prescribed for me after I am confined to bed.

This statement is not made because I feel that I have injured any one or been injured by either whiskey or poker, but I make it merely as a notice to a few pretenders, and I desire them to heed it.

These same hypocrites whisper around that I played poker with Major Arbogast while he was sheriff,* and that I struck a man by name of Lynch on my office porch, a short time ago, over a game of poker. I never played poker with Major Arbogast in my life, and you all at Marlinton know it. Lynch was drinking and about to get into a row with a young man on the street, and finally got on my porch, cursed and tried to strike me, and I struck him with the poker, which I happened to have in my hand when I went to the door.

Now, you poker players who are doing this talk, either be "pig or pup." Stop playing poker and doing worse, or be open in your actions. Do not try to hide your drunken actions by pretending to condemn me.

And you, unconverted, pretended Christians,—wolf with a fleece on him,—don't think that you can deceive God, if you can fool some men. Don't try to give that receding forehead and chin a reputation for integrity by lying on people with whom you pretend to be on friendly terms. We all know all that keeps you from being a genuine criminal is your fear of retribution,—all that keeps you from being a poker player, your hog disposition; and all that keeps you from being an open drunkard, and all that took you into the church is your innate propensity for deception.

If any of you desire me to particularize, just come to the front with some of your statements.

Very truly,
H. S. RUCKER.

*[Major Arbogast is not a card-player, and never has been, and he has never bet or gamed in any way. Any rumor to that effect does him great injustice.—EDITOR.]

The Importance of By-Products.

"This is the day and date of the by-product," said a cotton seed oil buyer. "Instead of launching into new lines the tendency is to back over the ground and gather what we have wasted. I could name scores of industries that are at present actually paying their running expenses by the utilization of something they used to hire people to carry away.

"The cotton seed oil business is a good illustration of modern economic methods. It is all the development of a few years, comparatively speaking, and to-day the demand for what was formerly a waste material is far ahead of the supply. In 1894, for example, I had 250 oil mills on my list, located within certain boundaries in the cotton belt. At present I have 580 in a considerably smaller territory. Meanwhile the uses to which the seed is applied have been steadily increasing with no signs of reaching a limit. The oil enters into a dozen different food products, and has practically replaced olive oil for table use. Thousands of gallons are exported and come back with Italian labels on the bottles as good or better than the real thing. Every part of the seed is now saved except a few chemical elements of the outer hull that pass away in smoke; in fact we do nearly as well as the Chicago packers, who utilize all of the pig except his squeal.

"'We have just organized a company,' said a Chicago man, 'to take the squeal down on phonographs [illegible] for use in [illegible] pigs.'"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

BEN BOLT.

Oh do you remember sweet Alice, Ben Bolt,
Sweet Alice whose hair was so red,
Who at your caresses would kick like a colt
And shy bric-a-brac at your head?
She captured a ranchman from out in the West
Who came on a chase for a bride,
And in skirting divided and cowboy hat dressed
She rides on a broncho astride.

And do you remember the schoolhouse, Ben Bolt,
With the playground so smooth and so wide,
And the master whose head was beginning to moult,
And whose gad often worried your hide?
The schoolhouse is used as a smokehouse for pork,
The playground looks dirty and bum,
And the master now plays on the streets of New York
On a Salvation Army bass drum.

And do you remember the mill dam, Ben Bolt?
That ran its old mill with its power,
And the corpulent miller we thought such a dolt,
With his clothes dusted over with flour?
The mill is not there by a dam site, I hear,
Though the dam by a mill site remains,
And the miller grows rich raising corn by the ear,
'Way out on the broad Kansas plains.

The changes are many and painful, Ben Bolt,
I cannot recount them all here;
It gave my old heart the worst sort of jolt
To revisit the scenes once so dear.
The men whom I meet are all strangers to me,
Who stare in surprise as I pass,
And the one only face that's familiar I see
When I look in the old looking glass.—Denver Post.

There have been poultry books printed costing fifteen dollars and more, but there never has been one at any price with more beautiful colored reproductions of poultry, than those found in the Biggle Poultry Book, an announcement of which appears in another column. The paintings were made direct from best birds of the different breeds, and the coloring and characteristic shape of each breed are perfect. As for the text, there never was a book printed containing more practical, level-headed information. Its chapters include, Eggs for Hatching, Hatching the Eggs, Care of Chicks With Hens and Brooders, The Successful Care of Incubators, The Farmer's Flock, The Village Hennery; chapters on Breeds on Fattening and Marketing, and Diseases and Remedies, with the old and new school methods of treatment. One man wrote the publishers that "The mottoes, alone, at each chapter heading were worth the cost of the book." Twenty thousand copies of this admirable work have been printed. See advertisement of The Biggle Books in this week's issue of The Times. The price is 50 cents, free by mail; address the publishers, Wilmer Atkinson Co., Philadelphia.

The ice in the river and creek went by last Friday. The first gorge in the creek passed out at noon, takings with it Crogan & Hanchel's cofferdam. The ice in the river commenced to run about dark and ran for five hours. Millions of feet of drift timber passed wit the ice.

The president of the county court wishes us to call attention to the fact that encroaching on the public highways by building fences too near the road cannot be permitted. The county court has received complaints lately that the law being violated in this respect, and it wishes all persons who are to blame to take notice that their fences may have to be set back at their expense. We suppose this notice is given because of the maxim: "A word to the wise is sufficient."

C. Heinick a farmer near Elkins was accidently shot and killed by his dog recently. He was carrying a loaded gun by the muzzle, and his dog came out to meet him and in fawning upon his master struck the trigger and the gun went off, the charge going through Heinick's head, killing him instantly. There is a rule that all persons handling guns should never forget, it may be called the gunner's golden rule: "Never hold or point a gun so that anybody would be hurt if the gun goes off."

THE LAW'S STRONG ARM.

Frank Reed Threw Eleven and Caused Trouble.

Frank Reed, a colored laborer at work at Pitt's Camp No. 1, was arrested last Wednesday night and lodged in jail. He had a hearing before Justice Bird on Thursday.

Mr Hankins, the superintendent of the work, was present and he said that shortly after he had gone to bed Wednesday night he heard two shots from one of the camp buildings and shortly after the sound of some one running to his camp calling on him for protection. He went to the door and found a colored fellow named Jim Peck who said that the prisoner had shot at him twice. Just then Reed came running after him, but when he saw the superintendent he drew his pistol and holding it in his hand retreated to the woods near the camp.

The witness said he considered the shooting serious enough to be investigated by the law, and his foremen and others went into the woods to see if they could arrest Reed. It was bright moonlight and they found him hid in a stump. He pulled out his pistol to hide it in the stump, and the glint of the moonlight on the polished barrel was what revealed his position. The witness said that the prisoner was a tough customer, always had a pistol, was absolutely fearless, and had raised trouble in the camp before.

Reed was perfectly self possessed, and when the Justice asked him if he wished to ask Mr Hankins any questions he answered very promptly, "Yes, sir."

"When you saw me have my gun I was going from you all the time, wasn't I?"

"Yes, you were. If you had ever turned your face around it would have been the last of you."

"You never saw me have a gun anywhere except in camp, did you?"

"No."

The court then asked if he had brought the pistol with him into this county. The darkey said he had but that he had carried it in his grip; that it was against the law to carry a pistol about his person and that he would never think of doing such a thing.

His statement was to the effect that they were all gambling in a shack and he came in and "dey asks me 'was I in,' and I say I was and Jim asks me 'what does I throw,' and I says 'I throws five.' I throwed and los' fifty cents and steps out of de game. I comes back in a little bit an' starts to throw agin an' I wins twenty five cents, an' I says, 'I'm twenty-five wif you, Jim'; and Jim picks up de money an' starts away and I says, 'Jim, give me my money or I'll shoot you!' I throwed eleven, didn't I Hunter? and Hunter said dat if Jim could n't loose he had no business comin, in dere, and den I shot in de floor twice to skeer him."

This was the case against the prisoner, none of the several witnesses being present. It would have to be a pretty serious affair to stop men from work on the railroad to testify in court. Mr Hankins said he did not like to put the county to the expense of boarding the prisoner but he wanted to keep order at his camp.

The justice decided to give him a jail sentence for raising a row, and when he comes out he will receive a polite invitation to leave the county.

Wolf Killed.

The wolf which has been committing depredations to the great loss of the farmers in the upper end of Webster and the edge of Randolph for a number of years, was shot and killed last Monday evening by Stofer Hambrick, a son of Peter Hamrick, Sr. A large number of persons with about a dozen hounds had been chasing the animal for several days, and had fired many shots at it without any effect. When killed the sheep killer was over the Webster line in Randolph, where the County Court had offered a reward of $50 for the scalp. The Webster County Court had offered $100, but no chances could be taken on chasing it back into Webster to be killed, as he was very much like the Irishman's flea. This is thought to be the only wolf left in this part of the country, its mate having been killed a year or two ago. Prob[a]bly as many as fifty sheep and lambs were required to satisfy the animal's hunger each year, and the people feel truly relieved. May they never have any experience with the likes of it again.—Webster Echo.

EDRAY.

We are glad to have our wells [illegible], replenished by the recent thaw.

J. W. Tyler was somewhat indisposed last week, but he is about again.

Mrs William Sharp has been very sick for some time, and is still not very well. Her many friends are very anxious to see her up again.

George P. Tyler has been doing no small amount of shoeing for the railroad men of late. It is needless to say that it was well done.

Our Edray school, taught by Miss J. Ann Smith, will close in five weeks. Some of the little folks will be pleased, while others fond of going to school will be sorry.

John S. Moore stopped on the Elk side of the mountain during the cold and stormy weather, but since the weather has become mild and balmy he comes home at nights.

Dr and Mrs Price have the sympathy of their many friends in the illness of their little son Ward. They are untiring in waiting upon him. We certainly hope he will recover.

W. D. Sharp will close his school in the Normal School building in about six weeks and go to finish out Miss Lucy Baxter's school on Dry Branch, Miss Baxter having engaged another school in the upper end of the county.

J. W. Curry and Lee Carter hauled the preacher two loads of feed for his horse and cow yesterday—Monday. John Young hauled him a load also for a New Year present. He and his family have enjoyed the good fires that wood his kind and good neighbors hauled him just before the real cold and stormy weather of the winter began. God in His love an infinite goodness having replenished the water in the well, and through the good people filled the flour barrel and supplied other necessities, all goes on smoothly and pleasantly at Pinebush. Truly, A. M.

GREEN BANK.

Fine winter weather. A fine rain last week to raise the water.

W. H. Hull filled his ice-house last week with fine ice.

Henry Flenner of Traveller's Repose was trading at the stores in town on day last week.

Reece Pritchard of Dunmore was in town last week.

Dr J. P. Moomau has been quite feeble for some days, but is improving some now.

A. M. Oliver of Wanless, E. M. Arbogast, and Samuel Sheets were in town recently.

John Wooddell of Gillispie and Howard Armstrong were in town Saturday.

A. D. Williams of the engineering corps was in town Saturday.

Mr Ed.: The only remarkable thing about the 21st verse of the 7th chapter of Ezra is, it contains all the alphabet except the letter J.

Samuel Sheets has made us a good deputy sheriff and why not elect him for Sheriff? He has given entire satisfaction and he should have the office. And give us Bratton for Prosecuting Attorney, and H. A. Yeager for House of Delegates; and, well, William B. Wooddell for Assessor, or some other good man.

BILLY BOWLEGS.

Waugh—Friel.

January 10, 1900, at 3 p. m., a very enjoyable society occurrence took place at the home of Joseph N. Friel near Verdant Valley, when Charles Waugh and Sarah Arlena Friel were united in the holy state of matrimony, Rev William T. Price officiating minister. The bridal pair was preceded by Miss Rhoda Waugh as maid of honor, escorted by Charles Friel brother of the bride.

Immediately after the ceremony all present were treated to a bountiful and nicely spread dinner tendered by Mr and Mrs Rudolph Waugh, which was enjoyed by about forty guests, mainly nearest neighbors and relatives.

The groom is a son of Beverly Waugh near Mount Pleasant, and is a much respected young farmer; the bride is the third daughter of J. N. Friel, and is highly esteemed for her nice deportment as a young lady.

Quite a numerous circle of friends wish these young people all the happiness and prosperity possible. W. T. P.

Don't worry over the mud and slush, but buy a pair of gum boots of the Golden Store and perhaps save a doctor's bill, as wet feet are a source of many ills. A winter overcoat, the kind you have to pay $9 for, is only $6 at the Golden Store.

DEER CREEK.

The doctors are kept very busy.

S. B. Hannah is putting up a large stock shed.

Dr Joe is with engineer corps at Leather Bark.

Heb Hannah is clerking for Cogar Bros.

Mrs M. F. Slaven is complaining.

Mrs S. B. Hannah is not so well since the cold weather came in.

W. W. Slaven has quit complaining, and says it's all a habit.

Willis Slaven is going to Huttonsville for a load of corn and salt.

The snow is about all gone, but the ice is still in the creek. It is thawing out gradually.

Uriah Hevener bought C. C. Arbogast's hay and is feeding it out. Feed will be scarce around here.

G. L. Slaven is hauling supplies from Huttonsville. He says the roads are in a desperate fix; ice till you can't rest.

Davy Grogg lost two fine horses at Durbin. James Galford lost a good horse by falling on the ice near Sam Cassell's.

They are working about 25 hands at Madigan & Fergison's camp. Clarence Wilmoth, Clide Aulby and Roe Phillips have returned and are pushing their jobs. New hands are coming in every day.

I see a motion made for a Primary, and two names mentioned for Prosecuting Attorney. Let us not look at a man's politics, but let him be sound in limb and of good wind and something of a bear fighter.—J. H. Buzzard is mentioned for Assessor. He is a man every inch and can get the office, but why not bring him out for Sheriff if he will accept the nomination? Where Joe can't go, his mule can.—For House of Delegates let L. M. McClintic come. He is a very acceptable candidate.

RECOMBEND.

HUNTERSVILLE.

Col Dan O'Connell is off to camp.

Mud, mumps and weather in an abundance at this time.

Mrs Sarah P. Hazel is visiting her son S. J. Boggs.

J. J. Boggs has been very sick for the past few weeks, but is better now.

Mrs Mary E. Adkison, of Buckeye, is visiting her daughter Mrs O. E. McKeever.

The singing at the Methodist church Sunday evening was excellent. Miss Grace Harper was organist. We are glad to see the congregational singing so much improved. Singing next Sunday evening, January 21. All are cordially invited to attend.

George Buzzard has had a bad case of mumps, but is better at this time. XX.

MILL POINT.

We are having fine weather.

William Sharp is doing some good gridding at the Smith mill.

Henry McClure has a contract for clearing right of way.

Seamer Gladwell is on the sick list.

The protracted meeting by Rev. Lough at Riverside closed a few nights ago.

The school at Riverside is progressing nicely under the management of Miss Alice Clark.

Rev J. H. Lough has been confined to his bed several days with the measles. He will not be able to fill any of his appointments for sometime.

Building Notes.

J. D. Pullin has moved into his new store house on Main street. The Pocahontas Furniture Co.'s building is almost completed. The frame of the Tyree store house, opposite the Times office, is up. The postoffice will be kept in this building in six weeks if the weather permits the carpenters to work. It is a two story building 22x56 feet. Marvin Carter will build a store house this spring with living rooms overhead, and on the lot adjoining it he will build a dwelling house. G. F. Crummett's dwelling is ready for the roof. His harness shop is located near the McLaughlin Hotel. The editor of this paper has let a contract for a dwelling house, which means, by the way, that he will be on the war path presently collecting subscription money. A number of other buildings are to be built next spring.

$100 Reward $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. [illegible]

FROST.

Mrs Samuel Curry has been on the sick list for some time.

Sherman Curry, who was shot, is improving slowly.

Mrs T. J. Williams is somewhat ill at this time.

George Sharp is teaching school at Traveler's Repose.

The hop, step and jump at Dunmoore was all right, so Wm. Gibson says.

Aaron Sharp is teaching the Cove Hill school with good success.

There was enough water in Knapps Creek last week to break all the landings in.

There has been quite a cold snap for the past two weeks and has been a good time for sliding logs. Gilmer Sharp and Reed Griffith slid 1300 logs in one night last week at Warren's camp. In sliding logs one team slides from 10 to 100 logs at one trail, instead of 4 or 5 as published in The Times.

RALPH.

Fine weather for January.

Smith & Whiting have been splashing out some of their logs the past week.

Several cases of measles in this neighborhood.

Moore & Herold have not finished their job of logging.

Hannah & Harper are doing a rushing merchandise business.

J. B. F. Sharp went to the Hot Springs last week for Hannah & Harper.

J. A. Moore went to Marlinton on business last Saturday.

We need a jail, a dozen policemen and a dozen detectives in Frost to keep order and keep the thieves out people's pockets.

Miss Nannie Warwick has been visiting friends and relatives on the Creek the past week.

Rev O. M. Pullin preached at Trinity church Sunday.

Drs Jordon and Lockridge are kept going both day and night.

I. B., J. A. and Price Moore are getting out a sawset.

There are six cases of measles at I. B. Moore's.

We are sorry to learn that Button McElwee and his mother, of Hot Springs, are in such a critical condition. We hope they may recover soon.

Some of the citizens on the creek object to the lumberman hauling logs through their farms.

DR DOOLY.

And still it rains.

Clark Gum made a trip to Virginia last week.

Ed Spitzer made a visit to Anthony's Creek last week.

William Bussard is doing a good job of sawing for Wilson Rider.

Ben Sharp was out to the railroad for H. & H. last week.

Mrs Hook has been on the sick list.

John Warren was breaking the landings last Friday.

Ellis Bussard is hauling some sawlogs to William Bussard's sawmill at Wilson Rider's.

C. C. Sharp was home from Ervine's lumber camp Sunday.

There was a very interesting game of football here Saturday.

REUBEN.

We had a nice shower of rain last week.

Johnie Warren and crew have been splashing out some of their logs.

Clark and T. M. Gum were called to Virginia to see their mother who is very ill.

Price Sheets has been spending a few days in town.

Bro Ben was to the Hot last week for H. & H.

Cris Dilley still comes to Frost "Keep your eye on the gobbler."

Feed is plenty in this part and is just the same with those who have none.

Mr Cunningham, of Monterey, passed here last week.

We notice in last week's Times about a span of horses pulling 4 or 5 logs. What do you think of a span pulling from 30 to 40 logs with the grab in the rear log?

MY FAVORITE.

Chesapeake & Ohio's Record.

The Chesapeake & Ohio earned in 1899 about $12,500,000, the largest sum in its history. The increase for the last six months, compared with the same period of 1898, is estimated to $558,000. A part of the improvement in business is due to the completion of improvements to the system. It now has two lines between Richmond and Clifton Forge, and 151 miles of double track completed or under construction. This enables the C. & O. to carry a much larger freight tonnage without delay than in the past. During 1899 111 miles of new rails were laid, while several large stone and iron bridges replaced wooden work. It is calculated that the new grain elevator at Newport News will be completed in July, as well as the coal and other wharves.—Manufacturer's Record.

THE NEW GAS LIGHT

USES OF ACETYLENE AND HOW IT WAS DISCOVERED.

Insurance Underwriters Will Not Permit Its Use Under Pressure. Its Cost and How It is Made—How It May be Used.

It was discovered by a German chemist in 1861, that if a mixture of lime and carbon were heated to an enormous temperature the two fused together and produced what is now known as calcium carbide. Nothing further of note was accomplished with this new substance until 1894, when Moissan invented an electric furnace and found that by placing carbon and lime directly in the electric arc an enormously high temperature was available at comparatively little expense, and the resulting calcium carbide possessed the property of generating a new gas very rapidly when brought into contact with water. Moissan did not pursue his experiments much further because the proper and economical construction of electric furnaces was then very little known.

As usual in such cases, the invention of Moissan was perfected in America. Thomas L. Wilson, of St. Catherine's, Ont., was a poor boy, assisting his mother in the management of a boarding house. When twenty-nine years old he crossed the border to the United States, where his talent was soon recognized, and soon afterward he built a very large electric furnace for the purpose of experimenting in the production of alloys of different metals.

While doing so he found that the spattering of the molten metal in the furnace frequently produced a conducting path between the carbon of his arc lamp, so much so as to seriously interfere with and sometimes extinguish the arc. To overcome this he placed in the furnace a mixture of coke and lime, which he found to his astonishment immediately combined under the great heat and produced beautiful, clear calcium carbide at a comparatively low cost.

Capital was at once interested in Mr. Wilson's discovery, and it was not long before companies were organized in every State to control the Wilson patents, but it was also only a short time when it was discovered that acetylene gas, under certain circumstances, was of a highly explosive nature.

Contrary to the advice of Mr. Wilson, many of the companies undertook to place the gas upon the market in a liquid form. In order to do this it was compressed until it became liquid, almost in the same manner as liquid air is produced. It was found, however, that during compression the explosive qualities of the gas increased rapidly until when, in a liquid state, it was extremely dangerous.

In using the gas in this manner many disastrous explosions occurred, and the public quickly denounced the gas, but further experiments soon proved that if the pure gas were used without being compressed there was only one way of causing an explosion, and that was by exploding in the gas tank a small quantity of fulminade of mercury or some other violent explosive. It was also found quite possible to burn the electric arc within a tank of pure gas with perfect safety.

It was decided that the gas would have to be used without being compressed, and this action was quickly indorsed by insurance underwriters, who will not now permit the use of acetylene gas under pressure.

Calcium carbide was first sold at a very high price on account of the fact that it required the use of about five hundred horse power for twenty-four hours to produce a single ton, but there are now works at Niagara Falls where great quantities are turned out daily by the use of the inexpensive water power there. The use of the carbide, however, has become so general that these works will soon be doubled, and even then it is expected that it will be almost impossible to supply the rapidly growing demand.

The flame of acetylene is entirely different from ordinary gas, and is much brighter and richer than the incandescent lamp. It is a solid flame of twenty-five candle-power, about one inch in height and one inch in width, and is controlled by a specially designed burner, which only consumes about one-quarter foot of gas an hour.

At first glance it would seem from this that the new light is very much less expensive than the old, but while the acetylene burner consumes such a very small quantity of gas the cost of the carbide is still so high that it is found that acetylene is very little cheaper than ordinary gas.

In order to light one's home with acetylene it is only necessary to replace the old burners with the new style, disconnect the house pipes from the meter and connect them to a small gas generator. This generator is very much like an ordinary city gas holder, and consists of a tank of water, in which is inverted another tank, the gas as it is being generated being led into the holder between the water and the inverted tank, so that this tank will rise as the gas is generated until a sufficient amount is admitted to fill the holder.

The rising of the tank then automatically cuts off the supply of water from the carbide, and thus prevents the gas from generating until such time as more is needed, when the tank will descend. In doing so it opens a valve which allows the water to again come in contact with the carbide and again generate gas.

West Virginia University,

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Premedical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 2, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

ODE.

How sleep the brave who sink to rest,
By all their country's wishes blest!
When Spring with dewy fingers cold,
Returns to deck their hallowed mould,
She there shall dress a sweeter sod,
Than fancy's feet have ever trod.

By fairy hands their knell is rung;
By forms unseen their dirge is sung;
There Honour comes a pilgrim gray,
To bless the turf that wraps their clay,
To dwell a weeping hermit there!

Odds and Ends.

THE PLATFORM QUESTION.

It affords the New York Independent much satisfaction that the Democratic leaders have expressed such a variance of views on the leading questions and it calmly asserts that the breeches are so wide that the party can never be solidified by any platform. However bad such a state may be for the political supremacy of the party, such brave and independent views lift the men above the danger of being termed "dumb driven cattle," and constitute the one and only safeguard of the institutions of the country. When voters consent to act like a machine both before and after the conventions, we have sign of that apathy which breeds corruption in those in the high places.

The platform which will bind the party together is so hard to frame that one is reminded of the condition of the Whig party, which was twice successful in electing a President, but only by not adopting a platform the planks of which would cause diversions among the honest Whigs.

We suppose that we will be compelled to adopt a platform. It should be one which would be as broad as Democracy itself. If not we had better follow the Whig policy and nominate our candidates and vote for Democracy, free and untrammelled according to the way each of us understands it.

Some of the history connected with the the two successful campaigns which were waged by the Whig party without a platform to stand on may be recited here.

In 1839 Van Buren's term was drawing to a close. Immediately after he took his seat in 1837 the country experienced an era of hard times equal to the two first years of the present Administration. Van Buren was induced to call a special session of Congress, the Congress convening the 4th of September. The currency question was agitating the country and the Administration wished a treasury bank, while many were in favor of the establishment of a national bank. A piece of a bill was passed, and no definite action was taken on the currency question. The Administration was waging a war against the Florida Indians, very similar to the Philippine contest in that time after time it was reported that the war was practically over, only to break out worse than ever.

Texas was in about the same condition that Cuba is now and wanted annexation. A revolution started in Canada and an invasion was threatened from the United States.

The elections began to show a falling off. In December, 1839, the Whig convention was held at Harrisburg to nominate a candidate for President. Clay, Webster, Winfield Scott, and Harrison were before the convention, and Harrison—the least known—was nominated. Tyler was chosen vice-President. The campaign of that year was one of unprecedented excitement. The followers of "Tippecanoe and Tyler too!" were successful. The Whigs received 234 electoral votes, and the Democrats 66.

Four years of Whig rule satisfied the country and the Democrats came in. They waged a successful war against Mexico, and were defeated in 1848. Taylor and Filmore were elected as Whigs with no platform. Again were Clay, Webster, and Scott before the convention to be turned down in favor of another quiet soldier, Zachary Taylor. He, like General Harrison, died in office, and the vice-president reigned in his stead and like John Tyler represented the minority of his party.

The Whig party is now no more. In our county their descendants are Democrats, and the descendants of the Democrats of those days are Republicans. But they showed their good sense twice when they divested themselves of that bone of contention called a platform, and went in to beat the other man on general principles.

SCENES FROM THE POISONERS.

Advance Sheets of a Play Which is Never to Be Written.

Scene in France. French Army officers plotting against the life of Captain Cartfus.

General Mercinil—Ay, he must die!
That much is settled! It but remains
For us to choose the instrument
By which his dissolution may be brought to pass.
Cartfus or France! The ant or elephant!
Our country must be saved; our tracks be covered up;
He knows too much, this Captain Cartfus!
He is too smart! He gets too gay!
He is inclined to be too previous!
Now, since it is decreed our blades
Can not be bathed in blood so treacherous,
We are compelled to pizen him:
The meeting now will come to order—
What is the pleasure of the house?

Colonel De Bunt—Suppose we give the traitor Prussic acid
So they will blame the Germans with his death.

Mercinil—It is no time for levity
France is in danger.

De Bunt—'Tis even so, and that Jew Cartfus aint so safe.
Methinks I see an army doctor present;
He may know of something which will end him,—
Some juice that will eventuate a Jew.

Army Doctor—There be many things which taken inwardly will free
The spirit, life, from the encumbering clay.
But since confined, this most perfidious Jew,
Has had free access to a stock of poisons
Such as would set a druggist up for life
He will not take them; he desires to live.
He is as stubborn as an army mule
But I have recently conceived a scheme
By which he may become felo de se
Save France and teach all Frenchmen
Not to know too much.
My plan is this.
We all know Cartfus is a thirsty soul:
He'd swim the Hellespont to get a drink.
He begs his jailer every day for alcohol,
Or beer, or brandy, or some substitute;
Tonight his jailer gives to him a quart of pure
And unadulterated new corn whiskey:
Tomorrow morning he will cry for more;
The jailer will not get it for him, but will give him this:
It is the deadliest poison of them all;
Essence of cinnamon, product of a heartless trust
In the United States; wood alcohol
Is the chief ingredient. He'll use this as a substitute,
And he will go where he will tell no tales.

(SCENE.—Cartfus in his cell the next morning. The jailer reading the Cartfus Case in the morning paper.)

Cartfus—A drink, a drink, my hope of heaven for a drink!
Whew! I tell you I feel bad, I do!
My throat's a thousand times more dry
Than ever was the Desert of Sahara;
Dog of a jailer, get me at once a stimulant,
Or I will break these bars and throttle you!

Jailer—Be still! I want to read; you know yourself
That you are in a prohibition town.
Sometimes you can get liquor, oft times not:
Unless you send around the corner for some essence,
You will have to wait a day or two.

(The prisoner shudders, sends for the deadly drug, drinks it, and expires.)

Curtain.

LAYING THE TRACK.

The track on the Greenbrier Railway is laid as far as Caldwell, and a track has been put in beside the main line from Whitcomb to Ronceverte. No more track will be laid this winter on account of the freezing and thawing, which causes landslides on newly completed work on hillsides. There is no danger of slips on the road already completed.

The plan is to store all the rails and everything necessary at Caldwell this winter. For this purpose a train and crew will be kept busy the whole time. Immediately after the first of April the work of laying the track will be pushed through without delay. The track should reach Marlinton by the middle of June, and the whole road be completed this season.

BIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

JAMES RODGERS, Sr.

Among the worthy, industrious persons whose arduous toils and severe privations helped to make our county what it is, deserving of respectful mention was the late James Rodgers, Sr. He was a native of Madison County, Virginia; born February 13, 1789.

His first marriage was with a Miss Jackson, of Madison County. The issue of this marriage was seven children. The sons were Robert, whose wife was a daughter of John Smith, one of the pioneers of Stoney Creek; Joseph and Drury. The daughters were Sarah, Elizabeth, Mary and Tabitha. Respecting these children we have virtually no particulars in hand.

James Rodgers came to our county in 1824 and settled in the woods on Lewis Ridge, at a spot overlooking the Buckeye Cove. Thus he and his family became identified with Pocahontas almost from its organization.

His second marriage was with with Nellie Lewis, of the Little Levels, a granddaughter of Alexander Waddell, whose descendants are so numerously represented by prosperous and influential citizens in our county at this time. By the second marriage there were six children. Margaret became Henry Adkinson's first wife; James Lewis Rodgers, Rebecca, who became Mrs Fellows.

William Rodgers married Polly Fleming, daughter of the late James Fleming, on Swago, and settled on a part of the Fleming homestead, near Buckeye, where his widow and two daughters now reside. He was a Union pensioner for service in the Federal army.

Chesley Rodgers married Mrs Sally Morrison and settled near Jacox.

John Rodgers married a Miss Harter.

James L. Rodgers, the eldest son of the second family reared by James Rodgers, Sr., was married twice. The first wife was Eliza Burgess. There were ten children in the first family: N. C. Rodgers of Jacox; the late Mrs Hannah Wade, G. W. Rodgers, on Beaver Dam; Davis Rodgers, deceased; John H. Rodgers, also dead; Maggie became Mrs William Adkisson of Buckeye; Eliza became Mrs Olie Auldridge and lives at Hillsboro; Mary is at Clifton Forge; Alvin W. near Buckeye.

By the second marriage with Mrs Mary Kellison, nee Galford, there were a son Lewis, now dead, and a daughter Laura.

Thus the writer has endeavored to present the available information concerning this worthy old citizen and his family, aided by his grandson A. W. Rodgers.

In his time James Rodgers had the reputation of being one of the most industrious of working men. He tried to train his sons and daughters to habits of industry and strict economy. Soon as they became old enough for service they went from home and found ready employment as field hands and house keepers. This venerable man was a zealous and devoted adherant of the Methodist Protestant church. He was one of the first members in the Buckeye society and probly one of the first in the county. His prayers and experience talks were in good language, interspersed with allusions to the parables and quotations of the promises. All this indicated that in early, impressible youth he must have been familiar with persons of more than ordinary culture, such as Madison County was distinguished for. In his speech he had the tone and style which characterized the old Virginia gentry, as the writer learned to know in subsequent years from actual acquaintance with East Virginians.

The writer cherishes the memory of this old citizen with feelings of much respect, as the two often toiled in the meadows and harvest fields side by side in his boyhood. He remembers being often impressed by the pathos and fervency of the old man's occasional prayers in the morning worship. This was something which was never omitted in the old Marlinton home. The belief of the older people at that time was that "Prayer and provender hinder no man," and so time was always found for prayer as well as for breakfast and supper. Some of his expressions still linger in memory after more than fifty years. One was an allusion to the grapes of Eschol, as typical of the richness of the Promised Land. His idea was that God would give his humble, praying people here, while on their pilgrimage, a cluster now and then from the heavenly vine so as to refresh and encourage them to put forth their earnest faithful endeavors to go up and receive possession of the heavenly land.

This allusion was utilized as suggestive of a sermon prepared and preached by the writer thirty years ago. May we meet and see for ourselves the blessed land in all its richness and glorious beauty and especially the vine from which the clusters were gathered that cheered and encouraged him.

Rocking the Cradle.

J. Delaughter, Sparkman, Ark., says: For the past fifteen years I have consulted physicians and used patent medicines, but Ramon's Liver Pills and Tonic Pellets excelled them all. I could get no relief from constipation, and after using one box I was as sound as a dollar. After telling a number of my good friends, they tried the medicine and were cured, and now we are rocking the cradle of life away in perfect health and enjoyment. My advice to all is never let your house be clear of Ramon's Pills.

COLLECTION SONG.

(The following spirited poem was handed us by a gentleman from Lobelia, who informs us that it was composed by an old gentleman living in that neighborhood.—Editor.)

If not adverse,
We will rehearse
A stanza for each one,
And while we sing,
The cash just bring,
And meet this gospel dun.
To one and all
We make this call,
Come, draw your pocket book,
And pay a dime,
For every time
You at a preacher look.

Ye romping girls,
With bangs and curls,
And fingers hid in rings,
If you to-day
Will promptly pay,
We 'll call you pretty things;
And, ere we close,
We 'll pray for beaus,
With true and honest heartt,
Who all will be Most easily
Shot down by Cupid's darts.

Old maids now gray,
For you we say
The fools are not all dead;
So pay your mite,
And we will cite
You to the man who'll wed;
And when you clap
Old Hyman's trap
On him you most admire,
You then will learn
Why burnt cats turn
Their tails toward the fire.

Now mothers dear,
You need not fear
That awful future day,
For if you'll give,
And let us live,
We all for you will pray,
That when you die,
Your souls may fly,
On wings of chicken-hawks,
Where you will be Forever free
From darning holey socks.

Ye sporting boys,
Who make great noise,
With shotgun, hounds and horn
Throw in the coin,
And when you join
The chase at early morn,
You then will see
The foxes flee
Before the yelping pack,
And have more fun
Than any one
Who keeps his money back!

Old bachelors,
Who wear no scars
From rolling-pin or broom,
Throw in the chink
And never think
Of an eternal doom.
For when your breath
Goes out in death,
No sound of Gabriel's horn
Will ever shake
The world to wake
You on the judgment morn.

Now Fathers bold,
Who oft have told
Of your great love for Jesus,
Throw in a V,
And you will see
How your good actions please us
And when we raise
Our notes in praise
To Him who all things rules,
The loudest notes
That tear our throats
Shall be, God save the fools!

This song is sung by the preachers, while the stewards wait upon the congregation to receive contributions, and as it is money that furnishes the oil to keep the gospel machine in running order, all preachers should spare no pains in singing with the spirit appropriate on all collections.

"Come Haste to the Hangin[g]"

Arizonians Thought the Sheriff's Invi[tation] too Cheerful, so He changed Th[e]

There is a right way [and a] wrong way to do every thing[,] ev[e]n of hanging a man in Ari[zona,] and the Sheriff of Navajo C[ounty] has learned what out there [is be]lieved to be the right way, [after] having gone about the bu[siness] wrong.

Early in December he sen[t out] this invitation on black-edge[d pa]per:

> HOLBROOK, Ariz., Dec. 1, 18[99.]
> Mr. ....
> You are hereby cordially in[vited] to attend the hanging of one
> GEO. SMILEY, Murderer,
> His soul will be swung into [eter]nity on Dec. 8, 1899, at 2 o'cloc[k P.] M., sharp.
> Latest improved methods in th[e art] of scientific strangulation wil[l be] employed, and everything pos[sible] will be done to make the procee[dings] cheerful and the execution a suc[cess.]
> F. J. WATTRON,
> Sheriff of Navajo Co[unty.]

In spite of the black-edg[ed pa]per, social critics of Navajo [coun]ty commented on the tone o[f the] invitation as being too chee[rful.] The Sheriff harkened to his [cens]ors, postponed the execution [and] sent out this invitation, als[o on] blackedged paper.

> HOLBROOK, Ariz., Jan. 1, 19[00.]
> Mr. ....
> With feelings of profound so[rrow] and regret, I hereby invite yo[u to] attend and witness the private[, de]cent, and humane execution of a [hu]man being; name, George Smi[ley;] crime, murder.
> The said George Smiley wil[l be] executed on January 8, 1900, [at 2] o'clock P. M.
> You are expected to deport [your]self in a respectful manner, and [any] "flippant" or "unseemly" langu[age] or conduct on your part will no[t be] allowed. Conduct on any one's [part] bordering on ribaldry and tend[ing] to mar the solemnity of the occa[sion] will not be tolerated.
> F. J. WATTRON,
> Sheriff of Navajo Cou[nty.]

The trouble is due to the [fact] that the Penal Code of Arizon[a re]quires the Sheriff to issue in[vita]tions to an execution, but doe[s not] describe the form of those in[vita]tions, and that the social cod[e of] the State is not explicit on [the] point. It has been suggested [that] the Legislature fix the form o[f the] only invitation prescribed off[icial]ly by the State and so obviate [any] further contretemps such as b[efell] the Sheriff of Navajo.

MRS REBECCA J. HILL.

Mrs Rebecca J. Hill, relic[t of] George C. Hill, died near Lob[elia,] November 24, 1899. She was [born] in Greenbrier County April 8, [18]26, and was married in 1848 by [Rev.] James M. Clark. Our sky is hung with black [and] sombre cloud curtains; our vi[sion] is overcast with the gloom of [sor]row and every sound that st[rikes] our ear has in it a cadence of [de]spair. Without the presence of [the] loved one who has gone before[, the] world seems empty and cheer[less,] and in our heart there is a dre[ary,] aching void. Our consolatio[n is] the sweet realization of the [fact] that our loved one is at pe[ace] "Where the wicked cease [from] troubling and the weary ar[e at] rest." The one upon whom [we] have lavished our affection [has] heard the words from the Fat[her's] lips: "Well done thou good [and] faithful servant. Enter thou [into] the joys of thy Lord."

We have lost our darling mother[,]
She has bid us all adieu;
She has gone to live in heaven,
And her person is lost to view.
Oh, that darling, how we loved [her,]
Oh, how hard to give her up!
But an angel came down for her,
And removed her from our flock.

'Tis hard to break the tender co[rd]
When love has bound the heart,
'Tis hard, so hard, to speak the [words,]
We must forever part.
Dear loved one we must lay thee
In the peaceful grave's embrace,
But thy memory will be cherished
'Till we see thy heavenly face.

Farewell, dear mother, sweet thy [rest,]
Weary with years and worn with [pain,]
Farewell, till in some happy pla[ce]
We shall behold thy face again.
'Tis ours to miss thee all our [years,]
And tender memories of thee keep[,]
Thine in the Lord to rest, for so [He]
He giveth His beloved sleep.

The Pocahontas Times.

ANDREW PRICE, - - - EDITOR.

MARLINTON, THURS. JAN. 25, 1900.

Entered at the post-office at Marlinton, W. Va., as second class matter.

POLITICS.

W. A. Bratton announces himself this week for the office of Prosecuting Attorney of Pocahontas County. He is a good, conservative lawyer, and during the eight years he has lived in this county has made many friends. In 1896 he made a close race for this office against the present incumbent. He is a very good man for the place.

Constable Frank Patterson of Dunmore is a possibility in the choice of deputy-sheriffs. He is a good business man and very popular, and is said to be not adverse to serving his country in this manner.

We see by the Greenbrier Independent that Dr W. H. McClung is out for the Senate. If we mistake not this gentleman was one of the twelve who made their famous stand the result of which was the election of Mr N. B. Scott's attorney to the United States Senate. What's the matter with Albert Sidney Johnson, who discovered Henry G. Davis, for Governor? Or the Pocahontas Times' candidate of 1898, Thomas H. Dennis, member of the State Committee.

OUR WEAK POINT.

One of our London subscribers (how we swell whenever we think that we have subscribers in London) hits the Pocahontas Times in its tenderest place. He writes the inuendo, and we get to hear of it by his correspondent's burst of misplaced confidence. We can not afford to miss printing a good joke just because it is on us. It is:

"The Pocahontas Times has slain more English since the war began than the armies of Paul Kruger."

We fear it does not help crimes of this kind to say that they were committed unintentionally. We belong to the vast majority over whom Mr Lindley Murray wept and tried to reclaim. A murderer of the King's English in our 'teens we have committed many a capital crime since.

Little combinations such as "have went," "had n't ought to," "have came" creep into the copy and shock our friends. But we plead in extenuation that our editor was reared in a hard school—a weather-beaten old school on top of a hill, where the school teacher wore his breeches on the inside of his boots, and where Sammy Saurkraut, who earned twenty-five cents a week by not eating meat at home, came to be publicly instructed. In that school the predicate never agreed with the subject except by chance.

He fed on the public swill at the public trough, and his mother tried to beat out of him the language he thus acquired, with partial success. The result is the chaste Algonquin style with which our readers are familiar. His most intimate friends are sorry for him. Sometimes they meet around the office spittoon and discuss him and point to many things indicating that he has not brain like "present company."

He is sorry to give anyone pain, but the English language has many pitfalls. If he ever succeeds in handling it with impunity, he will sing with Dr Oliver Wendell Holmes:

"Oh, Life has many a reef to shun,
Before in port we drop the anchor;
But when our course is safely run
[illegible]—
Life owns its headway to the speaker!"

Every time we lick a stamp we wonder how the present administration can hope for success at the polls. To believe Richard Carvel before the Revolutionary war one of the strongest expletives among those who ordinarily used such oaths as "Indeed," "Truly," &c., was "Well, I'll be stamped and taxed." And we swear by this great and holy oath that we have as much cause for complaint as ever had the patriots of the Revolutionary times.

Congressman Sibley sits on the Democratic side of the House, but his applause when he speaks comes from the Republicans. "He who [illegible]."

[illegible] was defeated by a small plurality.

COIN HARVEY'S NEW BOOK.

W. H. Harvey, a West Virginian by birth, whose books on the currency question have made him famous, has just issued another book, called "Money, Trusts and Imperialism." The author is essentially a democrat, believing that the voter should know within himself as the result of his reasoning powers why he votes a certain ticket.

His stand on the question of bimetalism is familiar from his previous works. In the present book he denounces banks in general and national banks in particlar.

Two billion dollars represent the actual amount of money coined or printed by the United States. This includes gold, silver, nickel and copper coins and paper money. But the 12.804 banks in the country have individual deposits of $7,-5[illegible]1,954,361, or more than three times the actual amount of money in existence. Thus if bank depositors should with one accord demand the amount of their deposits in money it would be physically impossible to accomodate them. This illustrates the benefits of commercial paper as a supplementary currency, but Mr Harvey views it as a constant menance of panics in the business world, and would have more money put in circulation to prevent these periodical panics. The loans and discounts of the 12.804 banks amount to $5.751,467,610; thus the banks are lending nearly three times as much money as there is in existance, and getting interest on it too.

But if the State bank is bad, the National bank is the embodiment of evil. The Government, instead of issuing a "greenback," which does not bear interest, and which the common people would gladly take, issues interest bearing bonds and allows banks to buy them. It pays the banks 4 per cent per annum, and allows them to issue money for which the government stands good. Surely Uncle Sam has fallen among thieves. When the common people advocate issuing paper money for government indebtedness, the financiers howl about the nation's credit, as if the nation could not take care of itself. But it meets with their approval when the government backs the money of a certain bank to the same effect only paying interest in addition. Harvey shows this so plainly that it comes in the nature of an exposure. Owing to the moral support of the administration has given national banks in its late currency bill, the remarks on this subject are timely. Harvey would have a system of postal savings banks which would not only allow money to be deposited subject to check but would also lend money on real estate at the rate of one per. cent per annum. The scheme does not seem impracticable to the reader of his book.

The book is written in Harvey's usual style. The 1895 book represents a kid of ten in knee pants uttering the profoundest thoughts on the money question. This year it is a youth of 16 who has reached the smart-alec stage. We do not appreciate this juvenile rot, but if the grown up reader can overlook this idiosyncrasy of the author he will find much that is intensely interesting in the book.

As he lectures he frequently interrupted by people who put posers at him, all of whom he bowls over with his answers with perfect ease. Mr H. C. Simms, of Huntington, is immortalized in this way.

"Mr Henry C. Simms, of Huntington, West Va., now rose and said:

'The true principle of Democracy is to have as few laws as possible. Inhibitions and prohibitions, and a law-ruled people is the opposite of Democracy. The government should have a hand in as few things as possible and let the people run themselves. And for this I object to the government going into the banking business.' And saying this he sat down."

Coin's reply is too long to print here, but the gist of it is that either the government must run the banks, or the banks will run the government.

We will review his ideas on trusts and imperialism another day.

A Suggestion.

Dear Mr Editor: I have noticed your articles and the suggestions of your correspondents in regard to bringing out candidates to be voted for at the coming election. At present, I have no names to suggest but write to submit the following:

Please let us bring out our very best men—Christians, for all the offices. Do you know, Mr Editor, when you laud the praises of a wordly man for office that the evil is far-reaching in its effects? It has been said that "politics is too dirty a pool for Christians to dabble in." In one sense this is true, be it said to our SHAME; but if our very best people, who, of course, are Christians (and including ministers of the gospel) do not take a hand in matters of state, what will become of us? It seems to me to be their bounden duty.

Mr Editor: Suppose we had true Christians in all the offices, from President of the United States down, what would be the result? It is too wonderful to contemplate. Why is it that we are already so prosperous and enjoy such glorious liberty? Simply because of God's people in the land. It has been Divinely said that "a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump."

It matters not so much for high educational or financial standing standing, we want, for all of our officers men of good judgment, good common sense, and above all GOD FEARING MEN.

Yours for "Love, Purity, and Fidelity, A VOTER.

HUNTERSVILLE, W. VA.,

[Note by the Editor: We would beg leave to call the correspondent's attention to the fact that never has Mohammedan, a Sun Worshipper, a Brahmin of any caste, a follower of Buddha, a cannibal, an Atheist, nor any other kind of a heathen ever offered in Pocahontas County. A ticket like the following would be absurd:

For Sheriff, Abul el Ben Haddam, of Turkey.

For Prosecuting Attorney, Ab Ling, of China.

For House of Delegates, Man-Who-Talks-Long, of the Reservation.

For Assessor, Dambesi, of the Congo.

For County Court, Isaac Finklestein, of New York.

All the successful ones are men who love theia fellow men (at least for a season) and so their names lead all the rest.]

Ayer's Hair Vigor

What does it do?

It causes the oil glands in the skin to become more active, making the hair soft and glossy, precisely as nature intended.

It cleanses the scalp from dandruff and thus removes one of the great causes of baldness.

It makes a better circulation in the scalp and stops the hair from coming out.

It Prevents and It Cures Baldness

Ayer's Hair Vigor will surely make hair grow on bald heads, provided only there is any life remaining in the hair bulbs.

It removes color to gray or white hair. It does not do this in a moment, as will a hair dye; but in a short time the gray color of age gradually disappears and the darker color of youth takes its place.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

To the Voters of Pocahontas County:

I hereby announce myself a candidate for the office of Prosecuting Attorney of Pocahontas County for the ensuing term, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary.

Thanking my many friends for their hearty support in the last primary, I promise that if elected I will discharge the duties of the office without fear or favor, with all the ability I possess, and with the dignity the office demands.

Respectfully,
W. A. BRATTON.

The first flood in nearly a year occurred in this county Saturday. As the waters were rising a foul smell could be perceived from off the water, showing how badly a freshet was needed.

About 75 hands are at work for A. H. Jacoby & Co. at the tunnel above Marlinton. The work on the tunnel is progressing from both ends and the work keeps up 24 hours each day.

Cam Herold, of Covington, underwent an operation for the removal of the vermiform appendix at the Johns Hopkins Hospital. He had suffered two attacks of appendicitis and a third attack was developing.

R. B. Kerr, the Durbin capitalist was in Marlinton last week. He expects to survey some lots and put them on the market at once. The main portion of the coming town will be laid off in streets and alleys before any lots are sold.

While at work clearing on the right of way January 17th, Henry Sharp and U. S. Johnson noticed that the latter's dog was baying a snake. They killed it and found it was a blowing viper with plenty of life about it. It was near a large stone which had been disturbed in hauling rocks.

Wife found fault with her husband's clothes and prices. One thing brought on another until he left her. All could have been avoided by buying his clothing at the Golden Store. He could have found a large assortment made for fine trade. The prices are the lowest. $5 buys a good satinet suit for men at the Golden Store.

What has become of the Edray District Hog law? Last summer a good many of us signed the petition necessary to prevent four footed hogs from running at large in this district very readily and joyously. The petition was completed, but was never presented and we cannot ascertain who holds it. It is another case of "hog back," it is supposed.

The Lumber Industry at McClintic's Camp.

About 60 men are at work now and an opening for a few more good men. A. F. Denning, who has been general manager of the woods, has gone to Ronceverte on a visit. Jack Eckley, a well-known woodsman, has charge of the men who work in the woods. Sliding has been the order of the day and night when cold enough to freeze ice on the slide. The slide is about 3 miles long and the logs are slid in by horse power. One team is supposed to take 75 logs to the landing, where they are benched up nicely to wait the spring floods.

J. A. McLaughlin of Marlinton is our worthy clerk. He went home on a visit Christmas, and when he returned he says to Pat the Scaler: "Is a person more apt to catch the measles by kissing any one?" The Scaler replies: "How many times did you kiss any one?" "O, I kissed my girl about 25 times"; and in a few days he says, "I wish I had not have went to see her; I have the measles right now!"

One of the best horses died with spasmodic colic last week, that had cost $125 in September.

Harry Luzier is the cook. He weighs 220 lbs., and can get around as fast as any one need. He is one of the finest cooks that follow the woods.

During the recent snows teams were hauling baled hay across the mountain from Mr McClintic's home. About 500 bales were stored away for summer use.

There are 7 teams in the woods and 2 teams on the road hauling supplies to the camp steady. He has at present one car load of oats at Cowen, a distance of 30 miles, and a car load of corn and one of oats at Ronceverte to be hauled to camp. Two beeves a week are used and other meats besides.

David Trump is the blacksmith. It keeps him busy from early until late to do the work.

Samuel Rankin, a woodsman from Pennsylvania, has just completed the largest and best dam that has been built in this country yet.

Coal is handy and coal stoves are used in place of wood.

There is about 6 inches of snow here yet.

Professor Bonner, superintendent for the Gauley Company, comes up in the mountains and takes a hunt occasionally for exercise.

Big Tract of Land Sold.

L. M. McClintic as special commissioner made a private sale of 2519 acres of land on the head-waters of Williams River and Cranberry, known as the Edmiston lands. The consideration is $20,-136.00, and the purchaser E. W. Campbell of Warrenton, Pennsylvania. The sale was confirmed at the special term of the Circuit Court held here last week, and was sold on six, twelve, and eighteen months time.

Its principal timber is black spruce and forms a part of the finest spruce country the writer knows in Pocahontas county. The 3000 acre Beard tract joins it and Colonel McGraw and the Gauley Company have large holdings near it. This sale increases the chances for a branch road up Stony Creek from Marlinton. This lumber, whether sawn or made into pulp, will likely be manufactured at Marlinton. After a branch road crosses the divide between Stony Creek and the waters of Williams River the connection with the Camden system will be assured.

This is the section where about 50,000 acres was bought twenty years ago of Pocahontas landowners for 40 cents an acre. The speculators held it a few years and sold it for $2.50 the acre and thought they were doing well. It is now worth $8 to $10. This section lies about ten miles west of the Greenbrier Railway.

Good timber lands immediately on the railroad which a few years ago were practically unsalable are now rated at $25 an acre.

The Pocahontas Bank

A meeting of the stock-holders of the Pocahontas Bank was held January 10, 1900 for the election of directors for the ensuing year. The following officers were elected:

Geo. F. Moore, L. M. McClintic, Captain Alex F. Mathews, Amos Barlow, C. E. Beard, John T. McGraw, R. W. Hill, Levi Gay, W. A. Bratton, C. E. Durbin, B. M. Yeager.

Geo. F. Moore was re-elected president.

The Bank of Marlinton.

At the annual meeting of the stock-holders of the bank of Marlinton the following directors were elected for the ensuing year: [illegible] J. McNeel, J. C. [illegible], Dr C. L. Austin, [illegible] [illegible], L. M. McClintic, [illegible] [illegible], F. R. [illegible], Henry [illegible], [illegible] [illegible], [illegible] [illegible], Mack, B. F. McElwee.

The Board of Directors elected [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] president and [illegible] J. McNeel cashier and J. C. [illegible] vice-president.

CLOVER CREEK.

People generally well.

The Messrs Coyner have a large store near Clover Lick and are selling a good deal of goods.

The first school ever taught by Misses Bertie McLaughlin and Rish Smith closed on Clover creek this week. Their schools gave great satisfaction.

We want a bridge across Greenbrier at the mouth of Clover creek, which is the most central point; and a road down the north side of the glade to give the Driftwooders a chance to come to town; and a good road from Big Spring to Clover Lick, and the Laurel run road repaired so as to give Mr Pooh a chance to come over and inspect the town.

The railroaders started on Elk mountain last Saturday and left 20 kegs of powder. When they returned for it on Monday they found some kind friend had hid 7 kegs in one place and 12 in another and rolled 1 down the hillside. They succeeded in finding them all after a long search. I guess this thief wanted to build him a railroad of his own.

Mr Editor: In speaking of Ezra 7:21, I would have been glad if you had given the whole chapter in your request, but I shall give you my opinion: Artaxerxes the king required all the people—christian people—to pay offerings offerings to their God, and those not christians should be enlightened. And Artaxerxes requested Ezra to fix the amount that they should pay of their treasures, and collect it, and he would enforce the law against them. If they would not pay, he want it bestowed out of the king's treasures. It seems that there are people in the west of the Euphrates, who are enlightened people, but will not pay to the support of the Gospel what God requires of them. Artaxerxes the king means to make them do it so there can be whole-hearted christians, paying their just dues to the means of the church. We have just such christians to-day, and will forever. I wish I was a law maker and could enforce some laws to-day. Then our pastors would not go away half paid, like Rev Caldwell and Rev Kennison.

Condemnation Proceedings.

The commissioners reported to the special term of the Circuit Court the amount allowed each landowner in the condemnation proceedings of the Greenbrier Railway vs. The Pocahontas Development Company. The reports were filed subject to exception and the court adjourned. The damage allowed the different landowners was as follows.

Nestor, Shields & Henry, Lot 1 in Block 7, .11 of an acre, $225.

Martha J. Crouch, Lot 12 in Block 20, .11 of an acre, $400.

L. M. McClintic, a part of Lot 4 in Block 10, $150.

W. S. Smith, Lot 5, Block 20, $315.

Nestor, Shields & Henry, Lot 4 in Block 33, $350.

The Pocahontas Development Company had 27.93 acres taken in addition, its lands lying between the Apperson land and the Gay land. The damage allowed for the whole is $1900.

An answer was filed by H. A. Yeager asking that an additional street be allowed to remain open which the railroad seeks to close.

Soowalter—Tracey.

A rather romantic and picturesque wedding transpired at Marlinton Tuesday afternoon when John Richard Showalter and Miss Nancy Margaret Jane Alice Tracy were married seated in their buggy in front of the Marlinton Manse; Wm. T. Price officiating.

The groom is a well known and much respected young farmer of the Linnwood vicinity. The bride is a daughter of J. P. Tracy, who was the only spectator of the marriage service. Immediately after the ceremony the party set out for Elk, where a reception awaited them at the home of Samuel Gibson who is a brother-in-law of the groom. These young people have many attached friends to wish them a happy married life, and may it be so.

GREEN BANK.

Waters are high, and mail from Huntersville Saturday.

A great deal of sickness around. Brown Beard and Frankie Austin are very bad.

Colbert Duncan, who was at the hotel with the measles, has returned to O'Connel's camp.

Robert Oliver and Worden Hudson are off to the lumber camps at Horton.

L. J. R. Dysard went to Durbin last week.

Mr and Mrs E. N. Moore were calling at Dr Austin's Sunday.

Capt C. B. Swecker was in town one day last week.

James M. Moomau contemplates making a trip to Pennsylvania in the near future where he has accepted a position. We wish him good luck, but hate to see him go.

Frank Austin is very low with pneumonia, diptheria and scarlet fever. We hope he will recover.

Oh, yes! Let those who want an office come to the front. We have good material for our officers; men who will not be led by the bottle. They are the men to put in. Why not give them the offices of trust as the times demand such men to fill the places of public trust. Let us look to this before we vote.

ARBOVALE.

Lovely winter weather.

George Hatcher is back from camp.

Joseph Sutton has returned from Top Allegheny where he was attending singing school.

Bud Arbogast is building a fine barn.

Rev Pullin will preach at Arbovale January 28 at 3 p. m. Let everybody come out.

Monroe Beard is very low with pneumonia.

Joe Beard, who has been very poorly, is able to sit up.

Miss Bertie Beard has closed her school on account of sickness at home and in the neighborhood.

Dr Hunter Moomau is going to locate in Arborvale, if he can get the property he is looking after.

L. J. Dysard has been appointed superintendent of the schools in Arbovale district. He would make a good county superintendent.

J. W. Lambert got a coon the other day. He is going to pet it if he can.

Several blasts were heard over on the railroad last Sunday morning. This state of affairs should not exist in Pocahontas.

Green Bank arrested a black man on suspicion and brought him to Arbovale for examination. Sol W. Phares, justice, examined him and pronounced him sound with the exception of frozen feet. The darkey said he was nearly frozen, and as he was by a hot stove he seemed inclined to stay. It cost Arborvale $1.25 to get him started on his way again. He came back the next day for his dinner.

VINCENT.

FROST.

Clear and bright.

Mrs Bertie Wooddel is staying with her mother Mrs T. J. Williams who is not expected to live.

Sherman Curry is still improving under the care of Dr Jordon.

Abram Sharp is better.

The lumber boys are having a few days rest.

Miss Gertie Kellison, of Mt. Grove, is in town.

Mrs Lizzie Hannah has gone to see her sister Mrs Wm Sharp, of Edray, who is sick.

We are sorry to hear of Mr Ben Fleshman's death, on January 16, at Monterey.

T. M. Gum and family are in Virginia staying his sick mother.

George Shrader went to the Hot last week for H. & H.

Billy Bussard is sawing wood for Mr Gibson.

Rev Oden M Pullins made a flying trp to Greenbrier last week.

Two new cases of measles in town.

Holmes Sharp is off to Virginia to see his brother.

SOGGY BILL.

The Tygart's Valley Bank, of Phillipi, was robbed last week by burglars blowing open the safe with nitro-glycerine. They secured between five and six thousand dollars. No one heard them at work and they escaped by taking a hand car to Grafton. They left no clue to their identity.

DUNMORE.

And we had a small flood.

Charles Bush and lady are out on a visit.

J. B. Walker has returned.

Joe Tayler is at home.

Big Dick is at home and is about over the measles.

Isaac Kerns and Dr Austin have two sick children.

George N. Tacy says he tracked a fish down the river which had a track as big around as a hay stack.

A tree fell on a slave last week but did not kill him.

Lots of work is being done on the railroad. One blast contained 80 kegs of powder and cost the contractor $750.

E. M. Arbogast was called home last week by the sickness of his wife. We learn she is better.

The Phillipean Island at Major Arbogast's has been plained up. A 300 foot fill has been put in to protect the road.

W. A. Bussard will move his sawmill to Armenius Buzzard's neet week and do a big job of sawing.

Thousands of pounds of feed is being haulded from Huttonsville that ought to have been raised in Pocahontas. This is the year that a large crop of corn, oats and potatoes should be planted.

The dance given by White & Sheets at Dunmore was a success and much enjoyed by all.

DILLEY'S MILL.

Rain, mud and sun shine.

Thomas Courtney, of Marlinton, was visiting friends and relatives in this part some days ago.

Miss Myrtle Moore would have taken the prize for collecting missionary money if there had been one offered. She collected $10.

Urioh Bird was in this part last week.

Ira Moore and E. S. Grimes went over to the Greenbrier Rail road last week.

It is rumored that coal was found in the tunnel above Marlinton. W. H. Dilley found coal on his land not far from the tunnel.

A mail route has been opened from the railroad camp to Dilley's Mill, a distance of two miles.

W. J. Moore and daughter Miss Mattie are visiting at Academy.

The singing at Mt Zion Friday night was a fizzle on account of rain.

Luther Shrader, of Davis, is visiting friends and relatives in this county.

Rev Anderson preached at Bethel last Sunday.

Uncle Billie Slaton was in town this week.

Clay Dreppard had a large turkey to walk away some nights ago. It seems that stealing has become a common thing of late.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the mucous surfaces of the system thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. PICKING BILLIONS OF FLOWERS.

Work Where the Perfume Industry Is Carried On in France.

Grasse, in the southern part of France, is the centre of the perfume industry. There women and girls may be seen, with broad hats on their heads, gathering flowers from 5 until 11 A. M. and then returning with their fragrant burdens to the houses, where they pluck the leaves from the blossoms and pass the rest of the day in preparing them for the work of extracting the essences of essential oils, which contain the perfume itself.

In March they begin plucking violets, from which violet water is made, and from the beginning of May to the end of June they gather the jessamine, roses and orange blossoms, as well as the tuberoses in July, the mignonette in August and the cassia in September. The nimble fingers of the women must move rapidly to pluck the millions of leaves that go to make up the 1,200,000 kilograms of rose leaves alone that are used each season. Besides there are a million kilograms of jessamine to be plucked, and violets and orange blossoms to the extent of two million kilograms a year. To give an idea of the number of plants that are raised for this huge result, it is calculated that each stalk of jessamine yields two kilograms of blossoms a season. So there must be at least five hundred thousand stalks to yield the million kilograms required.

But the gathering of the blossoms is only the beginning of the work, for then the flowers must be picked apart and all the spoiled leaves thrown aside. Then the making of the perfume begins. The leaves are spread one by one upon layers of pure lard that cover plates of glass. Three or four times these flower-layers are renewed before the lard has absorbed all of the purfume that it can hold for the fat has a peculiar attraction for the essential oils of the flowers. This purfumed lard is the pomade of commerce, not the pomade used for hair or beard but the crude material out of which this is afterward manufactured. The lard is then either shipped as it is to other manufacturers, or put into alcohol which draws off the perfume from the fat, having a stronger attraction therefor than the lard and the result is the finest eau de cologne. Most of this pomade is shipped as it stands to all parts of Europe and America, but some of it is reserved and the oils are extracted by distilling processes, making the purest extracts.—Exchange.

A BROKEN HEART.

Queer Case of a Philadelphia Dog With Two Owners.

Do dogs die of broken heart? That is a question which has frequently excited the interest of dog physicians and of particularly fond owners of canine pets, and with a view to answering that question to a particular owner's satisfaction a post-mortem examination was held recently at the dog hospital of the University of Pennsylvania.

The animal in question was a huge, shaggy English mastiff, white in color, and with a fond attachment for its master, C. B. Mellor of West Philadelphia. It seems that a dispute arose as to the dog's ownership, and one day it was taken away to Haverford by Andrew McPhillips, a drover. McPhillips claimed to have owned the dog two years, but Mellor claimed that the brute was but 16 months old, as the detention of the teeth would show. Mellor then swore out a warrant charging the drover with larceny, and the case was called before Magistrate Jermon in the city hall. Mellor's counsel demanded that a veterinarian be brought into court to testify that the dog's teeth proved to be less than 2 years of age, but the court had been advised that a dog's age could not be determined in that way, so the dog itself was ordered into court to act as a witness in the case. Court was then adjourned till the dumb witness could be summoned, and when the case was called for trial again it was found that the dog had suddenly died. McPhillips brought its body to the city hall in a wagon. The magistrate then quashed all legal proceedings on the ground that both parties in the suit seemed sincere in their claims to ownership. There was evidently a mistake somewhere.

But Mellor did not like the idea of the dog's sudden death, and declared that if his pet was dead it had died of a broken heart, caused by being separated from him, its right master. An autopsy, he averred, would prove it.

McPhillips scornfully gave up the body, and Mellor, with an officer of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, hauled the corpse out to the university veterinary and canine department. There Dr. J. N. Adams, the veterinarian, held a post-mortem examination to determine the cause of the dog's death.

The dog's heart, when cut into, was found to be swelled almost to bursting, and filled with dark, half-coagulated blood. The head and neck veins were swollen and blue, and in places a bloody serum had been forced through the walls of the blood vessels into the cavities of the body.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

SHE WIELDS A CLEAVER.

Miss Daisy Stevenson One of the Few Lady Butchers of the Country.

Rochester has been referred to by some envious persons as a "back number," but she can boast of being a leader with but a single exception in one respect—that of a female butcher. The name of this fair knight of the saw and cleaver is Miss Daisy Stevenson, and she disposes of her wares at an up-to-date little market at the corner of Plymouth avenue and Grieg street. The proprietor is a modest, unassuming little woman, 28 years of age, slightly below the average height, and fair. She is a brilliant conversationalist and possesses exceptional executive abilities. Miss Stevenson has now been cutting meat for a living for two years and three months, having first undertaken the task when her father, who had become sick and unable to carry on his work, concluded to take a rest for a few weeks. Miss Stevenson was at that time keeping the books for the concern. Rather than allow strangers to take the business, Miss Stevenson opened the market and continued the business just as though nothing had happened. Under her management the trade was steadily increased, until now it is established upon a firm basis.

When asked how she liked the work she replied: "It is not through choice that I do the work, but because it is a means of support for the family. It was difficult at first, but now it does not seem harder than home work. I am my own boss, which means a great deal. I open the market at 6:30 in winter and 6 in summer. I find it difficult to get good help; any one can sell cut goods, but it is the odds and ends which go to make up the profit, and which must be disposed of as well. I seldom lose any thing from bad accounts, as my customers are prompt. If I send a statement and receive no returns, I immediately drop those people from my roll and refuse to trust them again."

So far as can be learned there is but one other woman in the United States who is at present pursuing this business as a means of livelihood, and that one is in Syracuse. During the rereturns, I immediately drop these peothing which attracted his attention was the evident satisfaction with which the patrons received goods. There was not the usual fault-finding as to weight and quality of the meat; in fact, several went so far as to say that it was an exceptionaly good cut. Miss Stevenson went about her work in a manner which denoted the utmost confidence.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

SEEDING RAISINS.

Machines Will do it at the Rate of Ten Tons Daily.

Unlike the eastern imitation, the California seeded raisin is subjected to a dry temperature of 140 degrees Fahrenheit from three to five hours, after which the fruit is submitted to a chilling process, and while in this reduced condition of temperature is passed through the cleaning or "brushing" machines, which remove every particle of dust and capstems, thus making it a pure and wholesome article. It is then taken automatically by elevators to a room where spread upon wire trays, it is exposed to a temperature of 130 degrees Fahrenheit, which brings the fruit back to its normal condition, and in this "processing" the berry is converted into pectin, that delicous jelly which gives to fruit its best flavor.

The raisins having been prepared through this alternate heating and chilling to keep indefinitely and resist climatic influence are passed through seeding machines, each of which has a capacity of from ten to twelve tons daily. The raisins are pressed between rubber or similar surfaced rollers, which at first flatten the berry and press the seed to the surface, when an impaling roller catches the seeds between its needles, or teeth, affixed to its periphery deftly removing them from the fruit, while the latter passes on, minus its seeds, but possessing evry particle of its flesh. The seeds are removed from the roller by a "flicking" or whisking device, and are sent along to the seed receptacle, finally ending their journey in the engine room, where they are burned as fuel.

Four hundred and fifty carloads of ten tons each, or 9,000,000 pounds of seeded raisins, were shipped from the Fresno district last year, and a very much larger tonnage will be turned out this year.

Some estimate can be formed of the possibilities of the Fresno seeded raisin plants when it is stated that their aggregate capacity for this season will approximate from 1,700 to 2,000 carloads, while it is probable that 1,400 cars will be the output. Each seeding plant has from five to twelve machines of ten tons daily capacity per machine. Some of the packing houses cover a ground space 150 by 225 feet and are three stories high.—California Vineyard.

There have been poultry books printed costing fifteen dollars and more, but there never has been one at any price with more beautiful colored reproductions of poultry, than those found in the Biggle Poultry Book, an announcement of which appears in another column. The paintings were made direct from best birds of the different breeds, and the coloring and characterictic shape of each breed are perfect. As for the text there never was a book printed containing more prrctical, level-headed information. Its chapters include, Eggs for Hatching, Hatching the Eggs, Care of Chicks With Hens and Brooders, The Successful Care of Incubators, The Farmer's Flock, The Village Hennery; chapters on Breeds, on Fattening and Marketing, and Diseases and Remedies, with the old and new school methods of treatment. One man wrote the publishers that "The mottoes, alone, at each chapter heading were worth the cost of the book." Twenty thousand copiee of this admirable work have been printed. See advertisement of The Biggle Books in this week's issue of The Times. The price is 50 cents, free by mail; address the publishers, Wilmer Atkinson Co., Philadelphia.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

State of West Virginia, Pocahontas County, } ss.

VIRTUE.

Sweet day so cool, so calm, so bright,
The bridal of the earth and sky;
The dews shall weep thy fall to-night:
For thou must die.

Sweet rose whose hue, angry and brave,
Bids the rash gazer wipe his eye;
Thy root is ever in its grave,
And thou must die.

Sweet spring, full of sweet days and roses;
A box where sweets compacted lie;
Thy music shows ye have your closes,
And all must die.

Only a sweet and virtuous soul,
Like seasoned timber, never gives;
But, tho' the whole world turn to coal
Then chiefly lives.

County Sketches

The Editor's Revenge.

The editor of the Greenville Avalanche took life seriously. He even took politics seriously, and when a country editor does that he is in the habit of ascribing every ill to which he is heir to the policy of the opposing party, and he is able to discover many villainous intentions which are only to be thwarted by the exposure of the plans, such as an editor is able to make. When the villains see who pursues them they abandon their evil scheme, trying to make out the editor to be a false prophet. "Common liar" is the word they use when the newspaper cries, "Stop, thief, in your contemplated steal!"

For a century or so the editors have stood sentinel guarding the people's rights, and that is what makes American politics so pure to-day. They arm themselves with words like these: Corruption, bribery, rottenness, trickery, bossism, plutocracy, jobbery, favoritism. They do not content themselves, like the city papers which have no real faith in goodness, with clean, penetrating, artistic thrusts. When they go after a man they mangle him. They seek to reform him with an axe.

Theodore Potts, the editor of the Avalanche's motto was that a paper without a policy was as a man without a soul. He arraigned the Republican party once a week at the bar of public opinion. Every now and then he would be startled at the power of his words and say to himself that when the Republican party saw that they would not leave one stone of his office upon another. He edited his paper in a board shante, but he liked the figure. Yet his office remained standing, and the Republicans continued to exist in considerable numbers. Of late years his pen has been particularly galling, for the antiquarians differed somewhat as to what Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson would have done under present circumstances, and it was not altogether safe to advocate any special policy. He thundered at the Administration, but if the Administration was aware of the bombardment it gave no sign.

Now after a particularly severe arraignment of the party in power, Thomas Gardner, a local Democratic politician who had been once mentioned for the office of Justice of the Peace without success, decided to invest a dollar to bring light to a certain brother-in-law who lived in the northern part of the State, and who was so benighted as to vote the Republican ticket. He subscribed for the Avalanche and had it forwarded to his brother-in-law's address. When the letter received it he did not take kindly to the blood and thunder style in which it was conducted and believing that it was a scheme on the part of the editor to make him a compulsory subscriber to his paper, he refused to take the paper from his office, in spite of the wisdom of his wife who had a hankering to read the obituary notices.

The postmaster read the paper for a few weeks while business was slack and he being a devout Republican holding a lucrative office under the government found he was not pleased with it. When he discovered that he did not care to read it, and not till then, he complied with the instructions of the Postmaster General and begged leave to inform the editor on a postal card that his paper addressed to Newton Bellwinder was not taken out of the postoffice of Middletown, but remained dead in said office, and would be please discontinue the same; the reason, Refused.

Now Potts knew Form No. 1528 as far as he could see it and he had never gotten used to receiving these cards. They are unwelcome visitors to country newspaper offices. One of them insures a bad quarter of an hour whenever it arrives. The idea conveyed is gruesome; the product of your brain, the child of your intellect, "remains dead in this office." You will please discontinue the same."

"Of all the said words, the saddest are these, 'It remains dead in this office,'" quoth Mr Potts. But in this case he did not like the idea of returning the dollar. It was impossible besides, for it had been spent, so he compromised with his conscience, said nothing and continued to send the paper and paid no attention whatever to the notice nor those that followed it.

The week before Christmas Potts was informed that there was an express package at the railroad office for him, and he called for it in person. The depot agent grinned as he delivered it, for it was a large, wholesome looking package marked, "GLASS. HANDLE WITH CARE." The charges on it amounted to 80 cents. This was paid cheerfully, and the agent said: "Touch not, taste not, handle with care!" Potts took the box home and opened it in the editorial sanctum after office hours. The contents besides some rubbish were three copies of Greenville Avalanche, addressed to Newton Bellwinder, Middletown, West Virginia. The postmaster was a practical joker and had expressed him some copies of the paper he had been sending to the refractory Bellwinder. The editor was out 80 cents in money and a barrelful of hope.

It was a dirty trick and a dangerous one to play on the common enemy, the printer. Potts took it hard. He stated the case to the department in Washington, setting out the whole facts as we know them. The Administration seeks to be the same kind father to the loyal postmaster and the ungrateful editor who scourges it in his paper, but the clerk who opened the letter in the department smiled when he read it and went smirking to lay it before his chief for his delectation.

Now the chief had been a country editor in his youth and there had been a time when his papers lay dead in strange offices through no fault of his, and he took the letter seriously. He looked up with a frown at his smiling clerk and said:

"Our postmaster seems to be inclined to get too funny, Mr Manners."

"Very uncalled for thing to do, I am sure," said the clerk, taking the cue instantly.

The department wrote a polite inquiry to the postmaster asking for an explanation. This made him slightly uneasy. He explained that it was all a joke. In a few days another letter was forwarded him from the department asking him his reason for returning second class mail matter by express without prepaying the charges on the same. He then sent the editor the amount of the express charges and announced the fact in a letter to headquarters. The department then said that his conduct was so unusual in the service, that perhaps he had better resign. By this time the postmaster was mourning that he had ever had anything to do with the Avalanche and he wrote a rather incoherent letter to the department saying that he had a wife and children dependent upon him and that he had forfeited a good position by taking the postoffice, and that he was now starting to Greenville to make reparation to the editor he had outraged and hoped to have the charges withdrawn.

He went to Greenville and groveled before the editor. Potts let him squirm for a time and then intimated that he might not prove implacable. The two being men of business soon arranged a compromise by which the postmaster became poorer and wiser, and the editor wrote to say that finding the loss of the office would be a great blow to a poor man with a large family, and as ample apologies had been tendered him, he hoped the department would overlook the matter, and so the incident was closed.

An Old Poem.

The following lines were written long since by James F. Slaven, late of Missouri. The young lady alluded to so pathetically was Miss Laura Campbell, who died unexpectedly at the age of nineteen more than fifty years since from the effects of exposure to a heavy rain and flood at the close of a September day spent with a select and happy nutting party on the Alleghany ridges west of Meadow Dale, Highland County. She and Mr Slaven were engaged to be married in a few weeks. On the day of her burial,—one of the saddest ever witnessed in that vicinity,—Miss Isabella Campbell, now Mrs Moses Moore, near Frost, a special friend as well as near relative of the lamented deceased, procured a tress of her beautiful hair and gave it to Mr Slaven. This he treasured for years and finally had it used in forming the name LAURA on perforated cardboard and was a book-mark for his Bible. Since his decease this book-mark and these verses were sent to Mrs Moore. To gratify her and the numerous friends of both of them they are printed in this issue of The Times.

A LITTLE RAVEN TRESS.

Here is a little raven tress
Of soft, unbraided hair,
The all that's left of loveliness
That once was thought so fair.

And yet, tho time has dimmed its sheen
Tho all beside hath fled,
I hold it here a link between
The living and the dead.

Yet from this shining ringlet still
A mournful memory springs
That melts my heart and sends a thrill
Through all its trembling strings.

I think of her, the loved, the wept,
Upon whose forehead fair,
For seventeen years like sunshine slept
This raven curl of hair.

Oh, sunny tress! the joyous brow
Where thou didst lightly wave,
With all thy sister tresses now
Lies cold within the grave.

That cheek is of its bloom bereft,
That eye no more is gay;
Of all her beauties thou art left
A solitary ray.

With sorrow, time has passed away,
Since last we fondly met,
And parted—yet it seems too soon
To let the heart forget;

Too soon to let that lovely face
From my sad thoughts depart,
And to another give the place
She held within my heart.

Her memory still within my mind
Retains its sweetest power;
It is the perfume left behind
To tell us of the flower.

Each blossom that in moments gone
Bound up this precious curl,
Recalls the form, the look, the tone,
Of that enchanting girl.

Her step was like an April rain
O'er beds of violets flung,
Her voice the prelude to a strain
Before the song is sung.

Her life was like a half blown flower,
Closed ere the shades of even;
Her death the dawn, the blushing hour
That opes the gates of Heaven.

A single tress—how slight a thing
To sway such magic art,
And bid such soft remembrance spring
Like blossoms in the heart.

It leads me back to days of old—
To her I loved so long,
Whose heart in kindness did unfold
Loved truth and hated wrong.

A lonely, shining tress of hair

The Battle of Magersfontaine.

This picturesque account of the battle comes from the London Daily News' Australian correspondent, who writes as follows:

Our troops extended over many miles of country. Every move had to be made in full view of the enemy upon a level plane where a collie dog could not have moved unperceived by those foemen hidden so securely behind impregnable ramparts. During the whole of Sunday our gunners played havoc with the enemy, the shooting of the naval brigade being of such a nature that even thus early in the fight the big gun of the blue jackets, with its 42 pound lyddite shell, struck terror into the hearts of the enemy. But the Boers were not idle. Whenever our infantry, in manoeuvring, came within range of their rifles, our ranks began to thin out, and the blood of our gallant fellows dyed the sunbaked veldt in richest crimson.

During the night that followed, it was considered expedient that the Highland Brigade, about four thousand strong, under Gen. Wauchope, should get close enought to the lines of the foe to make it possible to charge the heights. At midnight the gallant but ill-fated General moved cautiously through the darkness toward the kopje where the Boers were most strongly intrenched. They were led by a guide who was supposed to know every inch of the country, out into the darkness of an African night. The brigade marched in line of quarter column, each man stepping cautiously and slowly, for they knew that any sound meant death. Every order was given in a hoarse passed along the ranks from man to man; nothing was heard as they moved toward the gloomy, steel-fronted heights but the brushing of their feet in the veldt grass and the deep drawn breaths of the marching men.

So, onward, until 3 o'clock on the morning of Monday. Then out of the darkness a rifle rang, sharp and clear, a herald of disaster—a soldier had tripped in the dark over the hidden wires laid down by the enemy. In a second, in the twinkling of an eye, the search-lights of the Boers fell broad and clear as the noonday sun on the ranks of the doomed Highlanders, though it left the enemy concealed in the shadows of the frowning mass of hills behind them. For one brief moment the Scots seemed paralized by the suddenness of their discovery, for they knew that they were huddled together like sheep within fifty yards of the trenches of the foe. Then, clear above the confusion, rolled the voice of the General: "Steady, men, steady!" And, like an echo to the veterans, out came the crash of nearly a thousand rifles not fifty paces from them. The Highlanders reeled before the shock like trees before the tempest. Their best, their bravest, fell in that wild hail of lead. Gen. Wauchope was down, riddled with bullets; yet gasping, dying, bleeding from every vain, the Highland chieftain raised himself on his hands and knees and cheered his men forward. Men and officers fell in heaps together.

The Black Watch charged, and the Gordons and the Seaforths, with a yell that stirred the British camp below, rushed onward to death and disaster. The accursed wires caught them round the legs until they floundered like trapped wolves and all the time the rifles of the foe sang the song of death in their ears. Then they fell back, broken and beaten, leaving nearly thirteen hundred dead and wounded just where the broad breast of the grassy veldt melts into the [illegible] ... [illegible]

[illegible] have hoped to pass. All that mortal man could do the Scots did; they tried, they failed, they fell, and there is nothing left us now but to mourn for them and avenge them, and I am no prophet if the day is distant when the Highland bayonet will write the name of Wauchope large and deep in the best blood of the Boers.

All that fateful day our wounded men lay close to the Boer lines un a blazing sun; over their heads the shots of friends and foes passed without ceasing. Many a gallant deed was done by comrades helping comrades; men who were shot through the body lay without water, enduring all the agony of thirst engendered by their wounds and the blistering heat of the day; to them crawled Scots with shattered limbs, sharing the last drop of water in their bottles, and taking messages to be delivered to mourning women in the cottage home of far off Scotland. Many a last farewell was whispered by pain-drawn lips in between the ringing of the rifles; many a rough soldier with tenderest care closed the eyes of a brother in arms amidst the tempest and the stir of battle, and above it all, Conje, the Boer General, must have smiled grimly, for well he knew that where the Highland Brigade had failed, all the world might falter. All day long the battle raged; scarcely could we see the foe—all that met our eyes was the rocky heights that spoke with tongues of flame whenever our troops drew near. We could not reach their lines; it was murder, grim and ghastly, to send the infantry forward to fight a foe they could not see and could not reach. Once our Guards made a brilliant [illegible] torrent their resistless valor bore all before them, and for a few brief moments they got within hitting distance of the foe. Well did they avenge the slaughter of the Scots; The bayonets, like tongues of flame passed above or below the rifles' guard and swept through brisket and breastbone. Out of their trenches the Guardsman tossed the Boers, as men in English harvest fields toss the hay when the reapers' have whitened the cornfields; and the human streams were plentiful where the British Guardsmen stood. Then they fell back, for the fire from the heights above them fell thick as the spume of the surf on an Australian rock-ribbed coast. But the guards had proved to the Boers that, man to man, the Briton was his master.

In vain all that day Methuen tried by every rule he knew to draw the enemy; vainly the Lancers rode recklessly to induce those human rock limpets to come out and cut them off. Conje knew the mettle of our men, and ironic laugh played round his iron mouth, and still he stayed within his native fastness; but death sat ever at his elbow, for our gunners dropped the lyddite shells and the howling shrapnel all along his lines, until the trenches ran blood, and many of his guns were silenced. In the valley behind his outer line of hills his dead lay piled in hundreds and the slope of the hill was a charnal house where the wounded writhed amid the masses of the dead; a ghastly tribute to British gunners. For hours I stood within speaking distance of the great naval gun as it spoke to the enemy, and such a sight as their shooting the world has possibly never witnessed. Not a shell was wasted; and as if on the decks of a pleasure yatch our tars moved through the fight obeying orders with smiling alacrity. Whenever the signal came from the balloon above us that the enemy were moving behind their lines the sailors sent a message from England into their midst, and the [illegible] ... [illegible]

Police Intelligence.

On New Year's Day, 1900, at the World Wide street police court John Bull, an elderly gentleman was charged before Mr Hardtruths with traveling as a first-class Power with a third-class ticket. Evidence was given by O. P. Kruger, a Dutchman, who, in giving his evidence, remarked that he hated frauds, especially pious ones; he stated that the prisoner Bull had been carrying on the fraud for nearly twenty-five years, and that he had always been reluctant to appear as a witness for the prosecution until he could be absolutely certain of the facts. He had given information to two European inspectors, but they had been loth to take action, and had it not been for the fact that the prisoner Bull had recently dropped his third-class season ticket when sitting in a first-class carriage the facts as now stated might never have been discovered. Mr Hardtruths convicted the prisoner and thanked Kruger for his kindness in coming forward. Bull was sentenced to a fine of one hundred millions, as he was understood to be rich. The fine was at once paid and Mr Hardtruths handed the money over to the English War Office, which, he informed the court, had recently gone into some greatly needed alterations and repairs.—Westminister Gazette.

Senator Beverage's speech in support of the Administration's Philippine management is pronounced to have been a very brilliant effort, and is complimented by the friends of expansive imperialism. Senator Hoar, however, in his good old-fashioned republican way, being most too old to learn new tricks, commented on the speech of his brother Senator in this vein. He said that practically every statement of fact made by Senator Beverage was refuted by official reports from Admiral [illegible] Philippine officials. And by way of a back action compliment Senator Hoar remarked that the eloquence and beauty of the speech as a whole recalled to his mind the incident of Satan taking Christ to a high mountain and promising him everything in sight if he would only kneel down and worship him. Christ replied, "Get thee behind me, Satan"; and so Mr Hoar hopes and believes the American people will sooner or later say, "Get thee behind me imperialistic tempter?" Mr Hoar had also a great regret on his mind to the effect that Mr Beverage filled his speech so full of "wealth" and "glory" and like things that there was no place in the speech left for such words as "right," "justice," "duty," and "freedom." The eminent Senator from Massachusetts is a Republican and conscientiously opposed to the Administration's imperialistic policy.

There have been poultry books printed costing fifteen dollars and more, but there never has been one at any price with more beautiful colored reproductions of poultry, than those found in the Biggle Poultry Book, an announcement of which appears in another column. The paintings were made direct from best birds of the different breeds, and the coloring and characteristic shape of each breed are perfect. As for the text, there never was a book printed containing more practical, level-headed information. Its chapters include, Eggs for Hatching, Hatching the Eggs, Care of Chicks With Hens and Brooders, The Successful Care of Incubators, The Farmer's Flock, The Village Hennery, chapters on Breeds, on Fattening and Marketing, and Diseases and Remedies, with the old and new school methods of treatment. POLITICS.

The State Executive Committee of the Democratic party met in Charleston last Thursday and set the date for the holding the State convention and selected the place.

The meeting was harmonious and the sentiment of the leaders who attended might be voiced in the following couplet:

While the lamp holds out to burn
The vilest gold-bug may return.

Colonel McGraw, the leader of the party in the State, was present and took an active part in the business before the committee. The State convention is to be held at Parkersburg, Wednesday, June 6. The convention comes earlier this year by about two months than has been the custom, and probably means that the Democrats of this county will have to utilize the April court for holding the convention to select delegates instead of June court as usual. The representation is based on the vote for the head of the ticket in 1896, one delegate for every hundred votes and fraction thereof, giving Pocahontas 10 delegates.

The conventions to nominate delegates to the national convention will be held in each Congressional district May 1. The representation will be the same.

x

The executive committee of the party in Pocahontas county is composed of 14 persons. The present members are:

L. M. McClintic, Chairman; B. F. McElwee, C. A. Lightner, Dr. C. L. Austin, J. C. Price, G. W. Mann, John Waugh, J. C. Loury, John A. Moore, M. F. Herold, Dr F. T. McClintic, C. E. Beard, G. R. Curry, and Andrew Price, Secretary.

As the occasions of the holding times at which anything like a full representation of the voters of this extensive county can be gathered together at any one place, the chairman has intimated that he will call the committee together at the March county court to afford an opportunity for arranging for a convention to select delegates at the April court. By June court the conventions will have been held.

x

We are authorized to say that Uriah Bird, of this place, will be before the people this year for Sheriff. He is a first class business man and stands high in the estimation of all who know him. One good thing about his candidacy is his expressed intention that in case he is elected he will pay the fees and give a Security Company on his bond. We do not know whether he wants this mentioned at this time, but this feature of the sheriffalty race meets with such universal approval that we take the liberty of letting it be known.

x

Too much can not be said in praise of "buying a bond." Business men will not see a friend fail for want of a bond, but after they lend their names they do not know how the business is being conducted. A security company, on the other hand, personally supervises the business and sees that the public funds are kept separate and apart from individual accounts and that the settlements are made promptly each year. The security company believes in preventing a failure and in the majority of the cases where sheriffs have gone under they would have been saved if they had had a security company to keep them up to the mark. We hope to see the practice of buying a bond become universal in this county. The first security company's bond ever filed in this county was accepted last October.

We hear from several sources that E. N. Moore, one of the leading men of Green Bank district, will probably be a candidate for Sheriff. [illegible] of the snake is the cure for its bite."

x

We take pleasure in recommending to the party T. S. McNeel who announces himself for the office of prosecuting attorney in this issue. He is a member of one of our representative families, and if there is any truth in the adage to the effect that "blood is thicker than water," he will not lack for votes when the time comes. He is thoroughly well grounded in the law and perfectly competent for the position.

x

We wish to nail another campaign lie. Joe Buzzard has been accused of stealing a hound pup. The truth of the matter is that another man took the dog and it came to Mr Buzzard's house. He took care of it and delivered it on demand to the owner, J. W. Yeager of this place. Do not allow yourself to be influenced by the canard.

x

S. B. Scott, Jr., is "in our midst" again, and we gather from an interview with him that in all probability his friends will have an opportunity to vote for him for prosecuting attorney.

x

A brief statement of a practical principal derived by an ex-candidate from actual experience is:

"When a man promises to vote for you, take his note for it."

METAPHYSICS.

An item in the Times some weeks since in reference to thirty persons being shot and killed for deer and others wounded during the hunting season, has awakened a train of reflection regarding a singular characteristic of the human mind. Perhaps it would not be out of place to say that this characteristic has been a theme of very earnest controversy among mental experts from time almost immemorial, and lies at the basis of some very dangerous opinions in reference to morals and statesmanship and jurisprudence.

[illegible] sees what is looked for and expected. A citizen tells how he was looking for a horse in a mountain pasture and saw what he was certain was his horse and started for him, and when he came within a hundred yards found out that it was a red cow instead of a sorrel horse. Had he left the pasture at the time he thought he saw the horse he would have been willing to qualify he saw the horse with his own eyes and could not be mistaken. The same person tells how he saw an object in the road, near a place notorious for rattlesnakes, and was certain it was a snake and made preparations to kill it when near enough to hit, found out that it was a mere stick.

A party near Edray went turkey hunting. They separated, some to beat the bushes and others to wait developments. One of the party in waiting heard a noise and looking in the direction saw an object that he was certain was a firstclass gobbler and prepared to shoot and snapped repeatedly, but the gun missed fire. Gave the gun a careful examination, and when prepared to make a sure thing of it saw it was a boy's cap he had been snapping at, one of the party sent out to do the beating.

A party from Hill's Creek went to a famous blackberry patch to kill a bear that was known to be about from the sign. They took a position and were in waiting. In a short while a noise was heard in the briers, and from the glimpses obtainable nothing seemed more certain than it was the looked for bear coming right to them. One of the party took aim and was just in the act of pulling the trigger when he saw a man's head reaching up and pulling down a brier to get the berries. It was John B. Kennison, who had been out salting his cattle and had heard there was a party in the patch, one of whom he wanted to see on business.

Many years ago, when Andrew Herold near Frost was a young man he saw on the hillside opposite his dwelling what he was certain to be a bear [illegible] climbing the hill. [illegible] and coming down to the road. It was an old school master on his usual Saturday jag, and had been playing bear for his own amusement. Now had it been in the day of Winchesters, or other long-range guns, Mr Herold would have simply gone to the yard fence and brought down his game without the trouble of trying to get within a hundred yards by creeping two or three hundred yards behind a cross fence.

A citizen of our county, fully up to the average citizenship for mental and acquired endowments, if not a degree higher than the average, went to a home to meet the proprietor on some business requiring immediate attention.

When near the house he heard him apparently in earnest conversation, and believing him to be preoccupied at the time, concluded not to go in the house but call on his return an hour or two later.

Circumstances, however, developed the fact that the proprietor was miles away at the moment in question, and were it not for these circumstances that citizen would have been ready to qualify on a "stack of Bibles" high as the court house that to the best of his knowledge and belief that at such a place and hour he heard that person talking to some one at his own home. That citizen expected at that place and hour to meet the person referred to, and what he expected he all the same as saw; and was just as certain that he was at home as if he had actually seen and talked with him.

The moral of this is obvious and it goes to explain many things in various aspects in the workings of the human mind, that people usually see what they wish to see, or are expecting to see. Now before they act they ought to take special pains to get at the facts of the case in hand, even if some deer should get away, or some cherished opinions changed or given up.

—W. T. PRICE.

We are ready to do the sackcloth and ashes act that we ever said a harsh word concerning poor old England. We had supposed a county or two in South Africa, and that her back was broad enough to bear all the gibes to which she was subject. In this day of defeat and real misery we extend our sympathy, reminding her that she had better "retire" from South Africa without honor than to sacrifice more good men in her vain attempt to secure this Naboth's vineyard.

Do You Want Consumption?

We are sure you do not. Nobody wants it. But it comes to many thousands every year. It comes to those who have had coughs and colds until the throat is raw, and the lining membranes of the lungs are inflamed. Stop your cough when it first appears, and you remove the great danger of future trouble.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

stops coughs of all kinds. It does so because it is a soothing and healing remedy of great power. This makes it the greatest preventive to consumption.

At Bull Run

Comrade Chas. Elms, of Mechanicsville, N. Y., was struck by a piece of shell which later caused severe heart trouble. He says:

"At second Bull Run a piece of shell lodged in my shoulder, and later rheumatism set in, which in turn affected my heart to such extent that several doctors pronounced my case incurable. Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure relieved my pains, shortness of breath and enabled me to work; also to sleep soundly, and prolonged my life."

DEED BOOK STATISTICS.

As an indication of the unusual amount of land which changed hands last year it may be mentioned that the County Clerk filled a 500 page deed-book from March 30th to November 14th, or in 7 months and 15 days. This does not include the trust deeds as they were recorded in another book. The deed book referred to is No. 29. No. 28 lasted 16 months and 22 days.

The county has been formed nearly 78 years and in that time the number of deed books has risen to 30, the one now being filled. Of these No. 24 is used to record the deeds to the town lots in Marlinton and is not quite full.

Deed-book No. 1 was sufficient to record the transfers from Feb. 18, 1822, to April 16, 1832. The [illegible] hontas is from Thomas Cochran to James Rankin.

x

In the adjoining county of Randolph the numbering of the deed-books has led to some confusion. The founders of that county showed their simplicity or their mistrust in the stability of the world by lettering their deed-books A, B, C, etc. The end of the alphabet was reached long ago, and clerk had to resort to numbers.

PEOPLE vs SCOTT.

The case of John T. McGraw and 49 members of the West Virginia Legislature, remonstrants against N. B. Scott, was argued before the committee of the United States Senate last Saturday.

The Democratic side of the case was presented by Messrs John H. Holt, Frank L. Welles, and Henry M. Russell.

Ex-Senator Faulkner occupied the anomalous position of a West Virginia Democrat fighting for a Republican against every Democratic member of the legislature which had twice heaped honors on his unworthy head. His argument was mainly that what the legislature of West Virginia had done was a sealed book not to be opened by the United States Senate. To argue that whatever is, is right is to argue that whatever has been was right.

His argument was weak but still he spoke as one not without hope that he would prevail.

A Night of Terror

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she would die from pneumonia before morning" writes Mrs S. H. Lincoln who attended her that fearful night, but she begged for Dr King's New Discovery, which had more than once saved her life, and cured her of consumption. After taking, she slept all night. Further use entirely cured her." This marvelous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Only 50c and $1. [illegible]

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

At Rules held in clerk's office of the circuit court of Pocahontas County, on the 1st Monday of January, 1900.

Mary Nottingham, Plaintiff
vs.
Amos C. Nottingham, Defendant

The object of this suit is to obtain a divorce from the bonds of matrimony existing between the plaintiff and the defendant and also to recover of the defendant alimony and funds to carry on this suit.

This day came the plaintiff by her attorney and upon her motion and it appearing by affidavit filed that the defendant Amos C. Nottingham is a non-resident of the State of West Virginia it is ordered that he do appear here within one month after the first publication of this order and do what is necessary to protect his interest in this suit.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

To the Voters of Pocahontas County:

I hereby announce myself a candidate for the office of Prosecuting Attorney of Pocahontas County for the ensuing term, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary.

Thanking my many friends for their hearty support in the last primary, I promise that if elected I will discharge the duties of the office without fear or favor, with all the ability I possess, and with the dignity the office demands.

Respectfully,
W. A. BRATTON.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for the office of Prosecuting Attorney for Pocahontas County, subject to the action of the Democratic party. Very respectfully,
T. S. McNEEL.

The address of E. L. Dunn, Supervisor of the Census for this Congressional district, is Alderson W. Va.

Lost—A fire insurance rate book between Mill Point and Marlinton. The finder will please return to T. S. McNeel, Marlinton, W. Va.

The central telephone office is now located over the Pocahontas Bank. The town will be rewired in a few weeks, placing each phone on a separate wire.

Mrs F. M. Durbin, who is well and pleasantly remembered by many of the Marlinton residents, died at Grafton Friday morning, January 19th.

Superintendent James W. Warwick informs us that, owing to the illness of his wife, he will be compelled to abandon the further visitation of the schools of our county for this year.

The Bank of Marlinton has purchased the lot adjoining its present banking house for $550. The two lots will form the site for its new brick banking house which it will erect this year.

Marlinton will have a brass band at an early date. There is an abundance of good material here. The young ladies will give a benefit to raise funds. A number of men have subscribed liberally besides.

Justice Bird turned over to the county clerk $51, the amount of the fines which he has collected during the past year. If we had had the town incorporated this sum could have been expended on the streets.

A report has been circulated that Douglas McNeil of Swago was exposed to smallpox while on his recent trip to Washington. Upon inquiry we find that he was with a man who was taking the measles, at Millboro, which gave rise to the report.

Owing to the unsettled status of the court house matter, Judge Holt thought it best not to hold court on January 21st and adjourned until everything be arranged so as to know whether Beverly or Elkins is the proper legal place for holding court.

In printing the list of directors of the Bank of Marlinton last week the name of W. W. Beard was inadvertently omitted. The board is as follows: M. J. McNeel, J. C. Gay, W. W. Beard, Dr C. L. Austin, Dr J. W. Price, Isaac McNeel, S. H. Clark, Henry Barlow, J. C. Price, Dr J. P. Mooman, M. L. Beard, and B. F. McElwee.

A deed has been admitted to record conveying the hotel near the bridge from C. R. Durbin to H. A. Yeager. This property consists of a large frame house and an acre of ground. The prospect of early railroad development in 1882 was the cause of the erection of the building. It was the subject matter of a long chancery suit which finally confirmed the title in Mr Durbin, who purchased it at public auction from a trustee. The consideration mentioned in the deed is $3500.

Saved Death Off

E. B. Munday, a lawyer of Henrietta, Tex., once fooled a grave digger. He writes: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters, and he was soon much better and continued their use until he was wholly cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life." This remedy expels malaria, kills disease germs and purifies the blood; aids digestion, regulates the liver, kidneys and bowels, cures constipation, dyspepsia, nervous diseases, [illegible]

From the Lumber Camps of Williams River

William Gray is logging the Gauley River. He is putting in in the timber on the disputed tract of land between the Gauley Company and the Pratt heirs, the former buying the timber. He has in about five million feet.

Isenhart is logging the Little Fork. The Middle Fork, Driving Company is logging the Middle Fork, W. McClintic general superintendent. He has about forty men, and has cut about seven million feet. Sliding has been fine for a week or so. The company has about four million slid in and three to slide. They slide day and night in good sliding weather.

Some of the boys have gone home to take the measles. Our favorite teamster O. W. Kellison is one.

A Mr Philips was badly but not seriously hurt at P. Henry's camp. Dr McNeel was in to see him and says he will be out in a few days. The Doctor is not afraid to tackle the road. He is a great favorite with the men.

W. McClintic is off to Camden on business.

Pat Kearney of Pennsylvania is doing the scaling for the Company
LONG LIZZIE.

Fish Hatchery.

A bill has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Elkins appropriating $25,000 for establishing a fish hatchery at some point yet to be determined in West Virginia. Its passage is regarded as certain.

If Pocahontas County does not secure this institution it will be one more case of the miscarriage of governmental affairs which are deplorably frequent.

Within a radius of fifty miles the Potomac, the James, Greenbrier, Tygarts Valley, Cheat, Gauley, Elk, Williams, Cranberry and Cherry Rivers head.

The list is so long we may have omitted a few important water-courses. These are the streams to be stocked and nowhere can they be so conveniently reached.

Within a mile of the Greenbrier Railway, on Swago Creek, a spring issues from a cave in sufficient volume to turn a mill. This stream, which is cold, clear and pure, has never been known to freeze. It would make an ideal place for a fish hatchery.

If the commission will only compare the facilities Pocahontas county offers with that of other fields we will have no fears of the result.

Robert Ward Price.

Died at Edray, W. Va., Monday afternoon, January 29, 1900, Robert Ward, second son of Dr J. W. and Mrs Lura Price, aged three years and twelve days. His ailment was pneumonia complicated with meningitis, and his sufferings for three or four weeks were heart-rending.

Ward was a lovely and interesting child and had greatly endeared himself to his parents and grandparents, so no words can fitly express their sorrow over his suffering and decease. May they consider this sad bereavement as a Bible worthy manifested resignation when a loved child suffered and died.

"While the child was yet alive I fasted and wept; for I said, Who can tell whether God will be gracious to me that the child may live. But now he is dead wherefore should I fast? Can I bring him back again? I shall go to him but he shall not return to me."

Alas how, changed that lovely flower
Which bloomed and cheered my heart.
Fair, fleeting comfort of an hour,
How soon we're called to part.
Hope looks beyond the bounds of time
When what we now deplore
Shall rise in full, immortal prime,
And bloom to fade no more.

Vida Helen Moore

Died, near Sunset on Knapp's Creek, January 14, 1900, 8:20 p. m. Vida Helen, only daughter of Mr and Mrs H. N. Moore, aged 7 months and 10 days. While delicate and fragile in body, Helen was precocious mentally and had greatly endeared herself to her parents by many winning ways.

The bereaved wish special thanks to be tendered friends and neighbors for sympathetic, helpful services during the sickness and the obsequies of their loved child.

That once loved form, now cold and dead,
Each mournful thought employs.
We weep, our earthly comforts fled,
And withered all our joys.
From agonies blasts and lowering storms
Her [illegible] soul [illegible],
And with [illegible] bright angelic forms
She lives to die no more.

FROST.

The past week has been very nice but our roads have no bottom.

Abraham Sharp, who has been sick for the past few days, is better.

Wm. Bussard moved his engine to Armenius Bussard's.

S. P. Sheets has been here two weeks helping Clark Gum in the shop.

Anyone wishing to trade for a good riding or driving mare will do will do well to call on Professor Lantz,

Sherman Curry is getting along well with his wound. His two little children are down with the measles.

Mrs Hannah has been at the bedside of her sick sister at Edray for the past week. We are glad to hear that she is recovering.

Prof. Joseph Lantz was in our place this week. He is teaching a very interesting school four miles below here.

Luther Shrader, of Davis, is on a visit to his son John F. Shrader. He is looking fine and from all appearances doing likewise.

Some horse traders passed thro' our place trying to "swop" with our honest farmers. They have had their eye-teeth cut before.

We have some men here who are taking five grain capsules of sand after each meal, which will give them plenty of grit and put sand in their craws.

Clark Gum, our blacksmith, is turning out some red wagons. He is a good smith, a good neighbor and a firstclass man in the neighborhood.

Marvin Gum and family, who have been in Highland County, where they went to see Mr Gum's mother who was dangerously ill, have returned. He reports her some better.

Old Logie, a twenty-four year old colt, belonging to Aaron Rider, has been on the lift for several days. He should have a gallon of good meal three times a day with a little good hay mixed in.

Frank Patterson, constable, was here for a few days looking after some busines. Mr Patterson is spoken of very highly for Deputy Sheriff. He deserves the office and is a first class man for the place as he is honest and upright in all his dealings. Let us hear from others on this subject.

You know, Mr Editor, that "self praise is half scandal," and has ruined many a good person. Never yet has this old saying been disputed, but many brag and boast; never once thinking of their own faults, believing that they never had any. Oh, Mr Editor, sanctification has never struck this place.

We notice in your last week's paper that Mr John A. Moore's name was mentioned for our next Sheriff. John is a man well spoken of throughout the county, and one that can be relied on and would make us an all-round Sheriff. This is an important office and as business becomes larger it takes more the character of trust. It is a business in which hundreds of people are deeply interested, and it is their desire to have this important office filled with an honest, upright man. So give us Johnny Moore as we are confident the responsibility that will be placed upon him will be carried out to the very letter.

Miss Rish Smith came home on January 20.

Beverly Waugh is slowly recovering from the injury he received from a fall recently.

Newton Duffield got badly hurt early in the month by his wagon running over him. He will be well soon to all appearances.

S. B. Moore, one of our enterprising merchants, has been improving his store house recently.

The measles are spreading among the people in this vicinity but the measle scare is spreading much faster.

There is much sickness through this section, though we hope that the people generally are not seriously ill. Dr Price is kept so closely at home looking home folk that he cannot give much attention to the outside sick.

Geo. P. Moore, who perhaps takes as much or more interest in public matters generally as any one man in this section, put up a phone for the railroad engineers at C. P. Dorr's house at Clover Lick.

E. N. Moore and Deputy Sheets were in town last Thursday on business.

We favor the suggestion made by the Huntersville correspondent in regard to the men we put in office.

The thermometer fell Thursday night but did not break. It went to zero. Cold and stormy and snowing some.

Hon J. W. Warwick, superintendent of schools, was in town last Friday visiting schools. He received a message that his wife was very ill and he left at once.

E. N. Moore, of Dunmore, would make a good Sheriff, and why not bring him out? He is a man all over and any thing entrusted to him will be safe.

G. R. Curry, of Academy, was in town Monday.

Deputy Hill has gone to Lewisburg on business.

Miss Grace Beard was visiting her brother R. M. Beard last week

Rev J. H. Dills closed his series of meetings Sunday night with five conversions.

Dr McNeel was called to McClintic's camp last Sunday.

Miss Pearl Beard has about recovered from an attack of pneumonia.

L. J. R. Dysard, of Green Bank, spent Sunday with his sister, Mrs R. M. Beard.

We are glad to note that Wm. T Beard is recovering.

Harry Beard has about recovered from the pneumonia.

"Sweet Bells Jangled Out of Tune and Harsh."

Shakespeare's description fits thousands of women. They are cross, despondent, sickly, nervous—a burden to themselves and their families. Their sweet dispositions are gone, and they, like the bells, seem sadly out of tune. But there is a remedy. They can use

McELREE'S Wine of Cardui

It brings health to the womanly organism, and health there means well-poised nerves, calmness, strength. It restores womanly vigor and power. It tones up the nerves which suffering and disease have shattered. It is the most perfect remedy ever devised to restore weak women to perfect health, and to make them attractive and happy. $1.00 at all druggists.

For the People, AND
With the People

HONEST IN MOTIVE
FEARLESS IN EXPRESSION
SOUND IN PRINCIPLE.

A newspaper is an educator; there are all kinds of educators, but the man who spends money judiciously and liberally is better able to impart his knowledge than the man who has little or nothing to spend.

THE SUN is the highest type of a newspaper.

THE SUN'S reports from all parts of the United States are unsurpassed.

THE SUN'S Cable Service is the finest known; the troubles in the Philippines and in South Africa demand competent correspondents and vast expenditure of money and labor in getting the news. When you get THE SUN you get news and intelligent presentation of facts with it, as well as carefully prepared articles of editorial writers of highest standing. When you get a daily paper whose principal recommendation is its cheapness, you get the dregs—generally very poor dregs at that.

By mail Fifty Cents a month; six months, $3; one year $6.

State of West Virginia, Pocahontas County, } ss.

At rules held in the clerk's office of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas county, on the 1st Monday of January, 1900.

A. W. Moore, Plaintiff
vs.
John T. McGraw, The Greenbrier River Lumber Company, a corporation duly created and existing under the laws of the State of West Virginia, having its principal place of business in the City of Rochester, county of Monroe, State of New York, and the New York Security and Trust Company, a corporation existing under the laws of the State of New York and located in the City of New York, Trustee, Defendants

The object of this suit is to enforce the collection of a vendor's lien of $2000.00 with interest thereon from August 3d, 1897, subject to a credit of $750.00, paid August 26th, 1898, and the costs of this suit, which lien is reserved in a deed executed by the plaintiff to the Defendant McGraw, on the 3d day of August, 1897, on 2028 acres of land thereby conveyed, which land lies on the waters of Knapp's Creek in Pocahontas county, W. Va., and of Little Back Creek in the county of Bath, Virginia, and which has been conveyed by the said McGraw to the Greenbrier River Lumber Co, and by it to the New York Security and Trust Company.

This day came the plaintiff by his attorney, and on his motion, and it appearing by affidavit filed that the defendant The New York Security and Trust Company, is a corporation, and that no person can be found in said county upon whom process can be legally served, it is ordered that said New York Security and Trust Company (a corporation) do appear here within one month after the date of the first publication hereof, and do what is necessary to protect its interest in this suit.

West Virginia University,

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Premedical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

The object of this suit is to enforce the vendor's lien retained in the deed from Andrew M. McLaughlin and wife to John T. McGraw, dated February 13, 1891, and have the land granted by said deed sold to pay the purchase money due thereon, which now amounts to over $13,000; said land lies in Pocahontas county, West Virginia, and includes a portion of the site of Marlinton.

This day came the plaintiff by his attorneys, and upon their motion and appearing by affidavit filed that diligence has been used on behalf of the plaintiff in this cause to ascertain in what county the defendant Mary Moneypenny is without effect it is ordered that she do appear here within one month after the first publication of this order and do what is necessary to protect her interest in this suit.

THE DIRGE.

What is the existence of man's life,
But open war, or slumbered strife;
Where sickness to his sense presents
The combat of the elements;
And never feels a perfect peace
Till Death's cold hand signs his release.

It is a storm—where the hot blood
Outvies in rage the boiling flood;
And each loose passion of the mind
Is like a furious gust of wind,
Which beats his bark with many a wave
Till he casts anchor in the grave.

It is a flower which buds and grows,
And withers as the leaves disclose,
Whose spring and fall faint seasons keep,
Like fits of waking before sleep;
Then sinks into that fatal mould
Where first its being was enrolled.

It is a dream—whose seeming truth
Is moralised in age and youth;
Where all the comforts he can share,
As wandering as his fancies are;
Till in a mist of dark decay,
The dreamer vanish quite away.

It is a dial which points out
The sunset, as it moves about;
And shadows out in lines of night
The subtle stages of Time's flight;
Till all obscuring earth hath laid
His body in perpetual shade.

It is a weary interlude—
Which doth short joys, long woes, include;
The world the stage, the prologue tears,
The acts vain hopes and varied fears;
The scene shuts up with loss of breath
And leaves no epilogue but death.

—Dr Henry King.

Odds and Ends.

RELIGION AND POLITICS.

Our esteemed Huntersville correspondent's words upon bringing professing Christians out for county offices has set people to thinking, which is all he could ask even if a greater part of them consider his views rather uncharitable.

Among other things it brings up the question whether there are not some following "In His Steps" outside of the church organizations, who may some day belong to the church. The poet said that the name of the one that loved his fellow men was written first on the lists of those who were to enter into light, and this receives Biblical support in the words: "Faith, hope and charity, but the greatest of these is charity." We take that a generous minded man, law abiding, clean, and who provides for his family is not so far from the light that a man who looks back from the pale of the church can say, "We are holier than thou." It widens the breach and makes it harder for that man to join the church where he rightfully belongs.

And when the church attempts to say that none shall work nor prosper nor rule over the people except he who belongs to it, love declines and hate increases in the world. The most un-Christ-like governments we have ever had were those in which the dominant church was the government. In modern times Christ rules the world because his people preach the doctrine of love, and not of coercion nor fear. All modern governments formulate their laws by the Bible, and the world is undoubtedly growing better.

ELKINS FOR THE CAPITAL.

The Charleston Gazette says that the town of Elkins is to try for the capital of West Virginia as soon as the many railroads are completed, which will make it one of the railroad centers of the State. The two roads now under contract, giving the town a connection with the [illegible] Railway, and with Clarksburg, will make it accessible from every part of the State. However the difficulty it is experiencing in [illegible] the county seat of Randolph will be as nothing to the [illegible] that will come in trying to get the capital from the western part of the State. If Senator Elkins has any such designs for his town there will be an opportunity done for Republicans who are friendly to Charleston to [illegible] his wings.

A LA MODE.

The [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the killing of West Virginia's last wolf. For years this wolf has annoyed the sheep raisers in that section of country on Elk River where Randolph, Pocahontas, and Webster join, and it is estimated that it has killed several thousand dollars worth of sheep. For ten years it has been pursued by dogs and men without success. On January 1, 1900, the chase was begun and continued until January 8th, when he was killed by Stopher Hamrick.

Its dollars to doughnuts that this [illegible] hunter is a namesake of the late Captain Stopher of this county, who had many friends in Webster.

There were 15 men and 40 hounds in the chase. The wolf started on Elk River near Peter Hamrick's home. Men were put on the various stands and the first day he was shot at 7 times, the day's work leaving him on Point Mountain.

January 2 the wolf crossed the mountain and was followed nearly to the headwaters of the Back Fork of Elk. January 3 the quarry started back and as he passed near Peter Hamrick's six shots were fired without effect, tho the wolf nearly ran over some of the men.

January 4 he retraced his steps and went nearly to Pickens. During the night he killed a sheep for L. M. Hull. January 5 he went towards Hacker Valley, but was turned back by a party of hunters. January 6 and 7 he was hunted over Point Mountain and around the headwaters of Back Fork. January 8 he was surrounded by men and dogs but broke through the lines. A second time he was surrounded and all the dogs were loosed. As he was passing out of the circle Stopher Hamrick shot and killed him.

CONFERRING TITLES.

The Attorney General of this State has always been brevetted General by his friends as soon as he qualified. This is the way that General C. C. Watts and General Edgar P. Rucker and others receive their titles, and whether they care for this distinguished title or not it sticks to them.

A few years since the writer was in Judge Jackson's court in Charleston, or the United States Court for the District of West Virginia. The court's jurisdiction extended from the determining the rights of property for vast sums of money to the trying a ragged negro for selling a pint of whiskey on pay day. The darkies would be brought in by the deputy marshall and when they would address the court they would get excited and call the Judge "captain," "colonel," or "boss." When he was the recipient of a military title the Judge would thunder, (that is the only way to describe the Judge's voice), "Stop, do n't call me 'captain'," and turning to the bar would add: "I did n't ever belong to the militia."

JUDGE OKEY JOHNSON'S VOICE.

Speaking of stentorian voices, Judge Johnson, the Dean of the University Law School, has a remarkable one. Even in presenting a case to the Supreme Court, where the custom is to be clear and concise rather than impassioned and oratorical, the Judge has been heard for several squares in Charleston. He has been on the Supreme Bench in this State and he is supposed to know how to address the court. When he was leaving Charleston for Morgantown, at a banquet in his honor one after dinner speaker described how sorry they were to lose him, but the next one to rise up reminded his friends that the Judge would still be in speaking distance of them.

A [illegible]

[illegible] of the [illegible] of the Democratic party in former days was [illegible] In 1896 when he [illegible] to McKinley with a lot of [illegible] with the old party [illegible] He is now [illegible] [illegible] rialism he is with Bryan. He says that the issue must be either silver or imperialism and that it can not be both. The impossibility of effecting any silver legislation within the next four years precludes the possibility of the question entering largely in the campaign this year. For a platform he advocates a safe one as follows:

"I would reaffirm the Declaration of Independence, and go to the people on that alone. On such a platform the campaign of 1900 would resemble the campaign of 1800 in its issues, its temper and its results. Who can doubt that Jefferson's immortal work would obtain in 1900 an endorsement as emphatic and as salutory as its author received in 1800?"

The Century Question in Denmark.

Danish diplomacy has never been famous. It used to be said that it "clattered with wooden clogs," which is only another way of saying that the Danes are honest, simple minded folk, not up in lying or subterfuge to the standard of European statecraft. But the little State ought to have a large mark for its performance in the century discussion. It has straddled the fence very neatly.

Called upon to decide the views of the Church upon the ending of the century, the Minister of Education issued an edict in which, after alluding to the "especially festive" fashion in which the question has been debated, he decides that "though the department must hold that New Year's, 1900, does not begin the new century, in view especially of the known fact that both in church and civil affairs 1801 officially began the old, yet one can understand the solemn feelings of many persons upon entering the year which in any event is the boundary line between the two centuries." Hence the clergy of the land were permitted, if they saw fit, to choose for New Year's day any text they wished to preach from in preference to the one set down for that day in the prayer book. Likewise they might, if they so desired, have the church bells rung from midnight to a quarter past twelve.

The ordinary Danish fashion of saluting the New Year is to smash on one's door all the cracked pots and jars that have been saved up for the purpose during the year. A Danish citizen's popularity in his town may be fairly measured on New Year's morning by the size of the pile of potsherd at his door. The racket made in this process of "breaking in" the year is prodigious. With elective texts and the church bells joining in, they must have had a regular Fourth of July over there this "solemn year."—New York Sun.

A rival to Klondike is now in much evidence, owing to information given by Consul Smith, of Victoria, B. C. It is Cape Nome, Alaska, found to be rich in gold, the sands along the coast being exceedingly productive. Five thousand gold seekers are in the district already and sixty-five thousand more are trying to arrange for transportation to the Cape during the coming spring. The distance to Cape Nome is 2,500 miles and all the way by water, hence so much more accessible than Klondike and other points in the interior. The Nome digging cannot be monopolized by grabbers, monopolies and syndicates and hence they are the poor man's diggings. The gold is obtained between tides and gold digging is as free as fishing.

RELIGION AND POLITICS.

Mr Editor—Your article last week from "Voter" of Huntersville brings forcibly to mind that biennial cry for a Christian Government, and that twin abomination the perennial prayer of christians to God to make this a christian nation, and the periodical agitation of the subject of incorporating into the Constitution of the United States some recognition of Christianity.

But what would be the use of any of it unless it be to incorporate into the organic law of the land the prevalent hypocrisy of our private lives.

And just here let me say that anything I may say is not an attack upon true christianity, or any of the teachings of the Divine Master, whom I regard as "chief among ten thousand and one altogether lovely."

But to proceed to look at the result of such measures as are proposed, we have in history ample examples of what will be their result.

When the children of Israel entered the land of Canaan they set up a government modeled by Jehovah himself. We find them there under a patriarchal democracy, of which Jehova held suzerain rights. But soon they tired of this simple form and demanded a king, which the Lord granted them.

"From that time forth the dream of the Hebrew was a dream of imperial splendor. A dream of captive nations bowing before the victorious chariots of Judea's king. The Hebrew missed his high calling; he lost his great opportunity. He forgot the command of his God not to multiply horses for war. The nation of law givers became a nation of warriors, whose armies were ground between the upper and nether millstones of Syria and Egypt. Judah bartered moral for physical power; the law went forth from Rome instead of Jerusalem. Rome became the mother of nations instead of Judea. The people who had kept alive the remains of the arts and sciences through the darkest period of the earth's history has become "a bye-word and a hissing through the nations of the earth."

Thus had man shown his propensity to place the temporal above the spiritual and moral. So well was this understood by the Devil that when he tempted the human nature of our Lord he spread before him the nations of the earth and said to him: "All these shall be thine if thou wilt fall down and worship me!" That is, do not await the slow process of moral power in persuading the hearts of men, and reforming the hearts of the nations; but call for twelve legions of angels! with one fell blow smite the sword from the hand of the Roman cohorts; sweep away the spears of the phalanx; smite the horses with astonishment and their riders with fear!

Behold the answer of the Lord: Thou shalt serve Jehovah alone; not the gods of this world.

Thus he sent forth his disciples upon their mission as teachers, and so great was their power that men declared they had in one generation turned the world upside down. They went forth to the conquest of the world. Behold how quickly they had converted the great Roman empire. The Emperor himself embraces Christianity.

And here the church fell. Men were no longer able to resist the temptation of the Devil as the Master had done. They were willing no longer to wait for "The Stone" to be cut out without hands, so with their own hands they made an imitation stone of clay. Then declared Rome to be a Christian Empire, [illegible] the foundation of the Roman Church so broad and deep that the spiritual kingdom has existed for more than a thousand years, while the temporal kingdom is [illegible] of [illegible] "The Little Book." The [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Luther and Melancthon and Calvin and Knox and Zwingli marshalled the forces of reason and thundered at the gates of the spiritual kingdom.

Men said that the Roman Church was Great Babylon and proclaimed its fall. But what did all the modern churches known as Protestant? They no sooner had the power than they each and all forgot the lessons of Rome and Jerusalem; and had any one of them the power it would repeat in America today the [illegible] of those former times, uniting once more Church and State,—rendering unto Cæsar the things that are God's.

If any doubt this, look at the government of the protestant churches, with their complicated imitations of worldly government; many of them having their spiritual princes, and where they have not these they supply their places by assembly and association to lord it over God's heritage.

No, sir, Christians have nothing to do with the kingdoms of this world; and of for Christians seeking the offices and honors of worldly governments, the very ambition and self-seeking which such quest implies make the pilgrim, bound for the heavenly kingdom, the last man to think or to be thought of for such a place.

No, sir, such places are not for those who follow "in His steps." Neither will this nor any other gentile nation ever be a Christian nation. The iron will not mix with the clay. All the Christian has to do with these things is to condemn the evil and praise the good.

Who is there with ordinary powers of observation can not see that we are even now in a state of social and political disquietude [illegible] the approaching storm of anarchistic socialism is even now ready to drop its deluge of fire upon our devoted heads.

Instead of trying to mix the iron with an imitation stone of clay, let us pray that the stone cut out without hand may soon break in pieces the clay, the iron, the silver, and the gold. Let us preach Christ and salvation, instead of politics and damnation. Let us practice the Golden Rule instead of turning the Church of Christ into a cheap free masonry, whose chief tenet shall be, you help my selfish interests and I will help yours.

A CHEMICAL EXPERIMENT.—Gentlemen, I will now illustrate to you the combustibility of chemical compounds. This experiment, you perhaps know, is delightfully dangerous; it has undoubtedly caused more deaths in various schools and colleges than any other experiment known to science. Only yesterday three laboratories were totally wrecked and five hundred and fifty seven students were instantly killed during the performance of this experiment. When exposed to flew, gentlemen, it explodes with terrific violence. A slight jar will set it off, therefore no one is allowed to wink or breathe while the substance is in the room. Those men under the chairs may save themselves some inconvenience by climbing up to the gallery. That pale individual who is pushing vigorously against the door might better save his strength for future emergencies. The door, gentlemen, is doubly locked and barred. Do n't be alarmed at that distant rumbling; my assistants are only bringing the compound up the stairs and the bomb-proof cases are heavy. Before the experiment begins I feel obliged to inform that [illegible] person in the farthest corner that he had better get up from his knees and open his eyes so he may get the full benefit of the [illegible] Everything is now ready. I will hasten below to the [illegible] and call for the Cambridge fire [illegible] again while my assistant performs the experiment.—Harvard Lampoon.

Whether at Naishypur or Babylon,
Whether the cup with sweet or bitter run,
The wine of Life keeps oozing drop by drop.
The leaves of Life keep falling one by one.

Ah, make the best of what ye may yet spend,
Before we too into the dust descend,
Dust unto dust and under dust to lie,
Sans wine, sans song, sans singer, sans end.

We are no other than a moving row,
Of magic shadow-shapes that come and go,
Round with the sun illumined lantern held,
In Midnight by the Master of the show.

OUR CANDIDATES.

E. N. Moore, who comes out for Sheriff this week, is a wealthy farmer of the Green Bank district who has often been spoken of in regard to to different county offices but who heretofore has never been induced to stand for any of them. He is all that a man should be who seeks an office of trust.

Uriah Bird, of Marlinton, who offers for the Sheriffalty, is well known throughout the county. He has served two terms as Superintendent of free schools, and has for the past term held the justice's place at the county seat. There is no question as to his fitness for the place.

L. M. McClintic, for the Legislature, is a native of Pocahontas County, and has had the advantage of a thorough college training. He is a forcible sort of man and would make Pocahontas an exceptionally good representative. It has been about twenty years since Pocahontas was represented in the law making body by a lawyer. The last lawyer to go to the Legislature from this county was Hon. Geo. H. Moffatt, who was speaker of the house.

Pocahontas people have but one fault to find with Joe Buzzard and his private life and official career, and that is the way he wears his whiskers. They like the painstaking way in which he has assessed the people in the last four years, seeing every taxpayer personally, and they are going to elect him unanimously. But those whiskers are thrown away here. In the Transvaal they would be a great sharpshooting scheme, but we do not appreciate hirsuteness. The odds offered in betting circles with no takers are "ten dollars to one cent that Joe Buzzard will be our next assessor."

KENTUCKY'S DISGRACE.

The effect of the assassination of William Goebel, lawfully Governor of Kentucky, had the effect of righting him in the minds of the people. Before he was shot he was regarded as a politician, wary, shrewd, and not over scrupulous, seeking to overcome Taylor's apparent majority.

When he was shot by an assassin lurking in the same house with Taylor, people remembered at once that Goebel was pursuing strictly legal means to become Governor asserting such rights as could not be denied him. Over 400,000 votes were cast in the late election. On the face of the returns Taylor received 48 per cent and Goebel 47.47 per cent. Nine candidates out of ten would have contested an election where such a small plurality was shown.

The people of Kentucky remembered when Goebel was shot that he was a man who had risen from the ranks by fighting wealthy railroad companies which sought to rule the State. They remembered that here was a man who when he was no longer poor and obscure fought for and upheld the class from which he sprang.

His enemies can not point to one illegal act in his contest. Taylor, on the other hand has much to clear himself of.

He allowed a thousand or so of his partisans to come from his strongholds. The result was that no sooner had they reached town than they patronized the saloons so freely that they had to be sent home. He then barred the way into the executive mansion, where the Frankfort police were seeking the murderer of Goebel. He then proclaimed the legislature adjourned. This may not have been unlawful. It was simply beyond his power. He then ordered the legislature to convene at London, a stronghold of his partisans. He took possession with an armed force of the State House and prevented the legislature meeting. This may be treason. He has disobeyed an injunction of the courts and arrested the officer who served notice on him. On the whole he might be called the "man who dared."

If Kentucky can not take her politics a little more calmly we will unite with petitioners from Indiana and ask that the State of Kentucky be abolished and West Virginia, Tennessee, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio take each equal parts of its territory and govern the people with an iron hand.

PUBLISHERS' NOTES.

The Pocahontas Times begins the year 1900 with the names of more than 1000 subscribers on its books. We have secured the 100 new subscribers we aimed to get by last New Years, and 193 persons so far have taken advantage of our great offer in combination with the Farm Journal. We want 300 new subscribers during 1900 and will get them if we can. We therefore continue our arrangement with the Farm Journal, both papers for $1.00.

We especially urge old subscribers to pay up arrearages, (added at $1.00 per year, no interest charged), and one year ahead, and get the Farm Journal five years, thus sharing in the benefit, and everybody pleased.

We are having sample copies of the Farm Journal sent you, which will reach you in a week or so, and will let it speak for itself. All who do not get it already will get a sample copy, free. Look out for it. Show it to your neighbor who does not take the Times, and tell him of the combination offer—this paper one year, Farm Journal five years—$1.00!

THE VANISHED RACE

A BUILDING THAT HOUSED 6,000 CLIFF DWELLERS.

A Ruined Aboriginal City on a Cliff a Thousand Feet High—Skulls of People That Had Double Teeth All Around—Some Remarkable Relics.

Laden with relics of the vanished race of the Cliff Dwellers, the Rev. Dr. George L. Cole has returned from a journey to the ruined cities of Southeastern Colorado and New Mexico. Valuable results were secured by excavations in an ancient communal dwelling, as yet unnamed, which stands on the cliffs of the Santa Fe River, fourteen miles from Espanola, N. M. This is the largest pueblo yet discovered in the United States, and Dr. Cole was practically the first to visit it with scientific objects in view. He found stone implements and pottery of extreme rarity, and the bones of a race all of whose teeth were molars or grinders. Among the bones excavated from a burial mound on the mesa were a woman's femurs measuring nineteen inches, a length which indicates that this aboriginal giantess must have been at least seven and a half feet tall.

The cliff on which the unexplored ruins stand rises a thousand feet above the surrounding country. On one side of the isolated rocky mass is the valley of the Santa Fe River, on the other that of the Santa Clara. Up to 600 feet is a shelf which furnished a nesting place for the Cliff Dwellers of nobody knows how many centuries ago. In the soft pumice stone they burrowed dens for their families. Eventually the original shelters in the cliffs grew to be a great warren. Room after room was hewn out until the rows were four or five deep. Under the shelter of the overhanging cliff, walls were built, extending the rows of rooms. The Cliff Dwellers were sheltered from rain or storm and their homes were inaccessible for their enemies.

Not satisfied with their rock caverns, the Cliff Dwellers climbed upward, and on the mesa, 400 feet above the shelf on which the caves opened, built a communal dwelling.

This mesa is about three-quarters of a mile wide and a mile and a half long, with cliffs all about and the best of opportunities for defense. On its edge was reared a watch tower of granite, whose height Dr. Cole believes to have been not less than sixty feet. The blocks were painfully carried up the 1,000-foot cliff, for the nearest granite deposits are at a considerable distance. For greater security a wall was built across the middle of the mesa.

On this rock platform, 1,000 feet up in the air, there stand to-day the ruins of two communal dwellings, one evidently much older than the other. The older dwelling is as yet untouched, and what little exploration of the more modern one Dr. Cole had time for amounts to a mere scratch on the surface.

There were not less than sixteen hundred rooms in the larger building in its prime, says Dr. Cole, and probably two thousand. The building measured 240x300 feet. It was of blocks of stone measuring six by six by fifteen inches, quarried from the cliffs below, and carried up by the workmen. The rooms were roofed with timber, and the walls then carried higher. In the centre was a great court, a common kitchen for all, from which radiated immense numbers of rooms. The building spread with the growth of the community until it was three stories high and the rooms stretched away twelve deep from the central court, with smaller courts here and there. Dr. Cole estimates that the population averaged about three to a room, which would make between 4,800 and 6,000 people dwelling in the immense pueblo, besides those who lived in the cliff caves.

The rooms at the sides of the communal dwelling averaged about fourteen feet in size. On the upper stories they were mostly smaller, some being only seven by fourteen, others seven by twenty-one. Some rooms were found as large as fourteen by twenty-one feet.

With the trophies of his summer's explorations spread out about him, Dr. Cole has turned his parlor into an anthropological museum. One table is covered with water jugs and incense pipes, the sofa hidden under stone axes, mortars, pestles, weaving shuttles and pottery. Another table is decked with a row of grinning skulls and huge crossbones; beneath it comfortably repose all the parts of a skeleton, from the toe bones to the shoulder blades, waiting to be wired together, and strewn about are bows and arrows, baskets, jugs of twisted twigs, made water-tight by pitch, modern Indian pottery, photographs by the score, and a stump of petrified wood. The skulls are a particularly valued possession.

"Look at those teeth," said Dr. Cole, tenderly fondling the skull of the giantess. "She has no incisors, no cutting teeth, in front, as have all the other races of which I have any knowledge. She has grinders all around, and so have the other skulls. That shows they were grain-eaters rather than meat-eaters. The foreheads are high and the shape of the skull shows intelligence, but notice how curiously they are flattened at the back."—Los Angeles Times.

A Chloroform Story.

A pet tortoise, owned by a lady in South London, was badly worried by the house-dog, so the owner decided to have the maimed reptile put out of existence. A friend, a medical student, undertook to achieve the business of killing with a minimum of pain, so he placed the thing in a box along with a duster saturated with chloroform. The next morning it was found that the dog, which had apparently jumped on the box with the idea of again mauling his victim, had been overcome by the fumes of the substance escaping out of a hole in the receptacle, and was lying dead, while the tortoise, which had been ...

Railroad Notes.

Noble & House, a New York firm have sublet three miles of road-bed above the mouth of Beaver Creek. The greater part of this work is cliff and hillside excavation.

The firm of Cogan & Hanchel, building the bridges at the first crossing of the Greenbrier and across Knapp's Creek, has been dissolved and a new partnership of Cogan, Noble & House has been formed, assuming the contract and liabilities of the old firm.

The contractors are making good headway on the tunnel near Bird's Mill. They are working the full twenty-four hours from both ends.

The contractors are all working to finish their grading contract by May, and it is possible that the trains will run into Marlinton in June.

Several contractors have steam drills. Where rock is drilled by hand three men constitute a crew, two to strike and one to "turn steel." 12 feet of solid rock is a day's work for three men. A steam drill, with the steam applied with hose, drills two feet in four minutes. The drill is then changed for one two feet longer and as soon as it can be adjusted it drills at the same rate.

Work in the tunnels can go on as well in bad weather as good and whether the work is done by day or night it requires artificial light. Not every can do this work as the fumes from the explosion of dynamite give some men such a headache that they cannot do this class of work.

Two typical railroad accident occurred at Mike Jones & Co.'s camp recently. Three darkies were driving steel and the one who was turning the drill noticed some mud on the top as the drill was being set. Now if the hammer came down on it it might fly in his face, and he passed his hand across the top of the drill to brush it off just as the hammer came down, cutting off his second finger so clean that it needed only to be bound up.

Another day a colored man started to move a heavy piece of a steam drill just at six o'clock. He had nearly shouldered it when time was called but he said: "All right, Captain; I've got it up now I'll just tote it along." He took a few steps in the direction he wished to go and fell in such a manner that the weight knocked his shoulder out of place. It was impossible to get a doctor before the next day, and when he came he tied the darkey to a tree and five men took the second pull before the shoulder was put in place, the patient yelling as loud as he could the whole time.

Measles vs Smallpox.

Editor Times:

Will you kindly allow me space in your paper to correct a report that has been circulated over the county, that my son (Massie) came home from the West Virginia University with the smallpox. There is not one word of truth in the report. The facts are that my son had been feeling badly for several days before he left Morgantown. He went to a physician who examined him and told him he was threatened with typhoid fever and advised him to come home at once. He came to Huttonsville on Saturday, the 20th, where he staid all night. On Sunday morning Dr Bosworth 'phoned to me that he had a genuine case of measles.

I understand that the patrons of Mr James W. Warwick's school at Academy fear that he might have carried the measles into his school. In justification of Mr Warwick I will say that he left my house before my son came home, and only passed along the public road the next day, where he could n't possibly have contracted the measles from him.

I hope this statement will satisfy the public of the erroneous report; if not, Drs Bosworth and Cameron who attended him, will verify my statement.

Respectfully,
A. C. L. GATEWOOD.

William H. Callison of Locust Creek died January 31st aged 50 years. He was ill for more than three months, but his friends thought he would recover. He was a true man in all the relations of life. Kind and affectionate in his family, a true friend to his neighbors, and faithful to his church. He married Miss Laura Whiting and five children survive him.

William Collison was converted in the great revival conducted by Rev J. R. Van Horne twenty-four years ago. He joined the Methodist Church, South and remained within its pale to the day of his death. He worked hard for the erection of our church on Locust Creek and gave $400. He was a good steward and was always alive to the interests of the church.

A good man is gone. His place will be hard to fill. He was needed here, but God's will be done. He rests from his labors. There remaineth therefore a rest for the people of God.

JOHN H. DILLS.

H. L. Casebolt.

Died, Mr H. L. Casebolt of Lobelia, after a few day's sickness, but unexpectedly to his many friends. He was able to sit up and keep fires the day of his death. About an hour before his death he was affected by something like heart trouble and died suddenly. He had often told his faithful wife he wanted to die as he did. His age was 81 years. He had lived in this county all his life and worked very hard and laid up a nice fortune for old days, and a stock holder in the Pocahontas Bank. A wife and son and daughter survive him. He will be missed in this part. He had been a member of the Baptist church about four years, and professed submission to the Divine will at all times. His last work here was the building of a new church near Lobelia, where we trust many souls will be gathered ready to enter in at the strait gate which leads to life eternal.

DUNMORE.

Then it rained and snowed again.

Capt C. B. Swecker, the Silver Tongued Auctioneer, will make a big sale for E. M. Arbogast in Monterey, February 15.

Quite a lot of prominent men have been in our town the last two weeks.

T. S. McNeel, W. A. Bratton and Frank Anderson were around shaking hands with the people and looking out for future prospects.

Mrs E. N. Moore is visiting her sister Mrs Dr Lockridge.

E. N. Moore is out for Sheriff and he will make a good one.

We would like to have Geo. R. Curry for Commissioner of the Court.

Joe Buzzard was in town Monday. He left his mule at home.

Several cases of measles around.

Jim Darnel was in town Saturday night, January 27, for a buriel outfit for Mrs John Griffin.

C. E. Pritchard is off to Huttonsville this week with a load of slaves.

Dr Hunter Moomau is doctoring in H. O. Rodger's camp.

Dr T. J. Williams has returned to Frost. Mrs Williams is no better.

There will be a hop, skip and a jump in town this week.

A lot of railroad hands came in Sunday.

The time will soon come again to vote for War and Prosperity.

MR POOR.

AT CAMP,
Academy, W. Va.,
Jan. 22, 1900.

Editor Pocahontas Times:

Dear Sir—Within the past few days we have been asked by several different people, whether or not it is a fact that Mr Isaac B. Smith sold to us a poisoned sheep, from which it is to be presumed that such information has been afforded to the public, and in justice to Mr Smith we have the following statement to make, which we hope you will kindly print in your next issue.

Mr Isaac B. Smith has been furnishing [illegible] since November [illegible] 1899 and we hope he will continue to accommodate us. We never received from him a poisoned sheep, and we can offer no [illegible] [illegible] which perhaps is based upon the imagination of some [illegible] of Mr Smith.

Yours truly,
J. J. [illegible] & Co.

We have quite a [illegible] [illegible]

GLADE HILL.

Henry Briscoe was in town last week.

Preaching at New Hope Church next Sunday.

Marvin Gum is doing a fine lot of sawing for Taylors.

Homer Hoover, spent last week at Edray.

R. R. Mason came up from camp last Saturday.

E. N. Moore lost a fine cow last week.

General Grant and family have the measles.

Edward Taylor went to Highland last week for his health, we presume.

Snow, rain and mud, and Frank Patterson visits these parts regularly of late.

A fine deer came in here recently and if it had not been for the law some of the boys could have gotten a shot at it.

Miss Alice McLaughlin's school will close in two weeks. She has taught a good school and is liked by all.

Chris Dilley made a flying trip to Frost last Saturday.

Two wagons and some men passed here Sunday, going to work on the grade, we presume.

Preaching at Mt Pleasant school house on the fourth Sunday.

H. F. Arbogast made a step upward last Saturday night; he went from vice-president to president of the debating club.

The literary society is in a flourishing condition. It is the best society ever organized in the upper end of the county. The entertainment is good, there is good behavior and the house is always filled to overflowing wit people.

We understand that E. N. Moore is a candidate for Sheriff. There could not be a more suitable man found in the county. He is fully qualified, and is a good Christian man, such as the Huntersville man thinks should fill such places.

BRUSO.

FROST.

And still it rains.

Written by Prominent Men, Who from Personal Experience Commend the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company.

Philip D. Armour, Chicago.

Any man choosing the Northwestern may feel confident of three things: first, that his money is honestly and safely invested; second, that he will receive fair and honorable treatment; and third, that no Life Company can do so much in reducing the cost of life insurance or making large returns on money invested as the Northwestern.

RUSSIA'S GREAT CANAL.

A Long Ditch To Connect the Baltic And Black Seas.

European papers and scientific magazines are occupying themselves pretty generally at the present moment with criticisms concerning the great ship canal which is destined to connect the Baltic with the Black Sea, work on which was begun last year by the Russian Government, and is being pushed forward with the greatest zeal, and at the same time with a quietness amounting almost to secrecy. When finished the work, on account of its immensity and the almost insuperable difficulty to be overcome, will be worthy of a place beside such modern wonders as the St. Gotthard tunnel, the Suez Canal, the tunnels of Frejus and the Simplon.

The projects offered for the construction of this really herculean labor were many and various, but the choice finally rested between two schemes—one, a proposition to unite the river Dnieper, which flows into the Black Sea, with the Dwina, which empties its waters into the Baltic at Riga; the other a plan to connect the Dniester, west of Odessa, with the river Vistula, which has its mouth at Danzica on the Baltic.

The first of these projects met with the special favor of Alexander III., and is the one which has been adopted for the carrying out of the great work of uniting the two seas. The route starts at Riga, following the course of the Duna River as far as Duneberg, where it is united to the Beresina by means of an immense course cut right through the country. The Beresina and the Dnieper are then used to complete the connection. The total length of the line is 1,600 kilometers, or about 1,000 English miles, 200 kilometers of the entire distance being artificially cut through the land. The work is to be finished in five years if all goes well and a sufficient number of men are kept at work during that period.

The canal is 66 meters, or about 307 feet wide, and about 30 feet deep, thus allowing the largest vessels means of passing from one sea to the other. Seventeen large ports, or artificial bays, are to be constructed along the line as well, each capable of containing a large number of ships, so that a Russian vessel, however large it may be, may make the entire transit in six days, without hindrance of any kind.

The cost of the work, at the lowest estimate, and taking into consideration the means at the disposal of the Russian Government as to the adoption of unpaid labor, will amount to about $120,000,000.

The principal of the reasons for the adoption of the above mentioned plan in preference to the Driester-Vistula project is that the whole passage is kept within the limits of the Russian Empire, thus allowing Russia absolute sovereignty over the entire course.

Putting aside the great political advantages given to Russia by the new enterprise, the gain commercially and economically will be an incalculable one, and beneficial in many more ways than one. With her great power and resources the great semi-Oriental kingdom is in position to carry out with ease works that, in their immensity, recall the wonders of ancient history, and before the undertaking of which a lesser power would retire discouraged.—Rome Correspondent New York Times.

CAT ADOPTS RABBITS.

Robbed of Her Own Litter She Is Content With Substitutes.

A cat on the farm of Andrew Harris, near McKeesport, Pa., has adopted four baby rabbits in the place of the litter of kittens which she recently brought into this world and which Mr. Harris thought the world could get along without. The day after the kittens disappeared the cat was observed carrying something in her mouth to the barn. Three times she was seen making the same journey, and then Mr. Harris made an investigation. He found, hidden in the hay, three baby rabbits. While he was looking at them puss appeared for the fourth time carrying another little rabbit in her mouth. It was deposited with the others and she lay down with them, [illegible] with the greatest of pride and satisfaction.

The young rabbits are getting along finely. They hop all about with their foster mother. Mr. Harris is proud of his cat and is permitting her to raise her queer family undisturbed, except for the visitors who are constantly calling to witness this queer freak.

It Did Not Work.

"A good, strong bluff at the proper time is a very good thing, but it may fall flat," said a well known traveling man who is at present visiting Washington. "It was at one of the best hotels in Kansas City a few days ago that one of the guests stepped into the lobby to leave his umbrella, and not desiring to go to his room thought he would try a scheme of his own to prevent some one from walking off with it. Taking a slip of paper from his pocket in big black letters he wrote the following notice: 'Beware! The man who owns this umbrella weighs over two hundred pounds and can strike a ten ton blow. He will be back in fifteen minutes.' It was not long after that some one was attracted by the sign, and he feared not the consequences of the dire threat. Quickly taking the coveted umbrella he removed the paper, and, turning it over, wrote on the back as follows: 'The man who took the umbrella weighs less than one hundred and fifty pounds and can walk ten miles an hour. He is never coming back.'"—Washington Times.

An Unsatisfactory Treatise.

West Virginia University,

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Pre-medical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

County Sketches

The Town of Spartansboro.

One day Bill Burrows drew his pay at the lumber camp where he had been working, and declared his intention of taking Spartansboro alone and single handed. The town had been taken so often that it did not cause a cessation of the poker game in progress. His comrades lifted their eyes only the fraction of a second required by Jack Turnbull to play the extra ace he held between his knees, and sweep off the jackpot of plug tobacco. Beyond suggesting that he take somebody of his size, such as might be found in present company if he wanted to fight, no comment was made on this declaration of war.

Burrows tramped to town and was hailed joyfully by the village drunkard, whose mission it was to help such visitors spend their vacation. The lumbermen would go back to the woods to recuperate, and find themselves little the worse for the spree, but the village drunkard having to take them all on found the life he was leading one perpetual drunk and was beginning to show the effects of the wear and tear of such a life.

On the next day Burrows was ready to receive the unconditional surrender of the little town. Mr William Bunley, the most prominent man of the town, who stood high in church and state, came down the street. He was an elderly gentleman, of very venerable appearance.

"Howdy Bill," said Burrows, offering a very dirty paw to be shaken, which was ignored. "How'd it be for a game of draw poker about tonight?"

Mr Bunley's nephew, Sam Lovejoy, who was a small boned fleshy man who clerked in a store, came by and advised his uncle to pay no attention to Burrows, no attention whatever.

Burrows instantly demanded what he was putting in his jib for. The two men walked away and entered the store. The more Burrows thought about Lovejoy's uncalled [illegible] the more enraged he became. He took a position in front of the store and took off his coat and cast it away; he removed his hat and trod on it and shouted for Lovejoy to come forth and testify. His oaths were loud and long. He had once counted his swearing vocabulary and found he knew 169 cuss words and he now recited them all. Lovejoy said he could not stand it and longer and took his pistol with trembling hands, but was restrained by his friends. The proprietor of the store went upstairs and opening a window told Burrows to go away or he would have him arrested. Burrows defied the officers of the law, who were not present, until the village drunkard who had come back to life in the meantime, came and took him away. For a day or two Burrows owned the town, and the people of Spartansboro had but one consolation and that was that they would soon be enabled to incorporate the village and set up a town government. Then with a mayor, and council, and sergeant, and lockup they would attend to disorderly people who insulted them in their own town and who cursed so that their women folk could hear.

For fifty years or so the town had been holding its own in regard to population, having upwards of one hundred people. For the past ten years it had never had less than ninety and never a hundred. The time of which we write there were ninety-nine souls in the town, and when there were one hundred persons the village could be incorporated as a matter of right and a town government set up.

Some months before the time of which we write there arose a rumor in the town that the number of children in the Potts family was [illegible] est the patriotic pair who are endeavoring to do the state some service, and the gossips of the neighborhood alone, but this particular affair was of municipal importance. The leading men of the village saw great potentialities in the arrival of the hundredth soul. A young man of sacriligious tendencies made a bad joke about the ninety and nine that already peopled the place of being of little moment compared to the one who was to make up the complement. The safe arrival of the little fellow one cold frosty morning was the scene of much hilarity in the village, men who usually smoked a pipe indulging in a cigar, and even treating their neighbors.

The celebration was short lived however for about noon the farmers heard the bell of the village church toll the slow notes telling that some one had died. One stroke being tolled for each year of the age of the dead person, when the bell stopped on the 84th stroke they knew that Aunt Fanny Eston the midwife was dead. She had successfully presided at the birth of the youngest Potts, and the exertion or the excitement proved too much for her, for she died as she sat smoking in an arm chair. Her great forte was saving doctor bills, and she was true to her principles to death.

In a few days a family moved away, reducing the population further, and Spartansburg gave up hope of immediate incorporation. Bill Burrows, accumulating another stake, came down on the defenceless village again like a wolf on the fold. His friend the village drunkard was ready to be entertained, and soon Burrows thought of his feud with the timid Lovejoy. Breathing out threatenings of slaughter he started to go to the store. He spoke to a young lady on the street, who hurried away from him and womanlike did not tell her brothers for fear they would get into trouble with him. Arriving at the store he shouted for Lovejoy to come out and be killed. Lovejoy not immediately responding, Burrows regaled the town with the latest epithets, causing the women folks to shut the windows and hustle their little ones [illegible] so they might not hear the dreadful language.

While he was thus engaged Tom Bunley, of Arizona, who was visiting his native town, came sauntering down the street smoking an after dinner cigar. He took in the whole situation at a glance, and he advanced steadily, picking up a stout little cudgel as he walked along. When at the proper distance he let the club descend and the bad man fell to the ground. The doctor worked over the wounded man and brought him around in a week or so, and Burrows explained profusely that when he was under the influence of liquor he said and did things unbeknownst to himself.

On talking the matter over with his father, Tom Bunley decided that it were better to incorporate the town, something that had been ardently desired by all the burghers. Tom being a man of action had a board shanty erected on a vacant lot belonging to his father and colonized it with Dave Peets and his family of thirteen children. Peets was a man who had been compensated for a world of ill luck by a healthy hearty family of little ones. The certificate of incorporation was obtained and the town sergeant at the risk of his life has run in many bad men, and safely kept them until the hour was past, and has built many feet of sidewalk with the fund arising from the fines collected.

In this way Tom Bunley preserved his popularity when at the end of a three months' visit he reduced the population of the town by taking the village belle with him to Arizona.

Two young men, who must have been medical students, boarded an Angora car late Sunday night with a fully articulated skeleton. Each had one arm liked with that of the skeleton, whose bones rattled gruesomely as they walked to the fortimate companion between them. Between the grinning teeth of the skeleton was a cigarette, and a derby hat adorned its shining skull. The car was rather crowded, and the other passengers, most of whom were men, gazed in openmouthed astonishment at the strange spectacle. The two young fellows, however, pretended to be unconscious of their surroundings and held such converse with the skeleton: "Too bad you didn't wear your mackintosh, Bill. I'm afraid you'll catch cold." Or "Say, Bill, better throw away your cigarette or the conductor will throw you off." When the conductor came through for the fares one of the young men handed him 15 cents and he rang up three fares without a word of comment. At Sixteenth street a young girl entered the car and looked around for a seat. "Here, Bill," exclaimed one of the students, "where's your gallantry? Get up and give the lady a seat." Then he yanked the skeleton out of its place and set it on his knees. The girl gave one screech, fled to the back platform, and insisted that the conductor stop the car and put her off. "Gee! Bill!" remarked the student, gazing reproachfully into the skeleton's face, "you've deteriorated. You used to be quite a lady's man." Then everybody laughed.

Party Nicknames—The Trimmer.

The subjoined article is from the pen of the Marquis of Halifax and was written in 1689. As we understand it a trimmer is commonly called a mugwump in these days.

Amongst all the engines of dissention there has been none more powerful in all these times than the fixing names upon one another of contumely and reproach. And the reason is plain in the respect of the people, who, though generally they are incapable of making a syllogism, or forming an argument, yet they can pronounce a word; and that serves their turn to throw it with dull malice at the head of those they do not like. Such things ever begin in jest, and end in blood; and the same word which at first makes the company merry, grows in time to a military signal to cut each other's throats.

This innocent word 'Trimmer' signifies no more than this, that if men are together in a boat, and one part of the company would weigh it down on one side, another would make it lean as much to the contrary; it happens there is a third opinion of those who conceive it would do as well if the boat went even without endangering her passengers. Now, 'tis hard to imagine by what figure in language, or by what rule in sense this comes to be a fault, and it is much more a wonder it should be throught a heresy.

Our Trimmer, therefore, inspired by this divine virtue, thinks fit to conclude with these assertions: That our climate is a trimmer between that part of the world where men are roasted, and the other where men are frozen: that our church is a trimmer, between the frenzy of Platonic visions and the lethargic ignorance of popish dreams: that our laws are trimmers between the excess of unbounded power and the extravagance of liberty not enough restrained: that true virtue has even been thought a trimmer, and to have its dwelling between the two extremes: that even God Almighty himself is divided between His two great attributes [illegible] ashamed of his name, and willingly leaves to the bold champions of either extreme the honour of contending with no less adversaries than nature, religion, liberty, prudence, humanity and commonsense.

Wild Horses in Utah.

On the undulating sandy desert south of Milford, Beaver County, Utah, are situated the warm springs of the old wagon road which freighters used for reaching Pioche in her palmiest mining days; and south of these springs could be seen by these freighters twenty-five years ago, bands of wild horses scurrying away at the approach of man, and raising a cloud of dust as they rushed over the sand dunes and rabbit-brush hollows.

At that tima the freighters were compelled to pay toll for water at these warm springs—and perhaps they do still—because the precious fluid was run into large shallow wooden tanks buried in the grorud and allowed to cool. For the privilege of serving their horses and themselves with the brackish water and filling the regulation barrel strapped to the side of the wagon, the teamsters paid the man in charge the sum of 25 cents per man and team. The water that ran away from these springs in those days formed a soggy pool below the springs proper, and here was one of the watering places for the bands of wild horses that were even then plentiful upon the desert.

The western edge of the desert was fringed by very precipitous mountains, which were here and there deeply seamed with canons, which were simply a mighty cleft in the black, rugged volcanic rock. Usually these canons ended very abruptly, after their course had been followed for a distance—anywhere from one to three miles.

Ingenious man at once saw a use for these canons, and, selecting those which best suited his purpose, he placed away up near the rough ending of each of these a strong gateway of pine poles. Periodically the cowboys of that country would go out to replenish their stock of saddle horses from among the bands of wild equines on the desert. No feat of foot were there, however, and so thoroughly familiar with the ground over which they sped when pursued, and enjoying the advantage of being riderless, that they eluded their pursuers and easily frustrated any attempt at their apprehension with a lasso. This was the incentive which impelled the cowboys to seek the aid of nature in securing for themselves that which they most coveted—"the goldarnest, orniest, wildest cayuse on the bull darned range."

So it came about that the gateways were built in the precipitous canons. Knowing the location of a big band of the wild horses the cowboys would line out upon their wiry ponies and gradually swing the band around in the direction of one of the canons, up which the unsuspecting creatures would clatter among the loose volcanic rocks in the bottom of the big cravasse, bounding through the improvised gateway. Then the poles were put put up, after the cowboys had ridden into the natural corral, and the rest was easy. Usually the horses thus caught were sufficiently tractable by the time they had been handled awhile by their captors—that is, tame enough for a cowboy.

Despite the large numbers thus caught in those days, these bands have so increased that they are now almost overrunning the country. Occasionally, of late, the rangers down in Washington, Sevier, Millard, Beaver, Wayne and Garfield have been compelled to organize raids of extermination upon them. These wild horses are so numerous that they destroy the range for cattle, sheep and other more valuable animals.—Denver News.

"Yes, I suppose I see as much of human vanity as anybody else," said a Philadelphia photographer, after an unsuccessful effort to convince a woman customer that some pictures which flattered her very much were really very good likenesses. She though they didn't do her justice, and didn't hesitate to say so. "I don't mind people like that. I get used to them. But it's the freaks that try one's soul—the people who want their hands photographed, and things like that. When the Trilby craze was at its height several years ago, lots of women used to come to me to have their feet photographed, and such feet as they were! All pinched out of shape and covered with corns. Other woman, who think they have pretty hands, have hands photographed holding a flower, and now they are having their eyes photographed. There's no telling where the thing is going to end."—Philadelphia Record.

Michael Scales—Life Sketch.

Sunday morning, Feb. 4, 1900, Michael Scales entered into rest. He was born in County Clare, Ireland, in 1827, and came to America when about twenty years old. He worked on the C. & O. R. R. and about 1852 came to this section. He served in the Confederate army under Capt Norman in Company D, 14th Regiment, Virginia Cavalry. In 1866 he married Mrs Caroline Ruckman, and to them were born four daughters and one son.

Michael Scales was reared a Catholic, but left that faith for a better one. He went to a Methodist church through curiosity, and remained for the class meeting. As one by one they testified their love for their Savior, he saw that he lacked experimental religion. He was converted at the old log church on Swago. "There was no room at the altar, so I just knelt in the corner next to the door, and God forgave this poor sinner. In 1858 Rev Jason P. Etchison received him into the Methodist church and he was faithful unto death.

The means of grace that the Methodist church supplies suited the intense nature of brother Scales. The prayer and class meetings and revival seasons were great events to him. He fed upon Christ in these feasts of love, and would go upon that meat many days. In prayer and testimony he sat at the feet of Jesus. In the experience meeting two weeks before he died he shouted the praise of his Redeemer. He helped to build Marvin Chapel, he helped to support his pastor, he loved his neighbors, but best of all he was a man of prayer and faith. This was the secret of his life.

During the war he daily sought a place for private prayer. He "carried his religion through the war." His faith was quick and thus he was often blessed. For forty-two years his life blessed the church. He always prayed for a "peaceful hour in which to die." "peaceful hour" came. Soldier, rest!. Thy battle's fought, the race is won and thou art crowned at last. No longer can we hear his prayer to God, nor shout of victory; but Heaven has one more voice to swell the anthem of praise to the King of Kings and Lord of Lords. JNO. H. DILLS.

There have been poultry books printed costing fifteen dollars and more, but there never has been one at any price with more beautiful colored reproductions of poultry, than those found in the Biggle Poultry Book, an announcement of which appears in another column. The paintings were made direct from best birds of the different breeds, and the coloring and characteristic shape of each breed are perfect. As for the text, there never was a book printed containing more prrctical, level-headed information. Its chapters include, Eggs for Hatching, Hatching the Eggs, Care of Chicks With Hens and Brooders, The Successful Care of Incubators, The Farmer's Flock, The Village Hennery; chapters on Breeds, on Fattening and Marketing, and Diseases and Remedies, with the old and new school methods of treatment. One man wrote the publishers that "The [illegible] alone, at each chapter heading [illegible] worth the cost of the book." [illegible] of this admirable work have been printed. Frank Stockton and His Cane.

In a hotel lobby in Washington, I chanced to meet Frank Stockton the novelist, who had just returned from West Virginia, where he has been reeling out his imagination on paper to keep up with publishers' demands. Mr Stockton is a delightful little man with snapping black eyes and moustache touched with gray. He is somewhat lame and has a way of squinting one eye down his cane while talking that gives emphasis to his reflective moods in conversation. Few authors have a more loyal constituency and his "The Hundredth Man" is one of the best studies of American life for this generation that has been published.—National Magazine, Boston, Mass.

THE COUNTY COURT.

The election of one of the trustees of the county comes on this year and it can be definitely stated that C. E. Beard, the present member, will not offer for reelection. He has served the people ably and well for nearly twelve years.

This is one of the most important offices of the county and it is very necessary to secure a thoroughly reliable and trustworthy man for the place. They are the sole judges of what the county will spend each year. The choice must fall on some one in the Edray or Levels District. Among the acceptable men who have been dis- [illegible] Mann, of Edray District, and M. J. McNeel, Matthews Ruckman, J. S. McNeel and Geo. R. Curry, of the Levels. Of this number the present indications are that M. J. McNeel, of Mill Point, will most likely be before the people. He is a substantial man of a conservative policy suited to the temper of the people. He has been sheriff of the county and has represented the county in the Legislature.

THE WAR GAME.

The news from Africa affords small comfort to the English sympathizer. General Buller has again "retired" across the Tugela, and the situation of his army, and that of General White's at Ladysmith is admittedly unenviable.

It is a case of going to war without first counting the cost and taking an accurate census of the enemy's fighting men. Kruger was fully forewarned and forearmed, and prepared for a death struggle. His famous ultimatum should have been interpreted as a note of danger, and not an impertinence as it was regarded. The Boer [illegible] had toughened his sinews in the war of 1880 against the same foe, and the [illegible] of that war are the strength of the arms of to-day.

The Boer citizen soldier is a proved fighter, and as such has endeared himself to Americans. England's foreign policy has always been condemned in the United States, and our Government's present foreign policy is just as freely condemned by a large and intelligent part of our citizenship. Our sympathetic attitude does not necessarily mean that we love England less, but we love freedom more.

If the Boer chooses to live [illegible] in his own country and in his own [illegible] [illegible]

SKIP THIS—MONEY QUESTION.

In the argument on the currency bill which was passed by the lower House early in the session, Mr Cushman of Washington made a hit with his first effort in Congress. The first sentence to catch the ear of the House was this:

"There would be no greater inconsistency to me in hearing a man talk of biyardism, biquartism, or bibushelism, than to hear anyone discourse on the beauties of bimetalism in the sense of using both metals as a standard."

Now we did not notice this until the other day, and consequently until now it has been unanswered by us. Whenever the single standard man opens his mouth on the bushel or yard comparison he puts his foot in it.

The yard is governed by the inch and the inch by the three barleycorns. The yard can never be increased or diminished, for there are those barley corns, 108 [illegible] The Experimental Station at Morgantown may by taking thought add a millimeter or two to the length of a grain of barley, but the old time barley-corn will be accepted as the 108th part of a yard. The barley-corn regulates the yard, and the yard the barley-corn. A change would be manifestly unjust and would effect every contract measured by this table.

Changing the weights of the two available precious metals has wrought untold harm to the country. It has set up money kings who will be hard to dethrone.

Suppose all the debts of this country were payable in yards of cloth, and after the contract and before payment the yard should be doubled in length. The people could understand this and such injustice would not be tolerated. Exactly the same thing was done with money. The legislators cast away the safeguard silver, overthrowing the work of the wisdom of ages, and the sliding scale dollar followed. All must admit that it was a mistake, and the only question is whether the debtor class can be allowed to recoup by bringing the dollar down as far as it has gone up by giving us the two metals again. They call this repudiation. They called the other legislation.

We agree with Mr Cushman's closing words, which reminded his hearers that the money question was not so important to us as the question of money.

"When you pay a debt with a dollar that destroys the debt; but the dollar is left like the old gourd at the spring around which I played in childhood. Every one who came along took a drink out of it, but they did n't eat the gourd. The American people have come to understand from actual experience that they are not so much interested in the amount of money in this country per capita as in the amount of money per pocket."

THE NEW MOTHER GOOSE.

The Singular Sang Froid Displayed by Baby Bunting.

Bartholomew Benjamin Bunting had only three passions in life,
And one of the trio was hunting, and two were his babe and his wife;
And therefore, so rigid his habits, he frolicked at home until two,
And then began hunting for rabbits, and hunted till fall of the dew.

Belinda Bellonia Bunting, thus widowed for half of the day,
Her duty maternal confronting, with young Baby Bunting would play.
When thus was her energy wasted, a patented food she'd dispense.
(She had bought it the day that they pasted the posters all over her fence

But Bonaparte Buckingham Buning, (the infant thus blindly adored)
Replied to her worship by grunting, which showed he was brutally bored.
'Twas little he cared for the troubles of life. Like a crab on the sands
He blew a profusion of bubbles, and throatened the air with his hands.

Cartholomew Benjamin Bunting on night when his wife let him in,
Displayed as the fruit of his hunting a cottontail's velvety skin,
Which, seeing young Bonaparte wriggle, he wave him without a demur,
And the babe with an aqueous giggle soon swallowed the whole of the fur.

Belinda Bellonia Bunting behaved like a consummate loon:
Her infant in frenzy confronting, she screamed herself mottled maroon:
She felt of his vertebrae spinal, expecting the babe to succumb,
And gave him one vigorous final hard prod in the pit of his tum.

But Bonaparte Buckingham Bunting, at first but a trifle perplexed,
By a change in his manner of grunting soon showed he was terribly vexed:
He displayed not a sign of repentance but spoke in a dignified tone,
The only consecutive sentence he'd uttered. 'Twas, "Lemme alone!"

THE MORAL: The parent that uses precaution his folly regrets.
An infant gets all that he chooses, an infant chews all that he gets:
And colics? He constantly has 'em so long as his food is the best;
But he swallows with never a spasm what ostriches could n't digest.

—Guy Wetmore Carryl in The Saturday Evening Post.

Military philosophers are very busy forecasting the influences lyddite, magazine guns, and a new explosive named theorite will exert in the interests of peace. The outcome seems to be that it will simply make nations a little more [illegible] for war. "Benevolent assimilation" will open up a grand field for safe and profitable blood-letting among comparatively defenseless nations in Asia and Africa, whenever the enlightened christian nations find out it wont pay to fight their equals in courage and skill.

HALLUCINATIONS.

I was once the subject of a mental and visual hallucination that has often amused me. Indeed, it caused merriment to the friends around me at the time, but not so to me—what was mirth to the stone throwing boys was death to frogs.

It was summer in that hot, sultry, Southern climate; the nights were more oppressive than the days: but the strong fragrance of many rare and lovely flowers, the deep shadows of numerous fine trees and the midnight song of the mocking bird I shall never forget and formed sweet offsets to the great and long continued heat. My daily work was arduous and one I delighted in. I was constently surrounded by many scholars and no day was too long for me, there was so much to do, and there were so many young, active, willing minds. Where are all those dear girls now? Scattered: some the heads of families, yea grandmothers, and some have closed their eyes in the sweet sleep that knows no waking, at rest, I trust, with the Lord Jesus Christ.

The plantations in the country I speak of were large and possessed of many slaves, and they were such peaceable, happy, well behaved, gentle blacks. At odd times I moved about among them and taught them orally of the Bible, and many tender recollections are mine of true friendship in this connection.

During the summer I refer to there had been a great deal of whispered rumor, (whence arisen I cannot tell but wholly groundless,) of a negro insurrection; with the dark population outnumbering the white such an attempt would have been awful. These rumors were very unpleasant to me and I tried to put them away, but ever and anon they arose and scared me. I had become almost sleepless and imprudently spent many night hours in writing that ought to have been spent in bed coaxing slumber. One night in particular I cannot forget what a beautiful still night it was and how the very green of the abundant foliage showed: thinking of the rumored trouble I became nervous, cold and [illegible] views and even eye-sight.

In this state going, unfortunately, to my window, I saw, or thought I saw, a terrible thing; moving slowly, cautiously, in and out of the green bushes and shadows of the trees an armed black host, walking in file with all sorts of rude weapons. I left the window only to return and see the same fearful sight again. The cold sweat stood on my forehead and I could endure this no longer alone. I must awaken an aged friend across the hall, for how could I let her be murdered in her bed without knowing it! (?) She kindly came at my bidding and looked where I pointed, but of course saw nothing for there was nothing to be seen except the natural beauties of a warm Southern night. Her endeavors to reassure me however were fruitless for I still continued to see that dreadful approaching armed host to murder us, until a family investigation was made of the outside premises, and becoming somewhat calmed and wondering at my own waking dream or nightmare, or whatever one chooses to call it, I lay down, but not to sleep that night.

Such was my hallucination that never returned. I can smile over it now, but it was no smiling matter while it lasted. Some hallucinations we read of are pleasant, some trivial, mine that I here record was fearful to me in the extreme.

The undersigned have caused to be made an accurate survey and map of the said territory by a practical surveyor, showing the courses and distances of the boundaries thereof, and the amount of territory contained therein, which has been properly verified as required by Section 3 of Chapter 47 of the Code of West Virginia.

They further caused an accurate census to be taken on the 3d day of February, 1900, as required by Section 4 of the chapter aforesaid. Said survey, map, and census have been left for examination on the part of any person interested at the office of the Pocahontas Times, a weekly newspaper in said town.

And on Saturday, the 10th day of March, 1900, between the hours of 6 a. m. and 6 p. m., the qualified voters residing within said territory will meet at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court of the said County, at the court-house thereof, to vote upon the question of such incorporation, by ballot, each voter voting a ballot with the words printed or written thereon:

For Incorporation.
OR Against Corporation.

Said election and proceedings to be held according to the provisions of Chapter 47 of the Code of the State of West Virginia.

It Hangs On

If it was only health, we might let it cling.

But it is a cough. One cold no sooner passes off before another comes. But it's the same old cough all the time.

And it's the same old story, too. There is first the cold, then the cough, then pneumonia or consumption with the long sickness, and life trembling in the balance.

An affable Italian, for the present a citizen of Marlinton, who rejoices in the name of Tonie, was bargaining with a burgher for some fowls. He was asked what sort of chicken he wanted, and said for one he wanted a "rooster to jingle in the morning."

The cofferdam put in at the railroad bridge at Knapp's Creek went out in the flood entailing a serious loss on the part of the contractors. The rise was so sudden that there was no time to move the derrick or pump and these were washed out and tangled up in the wreckage. This work is located at a very swift place in time of flood.

The Mailboy's Revenge.

A new mailboy appeared on one of the routes of this county the other day. At the first office he came to after leaving the terminal he was asked by the postmaster a very zealous official: "Did the postmaster at the end of the line swear you in this morning?" The mailboy's answer was "No," and the postmaster swore him in and decided that it being such a flagrant violation of law he would report it to the Department. When the letter was received in Washington the United States was shaken from stem to stern.

The Department wrote at once to the sub-contractor who was carrying the mail, demanding an explanation why he let unsworn mail boys carry the mail.

The sub-contractor replied that the question asked the boy was whether he had been sworn that morning. He had not. He had been sworn for the purpose the evening before.

It is said that the Department wrote the postmaster not to go so fast next time.

Important to Mothers.

The manufacturers of Castoria have been compelled to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to familiarize the public with the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. This has been necessitated by reason of pirates counterfeiting the Castoria trade-mark. This counterfeiting is a crime not only against the proprietors of Castoria, but against the growing generation. All persons should be careful to see that Castoria bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, if they would guard the health of their childred. Parents, and mothers in particular, ought to carefully examine the Castoria advertisements which have been appearing in this paper, and to remember that the wrapper of every bottle of genuine Castoria bears the facsimile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, under whose supervision it has been manufactured continuously for over thirty years.—Phila. Bulletin.

Our school closed Friday with honor to the teacher T. M. McCarty.

The measels seem to be the order of the day in this part of the county.

Blacksmith Taylor and P. H. Barlow, the wagon maker, to all appearances are kept quite busy.

Bill Gay is building a handsome barn which adds greatly to the appearance of his farm.

Q. W. Poage, of Poage's Lane, passed here Saturday on the hunt of stock cattle.

O. W. Ruckman is trying hard to get points for his Alliance plow as he wants to turn the soil.

Sam Gay is sawing a nice lot of lumber for John Waugh. Mr Gay & company know their gait when it comes to making good lumber.

Another enterprise I would mention in the way of machinery is a knitting machine operated by Mrs Mary A. Landes, which does its work to perfection; bringing out a pair of socks, heel and toe, large or small, in a few minutes.

S. P. Landes lately returned from visiting friends in Highland county and seems to think there is no place like old Highland. There must be some attraction as he is going back.

Last Wednesday Daniel Crouse and son Hugh and John Landes with four hounds went to Elk mountain for a fox chase. Soon after arriving a fox was jumped. It ran too near Johnnie Landes and got a load of shot in his face which brought him down; no doubt saving a long chase. The hounds were then started in another direction and soon stared a large catamount. Mr Crouse getting a shot at it as it ran, breaking the right front leg. It was then treed and they took seven shots with a 32 Winchester at it. After hitting the ground it whipped four dogs; Mr Crouse being compelled to assist them.

J. H. Landes will soon give you a chance to have your picture taken.

I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters, and he was soon much better and continued their use until he was wholly cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life." This remedy expels malaria, kills disease germs and purifies the blood; aids digestion, regulates the liver, and bowels, cures constipation, dyspepsia, nervous diseases, female complaints; gives perfect health. MEASLES.

Measles (known also as Rubeola and Morbilli) is one of the group of blood diseases termed Exanthemata, although, from the eruption which appears on the surface of the body, it is sometimes classed with the skin diseases. It is communicable from person to person, and seldom occurs more than once in the same individual. Its period of incubation—that is to say, the time that elapses between exposure to the contagion and the first appearance of the febrile symptoms which precede the eruption—is usually about a fortnight, then come lassitude and shivering, which are soon followed by heat of skin, increased rapidity of the pulse, loss of appetite and thirst. The respiratory mucous membrane is also affected, and the symptoms are very much the same as those of a severe cold in the head, accompanied with a dry cough, a slight sore throat and sometimes tightness of the chest.

The eruption which is characteristic of the disease usually appears upon the fourth day from the commencement of the febrile symptoms and the catarrh—seldom earlier, but not unfrequently some days later. It is a rash, consisting at first of minute red papulae, which, as they multiply, coalesce into crescentic patches. It is two or three days in coming out, beginning on the face, and neck and gradually travelling downwards. The rash fades in the same order as it occurs; and as it begins to decline three days after its appearance, its whole duration is about a week. The red color gives way to a somewhat yellowish tint, and the cuticle crumbles away in a fine bran-like powder; the process often being attended with considerable itching.

There are two important points in which it differs from small-pox, with which in its early stage it may be confounded: these are—1. That the fever does not cease or even abate when the eruption appears, but sometimes increases in intensity; and [2] that the disease is not more severe or more dangerous because the eruption is plentiful or early. The character of the eruption after the first day will serve to remove all doubt regarding these two diseases; and the comparative prevalence of either disease in the neighborhood will materially assist in forming the diagnosis. It is distinguished from scarlet fever or scarlatina, (1), by the presence at the outset of catarrhal symptoms which do not occur in the latter disease, at any rate, prior to the eruption; (2), by the absence of throat affection, which always accompanies well-marked cases of scarlet-fever; (3), by the character of the rash, which in measles is said to present somewhat the tint of the raspberry, and in scarlet fever that of a boiled lobster; which in measles appears in crescentic patches, and in scarlet fever is universally diffused; which in measles usually appears on the fourth day, and in scarlet fever on the second day of the disease.

In ordinary uncomplicated measles, the prognosis is almost always favorable. The chief danger is from inflammation of some of the textures that compose the lungs; and in scrofulous children it often leaves chronic pulmonary mischief behind it. No age is exempt from the disease, but it is much more common in childhood than subsequently. The reason probably is that most persons have it in early life, and are thus protected from an attack at a later period.

In mild forms of the disease nothing more is requisite than to keep the patient on a low diet, attend to the state of the bowels and prevent exposure to cold which is best accomplished by keeping him in bed with the ordinary warmth to which he is accustomed in health. If the chest symptoms become urgent they must be treated according to their nature. Bronchitis sometimes extending into pneumonia is most to be feared. If the eruption disappear prematurely it may sometimes be brought back by placing the patient in a warm bath. In such cases stimulants are often required, but must, of course, only be given by the advice of the physician. The patient must be carefully protected from cold for a week or two after the disease has apparently disappeared as the lungs and mucous coat of the bowels are very susceptible to [illegible]—Chambers's Encyclopedia.

One of the most sensational funerals that has ever occurred in the history of any State was that of Governor Goebel in Kentucky last week. Senator Blackburn and Governor Beckham tried to speak words "smooth as butter," but war was in their hearts. So far as indications go Governor Taylor is nursing his wrath, and may keep it warm too. The honied words of Mark Antony at the funeral of the murdered Caesar were insipid in comparison to what was said by the "honorable men" of Kentucky.

SALT RHEUM CURED BY
Johnston's Sarsaparilla
QUART BOTTLES.

JUST SEEN IN TIME.

Slight Skin Eruptions are a Warning of Something More Serious to Come. The Only Safe Way is to Heed the Warning. Johnston's Sarsaparilla is the Most Powerful Blood Purifier Known.

Nature, in her efforts to correct mistakes, which mistakes have come from careless living, or it may be from ancestors, shoots out pimples, blotches and other imperfections on the skin, as a warning that more serious troubles (perhaps tumors, cancers, erysipelas or pulmonary diseases) are certain to follow if you neglect to heed the warning and correct the mistakes.

Many a lingering, painful disease and many an early death has been avoided simply because these notes of warning have been heeded and the blood kept pure by a right use of JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA.

Miss Abbie J. Rande, of Marshall, Mich., writes:

"I was cured of a bad humor after suffering with it for five years. The doctors and my friends said it was salt rheum. It came out on my head, neck and ears, and then on my whole body. It was perfectly raw with it. What I suffered during those five years, is no use telling. Nobody would believe me if I did. I tried every medicine that was advertised to cure it. I spent money enough to buy a house. I heard JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA highly praised. I tried a bottle of it. I began to improve right away, and when I had finished the third bottle I was completely cured. I have never had a touch of it since. I never got any thing to do me the least good till I tried JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA. I would heartily advise all who are suffering from humors or skin disease of any kind to try it at once. I had also a good deal of stomach trouble, and was run down and miserable, but JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA made me all right."

The blood is your life and if you keep it pure and strong you can positively resist disease or face contagion fearlessly. JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA never fails. It is for sale by all druggists, in full quart bottles at only one dollar each.

"Sweet Bells Jangled Out of Tune and Harsh."

Shakespeare's description fits thousands of women. They are cross, despondent, sickly, nervous—a burden to themselves and their families. Their sweet dispositions are gone, and they, like the bells, seem sadly out of tune. But there is a remedy. They can use

McELREE'S
Wine of Cardui

It brings health to the womanly organism, and health there means well poised nerves, calmness, strength. It restores womanly vigor and power. It tones up the nerves which suffering and disease have shattered. It is the most perfect remedy ever devised to restore weak women to perfect health, and to make them attractive and happy. $1.00 at all druggists.

For advice in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, "The Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

REV. J. W. SMITH, Camden, S. C., says:—"My wife used Wine of Cardui at home for falling of the womb and it entirely cured her."

Officers of the Boer Army.

That the strategy and tactics of the Boers have been admirable is acknowledged on all sides; that they are the result of foreign guidance is open to question. Surely it is better to admit that we were mistaken in our estimate of the Boer than to take from him one jot of the credit due to him as a soldier. In his own peculiar method of warfare he is unsurpassed, and it is these, not the rules of scientific manuals or the parade ground, that baffled our generals.

Not so long ago the army chief critic was describing the Boers as a poor, insignificant "rabble of farmers," a description which betrayed an ignorance as ridiculous as it was inexcusable. The Boer is a born soldier, the product of over a century's constant warfare against the natives. His theory may be all wrong; but, as he is an apt pupil in the school of experience, he recks little of that. So admirably does he adapt his methods to circumstances that it amounts to perfect genius. Many of them have been learned from the Kaffirs; others are the result of the nature of the country, but as we have suffered from them in a previous war, it might have been supposed that repetition were possible. To ascribe Boer successes to the military ability of foreigners casts a reflection on our officers which they do not deserve.—Army and Navy Gazette.

West Virginia University,

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Pre-medical Department, with its four-year instruction, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

A Strenuous Life.

Oh, what would Rudyard and Roosevelt say if they knew about my boy?
When he comes home at night there's no sign of a fight to fill my heart with joy.
His nose is not smashed, his cheek is not gashed, and his eyes are not black and blue;
And it fills me with dread when I think what I've read from those Strenuous Stalky Two!

O Kipling and Teddy! why don't he heed to the precepts laid down by you?
Why doesn't he glare, why doesn't he swear, as a youngster of pluck would do?
My heart is still when I ask for the kill and he hasn't a thing to show:
For I know that fame and an a honored name can never be his below.

—Louis Brewsters King, in Central Presbyterian.

THE HUMAN FORM.

It may seem very strange to us to be assured by the teachings of science that the elementary facts of organic life is the same from the lowest creature living in the stagnant pool up to the glorious structure of the human form, made as the Psalmist remarks in a fearful and wonderful manner.

Can it be that the skilfully agile, symmetrical form of the athletic youth, or the sinuous enchanting figure of some radient and rare village beauty are constructed of the same materials as the little pollywogs of a slimy pool. The crucible of the chemist and the teachings of the Bible agree in their testimony that such is the fact. With all their beauties and charms of form, marvels of structure and of function, physically speaking, there is nothing in these bodies except some few of the elementary substances common in the atmosphere around and the ground underneath our feet.

The foundation stones on which these structures stand and the material of which they are constructed are oxygen, hydrogen, and nitrogen, three of the most common and abundant gases, along with carbon and sulphur. The elements named, in slightly different proportions, make up the protoplastic or primordial combination of which is the abode of Life. When the human structure, however, appears as the athlete or the beauty in a finished condition there appear besides the elements mentioned lime, potash, a little iron, sodium, and phosphorus. Such are the materials of the human body, and so far as scientific researches go there is nothing else in the make up of the athletic or beautiful figure. The same general combination with here or there an ingredient more or less prevails throughout the whole animal, vegetable and mineral world and the elements used are the most common and therefore most abundant.

Such being the fact explains to us why the animals and the plants around us can minister to human support, why the common air is to us the very breath of life, and why herbs and minerals have healing power or poisonous properties. [illegible] good or evil, but by virtue of some relation that animal, vegetable or mineral in its structure bears to the elements of which our bodies are composed, or the combinations into which those elements have been cast by the bodily mould. There is nothing of poetic fancy, or the use of dim and vague analogies that prompts such assertions about our bodies. It has for its authority the most definite facts that can be ascertained of the ulti[mate] phenomena of organic life, and it expresses the clearest conceptions that can be formed of the essential properties of the "human form divine." W. T. P.

Aphorism.

The subjoined brief, sententious statements of principals and truths are from the pen of Dr Thomas Fuller, a noted divine and writer of Cromwell's time.

It is dangerous to gather flowers that grow on the banks of the pit of hell, for fear of falling in; yea, they which play with the devil's rattles will be brought by degrees to wield his sword; and from making sport, they come to doing of mischief.

Heat gotten by degrees, with motion and exercise, is more natural, and stays longer by one, than what is gotten all at once by coming to the fire. Goods acquired by industry prove commonly more lasting than lands by descent.

The true church antiquary doth not so adore the ancients as to despise the moderns. Grant them but dwarfs, yet stand them on giants' shoulders, and may see farther.

Light, Heaven's eldest daughter, is a principal beauty in a building, yet it shines not alike from all parts of heaven. An east window welcomes the beams of the sun before they are of a strength to do any harm, and is inoffensive to none but a sluggard. In a west window, in summer time towards night, the sun grows low and overfamiliar, with more light than delight.

A public office is a guest which receives the best usage from them who never invite it.

Scoff not at natural defects of any, which are not in their power to amend. Oh! 'tis cruelty to beat a cripple with his own crutches.

Anger is one of the sinews of the soul: he that wants it hath a maimed mind.

Learning hath gained most by those books by which the printers have lost.

Generally, nature hangs out a sign of simplicity in the face of a fool, and there is enough in his countenance for a hue and cry to take him on suspicion; or else it is stamped in the figure of his body; their heads sometimes so little that there is no room for wit; sometimes so long, that there is no wit for so much room.

They that marry ancient people, merely in expectation to bury them hang themselves in hope that one may come and cut the halter.

Is there no way to bring home a wandering sheep but by worrying him to death?

Moderation is the silken string running through the pearl-chain of all virtues.

Let us be careful to provide rest for our souls, and our bodies will provide rest for themselves. And let us be herein like unto gentlewomen, who care not to keep the inside of an orange, but candy and preserve the outside.

Tombs are the clothes of the dead. A grave is but a plain suit and a rich monument is one embroidered.

NEW STAR ROUTE ORDER.

A Blow Struck at the Contractors Who are Known as Professional Bidders.

The Postmaster-General has long sought to obtain from Congress the right to refuse all bids for star route contracts except such as come from contractors living on or near the routes concerned. A large class of professional bidders has sprung up within the last thirty years. These men obtain contracts by the thousand and sublet them at about $10 a year less than their own proposals, a practice which makes it needlessly difficult for the Department to compel good service.

On looking into the subject recently, Second Assistant Postmaster-General Scallenberger has concluded that the Department has already the authority desired. All contracts provide that the bidder shall submit "sufficient guarantees for faithful performance," and General Schallenberger has decided that no one who lives away from the route involved can give such guarantee. Accordinglo a general notice was published today announcing that no star route contracts will be awarded in the future except to contractors who live on or adjacent to the routes. This is not to apply, however, to contractors who intend to move near the route, or to the reletting of a route made necessary by a failure under an existing contract.—New York Sun, Feb. 13.

New accomplishments of Shakespeare are discovered every day. Mr W. P. Adkinson, F. T. S., is lecturing upon "Theosophy According to Shakespeare." According to Mr Adkinson, Shakespeare "teaches the macrocosm of the microcosm, involution and evelution, the theosophical origin of the cosmos, the seven planes of consciousness, and the law of karma."

Swakespeare also teackes poker, for example:

"I dare draw as soon as another man."
"I with sword will open."
"Straight let us seek."

He knew the game as well as the planes.—New York Sun.

He Tried Them All.

J. F. Habermel, Bradford, Indiana, says: I have used almost every class of pills known to me, but never found any relief from habitual constipation and liver trouble. I bought four boxes of Ramon's Liver Pills and Tonic Pellets of an agent of the Brown Mfg Co., at Greenville Tenn. I used two boxes of the Pills and followed with the Pellets every night for thirty days, and today I am as healthy as I was twenty years ago. I will recommend Ramon's Liver Pills and Tonic Pellets to all who who suffer with such complaints. The Pills and Pellets are a sure cure; I would not be without the Pills in my family.

Important to Mothers.

The manufacturers of Castoria have been compelled to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to familiarize the public with the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. This has been necessitated by reason of pirates counterfeiting the Castoria trade-mark. This counterfeiting is a crime not only against the proprietors of Castoria, but against the growing generation. All persons should be careful to see that Castoria bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, if they would guard the health of their children. Parents, and mothers in particular, ought to carefully examine the Castoria advertisements which have been appearing in this paper, and to remember that the wrapper of every bottle of genuine Castoria bears the facsimile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher, under whose supervision it has been manufactured continuously for over thirty years.—Phila. Bulletin.

Stood Death Off

E. B. Munday, a lawyer of Henrietta, Tex., once fooled a grave digger. He writes: "My brother was very low with malarial fever and jaundice. I persuaded him to try Electric Bitters, and he was soon much better and continued their use until he was wholly cured. I am sure Electric Bitters saved his life." This remedy expels malaria, kills disease germs and purifies the blood; [illegible]

SMALLPOX.

Smallpox, or Variola, is one of the most formidable of the class of febrile diseases known as the Exanthemata. All cases of regular smallpox are divisible into three stages—viz. That of the initial or eruptive fever; that of the progress and maturation of the specific eruption; and that of the decline. Some writers make a primary stage of the period of incubation, or of the time intervening between the reception of the poison into the system, and the first appearance of febrile symptoms; but this is not entitled to be regarded as a stage of the disease, seeing that no symptoms of disorder have begun to show themselves. The first stage begins with rigors, followed by heat and dryness of the skin, a quickened pulse furred tongue, loss of appetite, pain in the pit of the stomach, with nausea, vomiting, headache, and often pains in the back and limbs. The violence of the pains in the back and the obstinacy of the vomiting, are frequently very well marked and characteristic symptoms. In children the disease is often ushered in by convulsions: while delirium sometimes attends its outset in adults. On the third day minute red specs begin to come out first on the face then on the neck and wrists, and on the trunk and body, and lastly, on the lower extremities. The fever usually begins to subside as soon as the eruption appears, and by the beginning of the fifth day, when the eruption is generally completed, the fever has entirely disappeared. The second stage commences when the eruption is fully out. Upon the second or third day of the eruption a little clear lymph is seen in each pimple, which has increased considerably in size since its first appearance, and which is thus converted into a vesicle. The vesicles gradually increase in breadth and become converted into pustules, which are at first depressed in the centre, but by the fifth day of the eruption become turgid and hemispherical; the suppuration on the face being complete by about the eighth day from the commencement of the fever, and the same process rapidly following in the other parts of the body in the same order of succession as that in which the eruption originally appeared. The pustules then break and scabs or crusts form over them, which usually fall off after four or five days' existence. The number of pustules in any special case and the severity of the disease stand in a direct ratio to one another; for 'the number of pustules indicates, in the first place, the quantity of the variolous poison which has been reproduced in the blood; and, in the second place, it is also a direct measure of the extent to which the skin suffers inflammation. Sometimes there are not more than half-a-dozen pustules; sometimes there are many thousands. If all these were collected into one, it would be an enormous phlegmon. For both these reasons, the system suffers commotion, distress, and peril in proportion to the quantity of the eruption.'—Watson's Lectures.

The progress of the pustules is usually accompanied with swelling of the skin of the face, with a painful sensation of heat and tension; the scalp is often swollen; soreness of the mouth and salivation usually supervene; and the patient exhales a peculiar and disagreeable odor. About the eight or ninth day of the disease, a recurrence of the fever, known as the 'fever of maturation,' sets in with varying degrees of intensity, according to the number and arrangement of the pustules. When the pustules are numerous, they run together; when they are few they keep separate. Hence the division of smallpox into the two great varieties of 'distinct' and 'confluent,' or variola discreta and variola confluens, and this division is of the highest importance, because the distinct form of the disease [illegible] which gradually fall off about the fourteenth day. It is not till three or four days after the scabs have formed on the face that the same process is completed over the whole body. The scabs are usually completely gone by the twenty-first day, leaving behind them blotches of a reddish brown color, which sometimes continue for some months before they quite disappear; and some of the pustules, in consequence of ulceration of the true skin, leave pits, especially on the the face, which remain permanently. The period of scabbing is accompanied by various symptoms of improvement: the tongue becomes clean, the appetite returns, and by the time that the scabs have fallen off the patient may be regarded as restored to health; so that the entire course of a case of distinct or discrete smallpox occupies about three weeks. In the confluent form of the disease the eruptive fever is more violent, the pain in the back is more severe, and the sickness more obstinate, and the eruption comes out earlier and less regularly than in the distinct variety which we selected for description as representing the more natural course of the disease. Moreover, the pustules do not fill so completely, nor are they of the normal yellow purulent hue, being whitish, brown, or even purple. But the most important difference between the two forms is in the secondary fever, which sets in when the pustules are mature. This fever, which is slightly marked in distinct smallpox, is usually intense, and highly dangerous in the confluent form; and it is at this period of the disease that death most commonly occurs. Statistics show that the eight day of the eruption is the most perilous day, and the second week the most perilous week. The early occurrence of death—that is to say, during the first week—denotes a peculiar malignancy in the disease. 'The nervous system,' says Dr Watson, 'appears to be overwhelmed by the force of the poison. During the second week the disorder proves fatal chiefly in the way of apnœ; from some affection of the respiratory passages. After that period, the characters of asthenia commonly predominate, the patient sinks under some casual complication, or the powers of life are gradually worn out by so much irritation of the surface, and so large an amount of suppuration.'

The above are the essential symptoms of smallpox, both in the distinct and confluent form. This disease is, however, often accompanied by other symptoms, which we have merely space to name; such as sore throat (which often depends on pustules situated there), salivation, and (in the confluent form, during the secondary fever) erysipelatous inflammation, leading to the formation of abscesses glandular swellings, sloughing sores on the sacrum, &c. In pregnant women the disease often causes abortion, which is most commonly followed by death. The dead child occasionally, but not often, is covered with pustules.

The cause of smallpox is universally allowed to be a specific contagion, of whose nature we are in the most profound ignorance. There is probably no disease so contagious as this. Dr Haygarth stated (in 1793) that during his long attention to this subject not a single instance has occurred to prove that persons liable to smallpox could associate in the same chamber with a patient in the distemper without receiving the infection; and he was informed by an American physician of an instance in which the poisonous effluvium crossed a river 1500 feet wide and effected ten out of twelve carpenters who were working on the other side. The contagion acts either through the air, or by contact with the skin, or by inoculation; and the disease may be caused by the dead body, even when it has not been touched. What products of the diseased body are contagious is not exactly known, but the contents of the pustules and the dried scabs certainly are so. Opinions are divided as to the period at which the disease begins and ceases to be contagious. It is safest to maintain that it is capable of self propagation as soon as the febrile symptoms have exhibited themselves. [illegible]

[illegible] the disease spontaneously d[isap]pears—dies out, as it were, [and] does not reapear perhaps for [...] Different epidemics vary [...] much in their severity, and i[solat]ed cases are usually milder [than] those occurring when the di[sease] is epidemic. Race has much [to do] with the severity of the dis[ease;] the constitution of the dark [races,] the Negro and the Red Indian[s, be]ing singularly susceptible o[f the] contagion, and exhibiting ver[y lit]tle power of resisting the [fatal] tendency of the disease.

It is universally admitted [that] the discovery of Vaccination[, by] which smallpox 'is deprived o[f its] danger, is the greatest triump[h of] modern medicine.' Inocula[tion] protected the individual, bu[t in]creased rather than diminishe[d the] total number of deaths, while [vac]cination has the advantage of [pro]tecting both the individual [and] the community. Altho in the [great] majority of cases vaccination [af]fords perfect protection ag[ainst] smallpox, it not very unfrequ[ently] happens that vaccinated per[sons] when exposed to the contagio[n of] smallpox, get the disease in a [mod]ified form, milder and shorter [...] than after inoculation, and th[ere]fore incomparably milder tha[n] the natural form. The dis[ease] occurring under these circ[um]stances has received the var[ious] names of modified or post-vacc[inal] smallpox, or the varioloid dis[ease.] As Dr Wood observes: 'It is [im]possible to describe minutely [all] the shapes which the varioloid [dis]ease assumes. There is every s[hade] between the slightest sympt[oms] scarcely recognizable as ha[ving] any affinity with smallpox, [and] the nearest possible approach [to] the regular disease.' In what[ever] form the varioloid disease appe[ars,] it wants the peculiar odor of sm[all]pox, and secondary fever is [...] rare. The constitutional dist[urb]ances which, for the first w[eek] may have been as severe as in [the] true disease, usually subsides [en]tirely when the eruption has re[ach]ed its height, and the patien[t is] convalescent at the period w[hen] if he had not been vaccinated [he] would have been in the grea[test] danger.

The history of this remark[able] disease is clothed in consider[able] obscurity. There is no evide[nce] that it was known to the Gree[ks or] Arabian writers of the 6th cent[ury,] and the first accurate descrip[tion] of it is that of Rhazes, an Arab[ian] physician, who flourished earl[y in] the 10th century. It appear[s to] have reached England towards [the] close of the 9th century. A[fter] the Crusades, it prevailed in m[ost] of the temperate countries of [Eu]rope, but did not reach the no[rth]ern countries of Norway, Lapl[and,] &c., for some time later. In 1[...] it was carried from Europe to [San] Domingo, and three years late[r it] reached Mexico, where it comm[it]ted fearful devastation, and whe[re] it spread with intense virule[nce] throughout the New World. (A[c]cording to Robertson, three [mil]lions and a half of people were [de]stroyed in Mexico alone.) In [17]07, it was introduced into Icela[nd] when more than a fourth pa[rt of] the whole population fell vict[im] to it; and it reached Greenl[and] still later, in 1733, when it sp[read] so fatally as almost depopulate [the] country. These cases are strik[ing] illustrations of the law that so [...] universally true, that a contagio[us] disease is always most virulent [on] its first introduction to a new so[il] of action.—Chambers Encyclop[e]dia.

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for [the] widow of the brave General Bu[rn]ham of Machias, Me., when the [doc]tors said she would die from pn[eu]monia before morning" writes [Mrs.] S. H. Lincoln who attended her [that] fearful night, but she begged [for] Dr King's New Discovery, [which] had more than once saved her [life] and cured her of consumption. [Af]ter taking, she slept all night. [Fur]ther use entirely cured her." [This] marvelous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Only 50c and $1. [...]

MARLINTON, THURS. FEB. 22, 1900.

M. J. McNeel, of Mill Point, announces himself for Commissioner of the County Court this week. He is eminently a fit man for the position and was so regarded by the number of prominent men who have been instumental in bringing him out.

In regard to the county commissioner it is Edray district's turn, if rotation of districts is to be considered, but a canvass of the district in which most of the available men were approached has so far not discovered anyone who is willing to accept the position. As the county court meets in Edray district it can probably afford to let the commissioners be chosen from other districts better than any other.

In re of County politics we have often heard of certain men being able to control other votes than their own. This is too broad a statement. Such a man may have a wide political influence and be able to make or mar a candidate, (most generally to mar one however,) but no man can say that he controls any vote except his own. Suppose he were to name the voter he is most certain of. Then the searcher after truth would go to that man and say: "The Hon. A. B. says he controls your vote. Is that so?" Then the voter would swear that no man controlled his vote, and any power that politician might have had over that man is gone.

YOU CAN DO GOOD!

You can can help a good cause along and also be paid for it in the following way: Wrap neatly and securely any cloth bound book of 125 pages or more (it may be an old school book if not torn) and mail it to the Fruitdale Seminary, at Fruitdale, Ala., as a contribution to the library. It will be thankfully received and they will, in return for your kindness, send you an excellent little paper a whole year and six curious shells from the Gulf Mexico, no two alike.

THE NORTH-WESTERN.

I have lately taken a policy in the North Western with Mr Echols for Two Thousand Dollars, will state frankly that I consider it the best Insurance company of which I have any knowledge. I have Thirteen thousand in other companies that I would be glad to exchange for a similar amount in the North Western if I had not carried those policies in the other companies too long to make such an exchange profitable.

FROST.

Cold weather.

John Tacy died at the camp Friday night last, of pneumonia.

James Gragg's wife, near this place, has been dangerously ill for the past ten days. Dr Cunningham of your town was up in consultation with Dr Jordan. She is some better at this time.

Mrs Jennie Williams is still growing worse. Her friends have given up all hopes of her recovery.

Peyton Moore has changed his occupation from the measles to clerking, and is now in the store of Hannah & Harper, where he is kept busy. This firm deserves their patronage which their fair and honest dealing have won for them.

Clark Gum and family made another trip to Highland to visit his sick mother. We are happy to state that she is slowly recovering.

James A. Reed, who was a frequent visitor to our town, has discontinued coming. He has an 8-pound boy and is now taking his time up singing, "Bye oh, baby!"

Born to Mr and Mrs Harry Guinn a fine girl. Harry is seen no more at the stores. Mother and child doing well.

Ed Spitzer, our prominent merchant, is down with measles.

Rev Pullins preached a very interesting sermon here Sunday last. He will soon be off for Conference, and it is hoped that he may be returned back to us. He is a promising young man, and wherever he may be sent we wish him God's speed.

There are plenty of widows and bachelors in this section; but, Mr Editor, they always remind us of —hotel soap!

We have right here a lady who truthfully says that she is sweet sixteen and has never been kissed. We heard of a Rev gentleman who was accused of kissing two girls and was voted "angelic"; what would you vote this young lady?

John Jackson made our little village a social call Wednesday last.

A great many of our young gentlemen and ladies "tipped their light fantastic toes" at John Cleek's, eight miles below here, Wednesday night last.

Upton and Clifton Sharp are said to have the mumps.

Mrs Hannah and daughter Icy have been right sick, but we are glad to report them much better.

Mrs S. P. Sheets and little daughter who have been visiting Highland, spent a few days here among relatives on her return home near Huntersville.

Mrs Clark Gum and Mrs S P Sheets spent a pleasant day at the hospitable home of Mr Samuel Curry Thursday last.

TIP.

FROST.

People are preparing for sugar making.

Mrs James Gragg has been quite ill for some time, but is improving at present.

Rev Pullen delivered an able sermon at this place Sunday.

C. C. Sharp came home from Irvin's camp Saturday.

There will be a game of football here Saturday.

The mumps and measles are plentiful in this part.

Mrs T. J. Williams is no better.

We want John A. Moore for Sheriff if we can get him.

Correspondence from Weston.

W. VA. HOSPITAL,
Weston, W. Va.
Feb. 14, 1900.

The Pocahontas Times,

Gentlemen—As a Valentine, I will send you a postal money order for two dollars, which pays my arrearages on subscription to date, and until October next, and I also want to include in my renewal the five year subscription to the Farm Journal, as per your offer in The Times. Send the Journal to A. M. Kee, Marlinton.

The Times is quite a source of pleasure each week to me, as it brings to my mind many persons that I am acquainted with, and brings me the doings of the people in general.

We are quarantined aginst smallpox here, and it is lonesome and disagreeable to be penned up without any access to the outside. There is only one case of smallpox so far in Weston, but of course the family of the patient will be afflicted, and it may be some time before the quarantine is raised.

There are several cases west of here about fifteen miles, also cases at Glenville, Gilmer County, and at Smithville, Ritchie County, at Mt Clare, Harrison County, at Buckhannon, but the local authorities at Buckhannon strenuously deny that there is any smallpox there. It seems to be scattered over nearly all of this part of the State, as there are pretty reliable reports of smallpox in all the following named counties: Monongalia, Harrison, Upshur, Lewis, Gilmer, Ritchie, Braxton, and Webster, and reports, but not absolutely reliable, from, Marion, Doddridge, and Calhoun.

I have only heard of one fatality so far, that was a Mr Bennet at Glenville. He was a lawyer.

The latest report gives Buckhannon 30 to 35 cases of smallpox, and the local authorities there have acknowledged that it is smallpox that they have. Camden-on-Gauley has 12 to 15 cases.

Very respectfully,
O. HUNTER KEE.

[Mr Kee is employed as a guard at the Weston Hospital.—Editor]

The following letter is from Mrs Bessie Shafer, a patient of the hospital, who will soon it is hoped be able to return to her home near Mill Point in this county.

Editor Pocahontas Times:

We are having plenty of rain and mud here this winter.

We are all having our health good this winter, except the bad colds, and some of the doctors and attendants are suffering with their vaccinated arms, but I do not think any of these cases are dangerous at present.

We certainly have fine doctors and attendants here. They are so good and kind to all.

I am so glad my health and mind is improving so nicely. I certainly do appreciate the kind and good doctors for saving my life, for I did think at one time I never would have the pleasure of reaching my dear old home and loved ones again. But I think if my health keeps so good, I will be at home once again and enjoy the pleasures of this life once more.

I am so anxious to see my dear friends and schoolmates again, that I have spent many happy hours with both at school and church, for I know they are as anxious to see me as I to see them; and I know and feel within my heart that they have been praying for me that I would get well and be able to come home once more, and I know their prayer, as well as mine, will be answered.

DUNMORE.

Fourteen below zero Tuesday morning.

No small pocks but lots of measles. K. D. Swecker and Miss Lucy Baxter are able to be up.

Miss Sallie Taylor has returned home.

Several of the camp men are at home.

Auctioneer Swecker has returned from Virginia and reports a lively sale for E. M. Arbogast.

Our school is closed on account of measles.

Rev Hamill and Mrs Dave Smith are very ill at this time.

Mrs Georgia Myers and daughter of Virginia are out on a visit.

S. B. Scott and lady are up on a visit.

W. A. Gladwell has opened up a grocery store on Main Street in Green Bank.

Lots of our people have been vaccinated.

Work on the railroad up this way is moving up nicely.

Jacob K. Taylor is on the sick list. Also Mrs E. M. Moore. Mrs Williams of Frost if some better.

There are considerable snow drifts on Cassel Mountain.

Dow O'Connel got his horse to drive about 3 miles.

They further caused an accurate census to be taken on the 3d day of February, 1900, as required by Section 4 of the chapter aforesaid. Said survey, map, and census have been left for examination on the part of any person interested at the office of the Pocahontas Times a weekly newspaper in said town.

And on Saturday, the 10th day of March, 1900, between the hours of 6 a. m. and 6 p. m., the qualified voters residing within said territory will meet at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court of the said County, at the court-house thereof, to vote upon the question of such incorporation, by ballot, each voter voting a ballot with the words printed or written thereon:

For Incorporation.
OR Against Corporation.

Said election and proceedings to be be held according to the provisions of Chapter 47 of the Code of the State of West Virginia.

Local Events.

Good morning! Have you used vaccine virus this morning?

J. W. Malcomb of Greenbrier county made his annual visit to Pocahontas last week.

If you need a pair of genuine, A A. Cutter shoes call on A. Harrison & Co. They keep them.

George W. Callison of Academy and Samuel Sheets of Dunmore were in Marlinton last Saturday.

A plague of measles is universal in this county. Happy is he who buried this sorrow with other ills of his childhood.

The Methodist church is being fitted up with furniture. A 500 pound bell is on the ground ready to be put in place.

A case of small-pox developed near Millboro Depot Monday and a strict quarantine has been established by the rest of Bath County against that point.

Public school in East Marlinton closed last Friday. Prof. Morris and Mrs H. A. Yeager teachers. So far as we can hear the patrons have been much pleased with their teaching.

Several persons who traveled in Bath County last week with health certificates found no place in which they could eat and sleep in the county. A Millboro wagon was turned back at the top of the mountain. We feel sorry for Bath, for to be scared to death is worse than the plague.

The Marlinton Academy, though closed on the account of supposed smallpox in R. R. Camp No. 3, will resume work again as soon as this scare has passed. A notice will appear later in the Times giving time of beginning, rates of tuition and board, &c.

The Golden store watches the market very closely all the time. A large part of his business consists of selling [illegible] line of shoes [illegible] and [illegible] better than ordinary stock. The manufacturers take special care with these because they are the samples from which they take large orders. [illegible] of samples have just been received and will be sold at about one-fourth the price you would have to pay for the same quality in regular stock. Come and be fitted at the Golden Store.

The Launching of the Pocahontas.

Smith & Whiting sent a couple of their employees down the river to cut away some of the drift timber which would interfere with their driving logs. They came to Marlinton and made a very neat boat, pitching it within and without, and were preparing to slip away in an unostentatious way, when some of the boarders at the Marlinton House decided that the boat must be launched in style.

A crowd gathered at the bridge in spite of the storm. Senator McNeel made a speech and Miss Mary Yeager broke a large bottle of good red wine over the bow and said, "I christen thee the Pocahontas." The hitch occurred in the proceedings when it was found that the bottle would not break against the soft wood of the boat. One of the lumbermen held his cant-hook so that the bottle could be broken. When the bottle was broken a wail went up from some of the spectators, who cried that that was carrying the joke too far.

The local Society for the Support and Maintenance of Oppulent Liquor Dealers handed in the following set of resolutions:

Whereas, on Saturday, February 17, 1900, a small boat was launched at the Greenbrier Bridge, during very inclement weather, and whereas on that occasion a large bottle of wine was broken over the front end of the boat and the contents wasted, be it resolved:

That it is the sense of this society that such action was wasteful, extravagant, and uncalled for; that all such practices be condemned, and that hereafter we unite to change the practice of christening boats to the more sensible form of drinking the contents and breaking the bottle on the bow of the boat.

Given under our hands and sealed with the great seals of our order Want, Wretchedness, and Crime, this 18th day of February, at 3 o'clock a. m.

A Correction.

The following item appeared in our last issue from the Green Hill correspondent:

"Mr Jimmie Bartley met with a serious accident on 28th inst. As many as a half-dozen girls kicked him."

We received a call from Mr Jas. Barclay this week at which time he asked us to correct the above as it is wholly false.

HO! BILL!

Bill, if any of your folks wants to buy a small piece of land, say six hundred and seventy acres, well timbered, and lying within less than a mile of the railroad building up Greenbrier river, for $3.00 per acre, just call on J. R. Apperson, as below. But if you want to move to town and be a gentleman I will sell you a first-class lot for $250 in Block 18 lot 8. For further information you can call or write to J. R. APPERSON, Marlinton, W. Va.

February 15, 1900.

Cecil H. Gum is learning the printing trade in this office.

Frank King has been housed with the measles for a week or so.

Mrs Rachel Gibson and sister Mrs Lizzie Hall, near Marlinton, are sick with measles.

The British under Roberts took five Boer laagers and are now drunk [illegible].

Died, last Thursday, James McClure, an aged citizen of Edray district. Obituary next week.

The mail from Renceverte for a week or so has been very irregular. Any delay in receiving this paper is due to this cause.

George W. McClintic, who spent a week in this county, went out to the Hot Springs Thursday.

Dr Lockridge's four children have all had the measles. The youngest took double pneumonia and was very ill.

Lucas Moore, from Haynes, Webster County, was at Marlinton last week as agent for a publishing house.

The O'Connel residence on Anthony's Creek was recently burned, nothing saved and no insurance. It was noted as one of the most elegant country residences in Greenbrier County.

Colonel R. S. Turk of Staunton, accompanied by a real estate man from Roanoke, a Mr Smith, was in Marlinton last week and escaped into Bath county just as that county closed its doors against us.

Vaccination need not be [illegible]. Under the modern process a [illegible] [illegible] many arms [illegible] considered abnormal. The patient may be well protected and not feel the effects of the virus.

A CASE OF SMALL-POX.

The Disease Makes Its Appearance but is Apparently under Control.

A case of small-pox developed in Camp No. 3, of John L. Pitts, five miles above Marlinton, last week, and as usual in sporadic cases, a number of persons were exposed to the disease before it was recognized as small-pox. Prompt and efficient action on the part of the Board of Health has so isolated the suspects that even through the disease develops in those who have been exposed, with the co-operation of the public, the disease may be kept from spreading.

The business interests of the county must necessarily suffer to some extent from the "scare" which has prevailed for a week or so, but the depression is more due to the inclemmency of the weather and the impassable condition of the roads. The only thing to do is to keep cool and go about our business as usual. If any person desires to be practically immune from the disease he should be vaccinated. The greatest element of danger to this section is in the small per cent of the people who have been vaccinated.

The camp where the case originated is situated at the old Harper place on Greenbrier River, the old buildings at that place being used. Captain Munday, a Virginian, is in charge of the camp. They were working about 150 men. A foreman by the name of Rousey, a white man, from Flavanna County Virginia, returned from Lynchburg in January, and in about four weeks developed the disease. Dr Brown is the camp doctor and on Wednesday, the 14th inst, the seventh day of the course of the disease reported it to the County Board of Health. He is a very capable physician, but never having seen a case of small-pox he was late in reporting it. Within three hours from the time the Board of Health was apprised of the fact a most effectual quarantine was established around the infected spot and no pains were spared to keep the disease from spreading.

Unfortunately some of the men who were working in camp got information of the contagion before the authorities did, and they left for home on the sixth day of the disease. They live several hundred miles away and do not endanger the health of this section by leaving. Not having been in the building with the patient they cannot be considered specially dangerous. Anyway they are gone and the county at large cannot be blamed for their escape. On Tuesday ten or fifteen of them passed down Browns Creek. The writer was in a buggy and was driving up behind them very rapidly. When they saw the buggy coming they took to the thick woods on the upper side of the road and disappeared running. Their strange actions remained a mystery for twenty-four hours. On Wednesday night some of the men in Camp No 2, who had had no chance for the disease, crept between the guards and got away, being fired upon by the guards. They were returned from Bath the next day.

The two camps are about four miles apart. There is no communication between the two except that the Superintendent L. A. Hankins and the Walking Boss Butler ride from one camp to the other. Camp No 3 was quarantined and a second line of guards placed between Marlinton and Camp No 2, which is about a mile above Marlinton. No one in the camp except Messrs Hankins and Butler had been to Camp No 3 and their foremen intimated to the Board that their room was preferable to their company. The Board suggested to Mr Butler that he take up his abode in Camp No 3. Mr Butler said they would take him there dead. The Board then built the two gentlemen a comfortable house where they will remain until the danger is over.

The Board of Health is composed of the following gentlemen: Dr J. M. Cunningham, president, L. M. McClintic, Amos Barlow, E. N. Moore, and Levi Gay. A meeting was held on Thursday at which all the members were present. The three members who live at Marlinton gave their entire attention to the task of organizing and effective quarantine and succeeded admirably. Anthony B. Kincaid, of Marlinton, afforded very efficient help from the first and was appointed to look after the guards.

Ingress and egress is not permitted to any point within a mile of Camp No 3, or into or from Camp No 2. The guards have had houses built to afford them shelter and a strict watch is kept day and night. No railroad hands are allowed to loiter or loaf around the stores in Marlinton, Edray or Huntersville, which would be a [illegible] rule to enforce at all times. With this exception work and business goes on as usual. A strict quarantine is maintained against us from Bath County.

It would be [illegible] understood that the strict quarantine [illegible] Marlinton [illegible] against the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] no small-pox [illegible] in Marlinton, but [illegible] the opposite.

Small-pox is not so dangerous a disease. What causes the panic wherever a case appears is its loathesomeness and the fact that it is so terribly contagious. Vaccination is regarded as the greatest triumph of medical science. A new era dawned for the world when it was discovered. The small-pox is prevailing in the north-western counties of this State, where there has been one death, that of Hon. Nelson M. Bennett, a lawyer of Glenville and president of the Gilmer County Bank. He with a number of other lawyers took the deposition of a man named Bush, who afterwards broke out with the disease. There is a great discussion going on as to whether the disease is small-pox or the "Phillipino itch." It seems more probable that the Phillipino itch is simply another name for small-pox. Small-pox broke out in the heart of Lewisburg a few years go and nearly all the members of one family had it, but the disease did not spread, and no lasting injury resulted to the town on account of the quarantine and panic. Staunton had 120 cases some years ago but the disease was confined to one section of the town and stamped out. In a thinly settled country like this with proper precautions, such as the Board of Health has taken, and with the watchfulness they are exercising there is no need for alarm.

Miss Annie Hannah's school at Slaty Fork closed Friday the 9h inst. She gave an entertainment which was attended by the largest crowd ever seen at a school entertainment in this part. Even some of the veterans of Manasses Junction and Gettysburg were present. There was abundant dinner on the ground and the spectators fared sumptuously. Everyone was highly pleased with the entertainment and the only complaint heard was that the hour of four came too soon.—Miss Hannah taught a good school; scholars six years old, unacquainted with the alphabet, can now read well in the first reader after three months attendance.

EDRAY.

The measles are still with us. Some have been quite sick, but all seem to be coming though all right.

We are greatly excited about the small-pox in this vicinity. Some of our citizens think we ought to be quarantined as well as Marlinton.

Some people in this section are offering the "Life of Dwight L. Moody." This is a book that will sell doubtless. The book written by Mr Moody's son W. R. Moody is preferable. The profits on this book will go towards the benefit of Mr Moody's Endowment Fund.

Miss May Moore passed through Edray Tuesday on her rounds selling books. She has the agency for several books and seems to be doing a fair business at least. We hope she will do well.

J. F. Dilley, of Laurel Creek, has been very sick for nearly a month. Last accounts from him we learn that he is recovering slowly.

Business seems somewhat dull since the small-pox scare got among us. The people keep close at home and all is quiet except talk of shunning this awful disease. Only a few of our citizens seem to have courage enough to go to Marlinton.

SALT RHEUM CURED BY
Johnston's Sarsaparilla
QUART BOTTLES.

JUST SEEN IN TIME.

Slight Skin Eruptions are a Warning of Something More Serious to Come. The Only Safe Way is to Heed the Warning. Johnston's Sarsaparilla is the Most Powerful Blood Purifier Known.

Nature, in her efforts to correct mistakes, which mistakes have come from careless living, or it may be from ancestors, shoots out pimples, blotches and other imperfections on the skin, as a warning that more serious troubles (perhaps tumors, cancers, erysipelas or pulmonary diseases) are certain to follow if you neglect to heed the warning and correct the mistakes.

Many a lingering, painful disease and many an early death has been avoided simply because these notes of warning have been heeded and the blood kept pure by a right use of JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA.

Miss Abbie J. Rande, of Marshall, Mich., writes:

"I was cured of a bad humor after suffering with it for five years. The doctors and my friends said it was salt rheum. It came out on my head, neck and ears, and then on my whole body. I was perfectly raw with it. What I suffered during those five years, is no use telling. Nobody would believe me if I did. I tried every medicine that was advertised to cure it. I spent money enough to buy a house. I heard JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA highly praised. I tried a bottle of it. I began to improve right away, and when I had finished the third bottle I was completely cured. I have never had a touch of it since. I never got any thing to do me the least good till I tried JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA. I would heartily advise all who are suffering from humors or skin disease of any kind to try it at once. I had also a good deal of stomach trouble, and was run down and miserable, but JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA made me all right."

The blood is your life and if you keep it pure and strong you can positively resist disease or face contagion fearlessly. JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA never fails. It is for sale by all druggists, in full quart bottles at only one dollar each.

ONE STREET BEGGAR.

He Lives in a Handsome Residence and Owns a Block.

John Carr has been a beggar on the streets of this city for the past quarter of a century. To-day he is a very wealthy man, the owner of beautiful East End property and a valuable block in another part of the city. All this was accumulated from the pennies, nickels and dimes daily dropped into his hat by the charitable people who were moved to pity by the sign that dangled from his breast, "I am Blind." Recently Carr, under the name of Terrance O'Mara, was a prisoner at police headquarters charged with violating a city ordinance. When arrested $61.38 was found upon him, not an uncomfortable roll for a "beggar."

There is no doubt according to the police, that Carr is one of the most successful beggars of the age. It seems almost incredible that a street beggar should live in a palatial East End residence, with all the luxuries that go with it, spacious grounds, &c. But that is just what Carr does. The story of Carr and his life since he became a beggar is a most remarkable one. When under arrest some time ago he, in a burst of confidence, told it.

Some years ago, when he was in the best of health and enjoying the use of his eyes, he was made a beggar by accident. It was a real hot day. He was walking the streets out of work and thoroughly disgusted with his lot. Becoming tired he sat down upon a stoop to rest. He took off his hat and was mopping the perspiration from his brow. At this juncture a kindly disposed pedestrian passed. Seeing Carr he took compassion upon him. Carr at this time had no thought of becoming a beggar, but when he put his hat upon his head a bright silver quarter rolled upon the ground. This started him to thinking.

From that time until to-day Carr has been a professional beggar.

He has been arrested numerous times, and was never taken into custody without a roll being found upon him. On one occasion $300 was taken from an inside pocket. Three times amounts aggregating a total of $75 were discovered. If Carr should ever be found at the police station without a large sum of money on him the officials would be greatly surprised.

Not long ago he was arrested by Officer Robert Smith at Seventh avenue and Smithfield street. He objected vigorously to being taken into custody. Some of those who had witnessed the arrest declared it a shame that a poor blind man should not be allowed to make a living. They did not know what they were talking about. At the station house Carr denied having anything of value on him, but Sergeant Sterck discovered the money. Carr left a forfeit for his appearance this morning and then took an East End car for his home in order to get there in time for his 6 o'clock dinner.—Pittsburg Post.

CHRISTIANITY IN BUSINESS.

Its Principles Applied Would Work a Glorious Revolution.

"There is not the least question that as the commercial world is organized and run to-day it is run at a fearful loss along the side of money," writes Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, author of "In His Steps," in the Ladies' Home Journal. "Even the rules of success that business men lay down do not insure success. Perhaps no age has equaled this for disturbance and unrest and warring interests in the business world. If the principles of Christianity were applied to the whole business world it would cause a shock that for the time being would result in what might prove to be the greatest financial panic of the ages. But out of that result would emerge a new order of buying and selling that would result ultimately in more financial success on the part of more people than the world has ever witnessed. Ultimately love will pay in dollars and cents better than selfishness. On selfish principles the business world today does not succeed even in the matter of making money—that is, not for any length of time nor for the masses of the people. Love in business would lose less money, and actually distribute the real earnings of toil among a far greater number of human beings, than is possible now under the present system."

Cost Of a Church Carpet.

"The Chicago Advance" gives the following estimate of the direct and collateral cost of a church carpet. The price was $800, but as the women of the church raised the money by giving entertainments the pastor's estimate was that when all the items of cost was figured in the carpet had cost fully $4,000. He reached this astonishing total by estimating the work, worry, nervous strain, bodily weariness and heartaches of one hundred women, the heroic efforts of men, women and children to eat the things which were to be eaten, and hear, see or buy things which had been provided to extract money from them; the colds, fevers and other ailments contracted while attending the entertainments, and the consequent doctors' bills; the money spent in other churches, for if they come to your entertainment you must go to theirs; and, worst and most costly of all, the demoralization of the church and the curtailment of the legitimate giving which follow the train of such methods of raising money. But they got their carpet.

Matrimony on the Move.

A unique wedding occurred in one of the suburbs of Columbus, when [illegible] Smith and Miss Lillie Hatcher, young people of East Highlands, were married on a street car. The preacher who was to wed them, the Rev. J. W. Simmons, was on the car hurrying to meet an appointment, and did not have time to leave the car. Accordingly the car stopped for a minute or two at Wildwood Park. The young people stood up in the car and the minister married them in the presence of the passengers. The marriage was followed by congratulations all the way around as the motorman turned on the full current to make up for lost time and the car whizzed through space. It was not a runaway match, the couple merely failing to meet the pastor at his home on time as by appointment.—Atlanta Constitution.

IS YOUR HAIR TURNING GRAY?

What does your mirror say? Does it tell you of some little streaks of gray? Are you pleased? Do your friends of the same age show this loss of power also?

Just remember that gray hair never becomes darker without help, while dark hair rapidly becomes gray when once the change begins.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

will bring back to your hair the color of youth. It never fails. It is just as sure as that heat melts snow, or that water quenches fire.

It cleanses the scalp also and prevents the formation of dandruff. It feeds and nourishes the bulbs of the hair making them produce a luxuriant growth. It stops the hair from falling out and gives a fine soft finish to the hair as well.

We have a book on the Hair and Scalp which you may obtain free upon request.

If you do not obtain all the benefits you expected from the use of the Vigor, write the Doctor about it.

A TRYING TIME.

The Man of Experience Recalls a Dinner at Vassar College.

He was a man of experience. He had visited nearly every known country and had thrilling adventures in some of them. He had hunted big game, and had been through at least one South American revolution. Consequently he was looked upon as an interesting story teller, and, being in a convivial party, there was a natural desire on the part of his associates to draw him out.

"Tell us about the most thrilling, awe-inspiring experience you ever had," one of them urged.

"There is one that stands out preeminently as the most trying ordeal of my life," he said at last. "No other experience that I ever went through begins to equal it. Nothing else ever made me half so nervous."

"Tell us about it!" they all cried.

"It was the day I took dinner at Vassar College," he began.

"Oh, come off!" they broke in. "Don't try to jolly us."

"I'm not," replied the man of experience. "I'm telling you the solemn truth. I was a friend of the family of a girl at Vassar, and, being armed with the proper credentials, I called upon her there and was invited to remain to dinner. I was the only man in the dining room. When I entered the girls were already seated and they took me in from head to foot. I could feel them doing it. At a rough guess I should say there were 500 pairs of eyes riveted upon me, and I knew that 300 girls were passing judgment upon me and everything connected with me—my dress, my bearing, my features, my manners, everything. One pair of feminine eyes can make a man feel uncomfortable, two pairs can make him think that life isn't worth living, and three pairs can give him the cold shivers. A girl knows it and she just glories in it. When she has man at a disadvantage there is nothing that gives her greater pleasure than to make the most of it and watch him suffer. Those girls had me at their mercy. They overwhelmed me with cold, critical, analytical glances that were more deadly than Mauser bullets. By the time I reached the guests' table, where I sat in solemn grandeur with the girl at whose invitation I was there, I would have gladly exchanged places with a man leading a forlorn hope on the field of battle. Before the dinner was half over I would have considered being lost in a tropical jungle pleasing by comparison. Oh, those girls, those girls! They left the dining room before I did, and, in doing so they passed my table. I tried to talk enterainingly to my friend, but I could feel them going by—and sizing me up, and I was satisfied that I didn't pass muster. It seemed as if each one was saying to herself: 'Oh, he's not so many! He lacks ease, and his tie isn't on straight.'"

"And that," he added, "was my most terrible experience. There was a thrill or a chill to every minute of it."—New York Sun.

CEREMONY OF THE HAT.

When Society Demands the Man to Raise or Remove His Headgear.

"The ceremony of the hat is something more punctilious than formerly," writes Mrs. Burton Kingsland of "Good Form for All Occasions," in the Ladies' Home Journal. "A man awaits the lady's recognition before he raises his hat to her. He also raises his hat when presented to a woman, when meeting and taking leave of her, when about to address her, or when she first speaks to him—for whatever reason, if he passes her on a stairway or in front of her in public conveyance, theatre or elsewhere—indeed, whenever the least apology would be in order; when he offers his services in any way, even tacitly, or shows her some trifling courtesy; and he should always raise his hat when acknowledging her thanks. A man should pay the same mannerly tribute to her sex when a woman enters an elevator and remain uncovered during her stay therein. He should also raise his hat upon recognizing an acquaintance who has a lady with him. If the friend with whom he may be bows to a lady, he should show the same courtesy, although she may be unknown to him. Should a lady be with him and recognize a friend he should lift his hat."

She Met Ruskin.

Mr. Ruskin was taking a morning walk not long ago near Brantwood, when he saw a woman seated on a campstool making a sketch of the house, and with a courteous grace which is intensely his own he addressed her, inquiring her reason for choosing the house in question for her subject. "It is the house of the famous John Ruskin," she frankly answered. "Have you met Ruskin?" she was asked. "No, indeed," she replied. "If I had I would have deemed it one of the greatest privileges of my life." "Then, madam, if you care to follow me, I will show him to you." In a twinkling the stool and easel were packed up, and the artist eagerly followed the guide. To her surprise and gratification, he led her up to the house, and, entering, bade his guest follow, which she readily did. On marched the stranger into the drawing room, then, placing his back to the fireplace, a familiar attitude, he exclaimed, to the amazement of his companion: "Now, what do you think of Ruskin?"

Wanted the Letter.

She confronted him at the breakfast table.

"George, I want that letter in your pocket. Please give it to me. Don't refuse."

A guilty look swept over his face, and he answered hoarsely: "W-what letter, my dear?"

"Why a V, but if you could make it an X it would do just as well. I have got some shopping to do."

And he was so grateful at the hair-breadth escape that he made it a XX.

Rushing Him Through.

"Casey's hearing has given out and he is rapidly going blind."

"What's to become of him?"

"His friends are trying to have him made a baseball umpire."—Philadelphia North American.

West Virginia University,
MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Premedical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

Odds and Ends.

Thoughts on Edward Markham.

When Edward Markham wrote the "Man with the Hoe," a poem requiring a woodcut reproduction of a great painting, and thereby stumping the country papers, the great Disregarders of the laws concerning copyrights, we bowed down and published his poem as worthy to be printed in space not needed for some local observation.

But now that Mr Markham is going down into his barrel for copy and is putting on the market any old rubbish, we have lost a great deal of our admiration for the villifier of the agriculturist. Most of newly unearthed poets have the decency to make their lines rhyme and regard with envy those who are able to market their blank verse for more than the finished product. Markham slings a few disjointed sentences together, collects cable-gram rates and waits for the next inspiration.

If a Philadelphia publisher had ordered a poem on "A Sorrel Mule," for instance, he would have been supplied by return mail with something like the following, for which we unhappily cannot find bidders at any price:

THE SORREL MULE.

The color of the sky at sunset—or of leaves
Just tinged with autumn's splendid hue;
A mane like grass which bows before the scythe,
And bristles on his tail like stubble fields;
His voice the deep hoarse bellow of the sea;
Tolerance and equity were seated in his afein,
And in his heels is where Jove's lightning sat.
He mused and meditated, paused awhile,
And flicked an insect from his deep scared side,
And grazed upon the herbage round his feet.
Oh hybrid! twenty centuries are bond in thee;
Fleet Arabs spurning dew upon the plains;
Wild asses romping on the Grampian Hills;
While you will plow the furrows of the field,
A quadruped until into oblivion
There sinks with you the finis of your race.
Oh man! Oh mule! Oh ineffectual blend!
What deep significance we find in this.

He Who Hesitates.

The aphorism that who hesitates is lost is applicable to the candidate especially. We have known men who were considered by a majority of the electors to be the proper men for certain places, but who could not make up their minds to run until the ticket was made up. The amateur politician then finds himself crowded out. The kind and considerate friends who urge him to enter grow less and less each day until he is dropped as a possibility. It does not do to cast a wistful eye as you stand shivering on the brink of a political Jordan, fearing to launch away.

The parable of the cripple at the pool applies pretty well. Once every four years the pool of politics is troubled. If by an angel it is one of the dark kind. And when that pool is troubled it means that one only can be elected. There have been a good many waiting for the pool to be troubled to step down, but while they were coming a more active man steps in before them, and they have to wait another four years or so, and it has often happened that men who fully intended to serve their country grow old and die without having fed from the public crib.

Mail Carriers.

The decisive action taken by the 2nd Assistant Postmaster General under which he will not accept bids from syndicates or anyone for a star route mail contract who does not live near the route will meet with decided approval all over the country.

Of late years when the mail routes of this section were to be let to contract the notices were posted in the postoffices here, but they attracted but little attention for it was a foregone conclusion that some foreigner would bid it in at a starvation price, and come on here to look for a subcontractor to take it at something less than the bid.

The agent was accustomed to search the country over for some one whose necessity was such that he would accept the contract in hope of eking out the pitiful sum he received with money made as a common carrier.

Very often a good service would be given but usually the mail-boys are poorly paid and the stock on the mail route are sorry specimens of horse-flesh.

This is called a rich and glorious country and it is too bad that the star routes which form a network all over the country should so badly represent a government in comfortable circumstance.

We can imagine a Continental tourist describing the great and glorious United States by giving a description of the equipage and appearance of William McKinley's mails as they are carried in the country. Then the foreign reader would image if the goverment employees were like this, that the common people must be very wretched indeed.

During the past winter the contractor on the route from Lewisburg to Marlinton struggled hard to get the mails through and succeeded for awhile by starting at Lewisburg about 11 a. m. and reaching Marlinton the next morning between midnight and daylight. Yet with all this the department fined the contractor $15 for coming in late during the month of December. We were sorry to hear this for he should have been paid all or not have been called upon to carry it.

Monterey had a like experience. The mail was brought through from Staunton about 50 miles. The service went down until the mail would arrive at the time to send out the return mail. Upon complaint to the department the contract was taken away from the former contractor and the department employed a man to carry a daily mail both ways for $4000 per year. He put a good stage line on the road and got the mail in on schedule time. The stage line afforded such good service that it has worked up a patronage which enables the mail to be carried at something like the old rate, but giving the people a good service also.

Judge Van Wick's Platform.

To make the Democracy triumphant we have only to convince the people that it will give:

First. Honesty and economy in the administration of the Government, National and State.

Second. Taxation for the payment of the legitimate expenses and liabilities of the Government, and not for gratuities.

Third. The repeal of laws lending the taxing power to monopolies, giving them special privileges to the exclusion of the many.

Fourth. Enactment of equitable tariff laws.

Fifth. That quasi-public corporations, like railroads, gas, and electric companies, in consideration of the rights acquired under the right of eminent domain, must be mase to impartially subserve the interest of the public.

Sixth. The general business of the country must be protected against the dangerous influence of monopolies fostered by unjust laws.

Seventh. That such sure protection will be extended to the property rights of all as will invite and deserve the confidence of the general business interests of the country.

Eighth. The equitable restraint of such mammoth trusts which destroy competition, restraining the fields of employment and individual effort—making this a nation of servants.

Ninth. That [illegible] citizens shall be treated justly and fairly in every part of American territory.

Tenth. That our country shall keep clear of entangling alliances with all nations to the end that we may live in peace with all and shall not be involved in their controversies, in many cases the result of race prejudices of centuries.

PAN-AMERICAN EMBLEM.

The Beautiful Design Which So Tastefully Typifies the Exposition's Purpose.

The beautiful emblem which the Publicity Committee of the Pan-American Exposition, which will be held at Buffalo during the summer months of 1901, has adopted, was the work of Raphael Beck, a Lockport artist, whose design was by all conceded to be the most beautiful and comprehensive of the four hundred and odd drawings which were submitted.

The design typifies the hopes and aspirations of the management of the coming Exposition as words can, for the [illegible] underlying purpose of the Pan-American Exposition is to show to the world the progress that has been made by the people of the Western world during the closing century and also to bring about closer trade and social relations between all the peoples of the Americas.

Nothing could more beautifully express the idea of a binding together of the people of the North, Central, and Southern divisions of the western hemisphere than Mr Beck's picture, which shows the sweet-faced nymph of North America smiling a welcome as she looks down and extends a snowy arm across the Isthmus of Yucatan in greeting to her sweet-faced sister of the South, who by the way, seems fully as eager to clasp the extended hand and do her share in the effort to bind together the North and South in the holy bonds of an All American sisterhood.

Buffalo, N. Y., February.

COPYRIGHT, 1899, BY PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION CO.

The Court of the Machinery and Transportation Building of the Pan American Exposition, which will be held at Buffalo, N. Y., on the Niagara Frontier, during the summer months of the year 1901, presents an interesting treatment of cloister work. The Machinery and Transportation Building itself forms a hollow square, with this Court in its centre. It is 200 feet long and 100 feet wide, the east and west ends opening respectively to the great entrances from the Grand Canal and the Court of the Fountains, while the great exhibiting rooms of the Mall side of the building, and the two exhibition rooms and great entrance court from the Court of the Fountains side of the building, lie on either side. Along each side of this court, and extending the entire length, are roof-covered arcades under which the visitor may find rest on the comfortable benches.

The pool itself is 175 feet long and 27 feet wide. It is placed in the centre of the Court. The bank is sodded and planted on all sides, forming a pleasing frame or border effect; the water is low so as to receive the reflection of the growth around the pool.

The fountain is an important feature, placed in the centre of the pool, and giving life to the scene and freshness to the atmosphere. Throughout the Court are pleasant walks and paths, bordered with low-growing shrubbery and plants, and at intervals at axis-points with the arcades, rare plants are placed in great vases, making a truly architectural landscape effect. The entire scheme gives the effect of an admirable enclosure of a mission cloister, and is planned as one of the many little oases for the refreshment of the weary sightseer.

WHAT WOULD JESUS DO?

One of the most pleasant things now in evidence is the interest that seems awakened as to what our Lord would do were he a citizen of Pocahontas and had to meet the duties and responsibilities that such citizenship implies, on the part of those who would like to know and do whatever is right.

A few weeks since while the writer was being entertained at a very pleasant home, some one passing the road called out. The proprietor responded by going to the door, and peering into the darkness inquired what was wanted. The party politely asked permission to sleep in the barn. This was readily granted, with the proviso there were no matches in his pockets. The wayfarer emphatically disclaimed having anything of the kind about him.

The proprietor came back to the fireside circle and assumed a solemn expression, as if he was feeling badly. Upon being asked the reason he said: "I was just thinking about what Christ would have done about that man, under the circumstances. I somehow feel he would have invited him in, and that I have not done right exactly.

Then he was asked the question, what could Christ have done, since he had no barn—not even a place where to lay his own head—that he could have entertained a person thankful for lodging in a barn?

This incident has led the writer to refresh his memory in the history of Christ's manifestation on earth. He finds that those nearest him never knew what he would do, and the reason is plain. He was more than man, and so more than a human around. And as the human can not forecast what the divine is going to do the next hour, it seems the inquiry can anybody here be perfectly sure these times what Jesus would do were he here and in our circumstances.

At the outset the intelligent reader of the Gospels finds that there is a vast range of subjects which Jesus positively refused to consider when asked to, and what is so singular, these are the very subjects into which many seem more than willing to rush, all heedless of the familiar saying about what angels fear to try.

These subjects refer to relations of social life, involve the burning problems of capital and labor, wealth and poverty, men's rights and woman's rights. Now on all such matters our Lord was silent, except as he laid down permanent principles, that we may apply and rectify everything if we suffer ourselves to be taught in His doctrine and influenced by His teachings, and he left these principles to be worked out by those who would live as He would have them live.

Should our citizens lose sight of this fact, there is serious danger that well meaning speakers and writers may parade the country in the name of the religion of Christ, of the best brand, and try to array the rich and poor in hostile camps, and stimulate class enmity of a bitter character, while Christ himself never encouraged or fostered a class spirit. He never took the part of the poor, for simply being poor in property, altho a poor man himself. He spoke with pungent, solemn severity to the rich about the fearful danger they were in, as long as they cared for their wealth and nothing else, and oppressed their fellow citizens, but he would go home with them and enjoy their hospitality. He called Mathew from the revenue service, and Zacheus from his extortions in the service of a tyrannical government, both persons representing the capitalists of his time.

It should be remembered too that Jesus came into the world with a special work to do—that only a Divine being could do,—hence all that a human being could or can do is to imitate his spirit. "Lo! I come to do thy will Oh, God," should be our motto; but no two persons have the same tasks assigned them.

Then too there is another thing to be considered. The world has been so changed by Christ's having been in it, and ever since been exerting its constant almighty power upon it, that all Christians are in hazardous positions who may take it on themselves to say with any approach to accuracy just precisely what Jesus would do were he now with men.

Now good people, somewhat rusty in their studies of the Gospels, may say, Are we then all left in the dark. Not by any means, for we may have the comforting assurance, day by day, that if we fear God and keep His commandments; love him with all the heart, soul, mind, and strength, and our neighbor as ourselves, we are doing the will of God; we are doing just what Christ has counseled us as to do, over and over, even tho we may not be sure that we are doing just precisely what the infinite Son of Man would be doing in the premises. Christ gave not a schedule or programme but a law of the Spirit of Life.

He inculcated principles but left but few rules he came to illustrate and fulfill the law and the prophets not to destroy the great principles underlying the Ten Commandments—supreme regard for God's will and a mutual regard to our fellow men, doing unto others as others would have others as we would have others do to us.

Christ bids follow him, learn of him, bear the cross after him, and be in the world as He was in the world. He was in the world for the purpose of making it better, but all His teaching was in the religion of motives, principles and the tone and spirit of the best way to spend our lives. A dissatisfied man asked Christ, "Speak to my brother that he may divide the inheritance with men." That man wanted a programme, but that was out of Christ's way of doing, and He talks to the man, warning him against covetousness, and gave him the principle to think of, and He would have nothing to do with the trouble on the lines of a program.

Now it matters not what we citizens are, bank presidents, mill owners, merchants, farmers, housekeepers; sick or well; in debt or out, we may all have mind of Christ. Christ may be formed in us the hope of glory, and so we all shall know what we ought to do whether or no we can say exactly to the world by speech or by writing what Jesus would do in times like these.

Christ guarantees to all that follow him in their motives, principles, tone and spirit of life, that they shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the Light of Life, and that is a good guarantee, for heaven and earth may pass away, but his word endures forever.

COUNTY POLITICS.

The County Executive Committee of the Democratic party is called to meet next Tuesday at which time in all probability a primary will be arranged for and rules adopted governing it. One of the questions to be decided is as to who will be entitled to vote in the primary.

As far as the writer is individually concerned as a Democrat he is in favor of allowing any Republican to vote for any one or more candidates in the county primary if he will support those nominees of the offices for the filling of which he votes in the general election. On the other hand there are many good party men who believe that before a Republican should vote in a Democratic primary he should renounce his allegiance to his party from President down.

In discussing this question with several members of the committee the other day it was decided to call attention to it in this public way so that if a candidate or any one in interest has aught to say concerning this point he will make known his wishes or forever afterwards hold his peace.

In the death of Rev A. C. Hamtil the country loses a man whose influence has been only for good. The highest compliment that can be paid a man is that the world is better for his having lived in it, and this can be truthfully said of him.

England is still hopeful of being ultimately successful in the Transvaal war. So far she has lost 14,000 men killed, wounded and missing.

The Democratic Convention to nominate a candidate for Congress from this district will be held at Montgomery, Fayette County, July 17.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

The National Democratic Committee met at Raleigh Hotel in Washington February 22, and fixed upon Kansas City as the place and July 4 as the time of holding the convention to nominate a candidate for President and Vice-President. The meeting showed great harmony in the Democrats of bifferent sections and while the sentiment was that "we shall never desert the Chicago Platform," after the pathetic way of Mrs Micawber, very little was said about "free silver."

If anyone issue becomes paramount it will be against imperialism—for the republic as against the empire.

The effect of being [illegible] for four years from the seat of Government has told upon the party and the Democrats are drawing closer together. This was clearly in evidence at the late meeting.

Senator Gorman who is a power in politics, and who has been slightly off-color for a few years, took a leading part in the meeting. Milwaukee was the only rival of Kansas City. The latter made an offer of a certified check of $50,000 and expenses and was almost unanimously chosen.

The question of the time of holding the convention was debated long and earnestly. Thompson, of Nebraska, the home of Bryan, advocated May 9, the date of the Populist's convention. Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, named June 14, and Col. McGraw, of our own State, July 4.

Col Bryan has been in favor of the earliest possible date, but the proposition of May 9 did not receive any support in the committee beyond that of the gentleman who proposed it. After a lengthy debate July 4 was adopted by a vote of 27 for that date, 24 for June 14 and 1 for May 9. To hold the convention after that of the party in power is a conservative rule in politics which has all the precedents to support it.

All Democrats, of whatever record politically, are invited to unite in sending delegates to the convention. The past is a sealed book. The basis of representation is two delegates for each Representative and Senator in Congress.

ASSESSMENT OF LANDS.

G. M. Kee, of Marlinton, has finished the work of assessing the lands of this county, and has filed the reassessment book in the clerk's office where it may be inspected by any person.

On the first sight it seems that the county has been growing as Assessor Kee reports 47,179 acres of land more than Assessor Yeager did in 1881. This discrepancy is explained bp the fact that timber leases have grown so common, they being assessed as so many acres while the land remains assessed to the owner at the original number of acres.

Land in general is valued higher than in 1891, but grass land which has deterioated by growing up in brush, or by blue grass being replaced by poverty grass was lowered. The assessment of 1900 is $461,656.25 higher than that of 1981, not including the Marlinton town lots.

The town of Marlinton is assessed at 144,395, land and buildings; the buildings being valued at $21,620. The town lots range in value from $5 to $300, with two lots at $400.

The following table shows a portion of the recapitulation:

RECAPITULATION.

District	Acres	Buildings	Land & Buildings.

Keep Coughing

We know of nothing better to tear the lining of your throat and lungs. It is better than wet feet to cause bronchitis and pneumonia. Only keep it up long enough and you will succeed in reducing your weight, losing your appetite, bringing on a slow fever and making everything exactly right for the germs of consumption.

Stop coughing and you will get well.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

cures coughs of every kind. An ordinary cough disappears in a single night. The racking coughs of bronchitis are soon completely mastered. And, if not too far along, the coughs of consumption are completely cured.

FROST.

Mrs Jennie Williams, wife of T. J. Williams, died at her home in this place Saturday morning about 3 o'clock. She had been a long sufferer.

We have just learned over the wire that the Rev Hamil, of Green Bank, died of pneumonia.

Mrs John Warless died at her home about 3½ miles from this place of pneumonia. She had been sick about 15 days before medical aid was called and then it was too late, as she was dying when the doctor arrived.

T. J. Williams left here Friday for Staunton on urgent business.

Mrs J. A. Gragg who was dangerously sick, has almost recovered.

Mrs Ed Spitzer, wife of our merchant, is very low with pneumonia. We certainly hope that she may speedily recover.

Mrs William Bussard has been postmisstress at this place for several days owing to the measles striking our postmistress. It is said that about 15 are down with it at this writing.

Johnny A. Moore and wife are down Knapps Creek visiting.

Our jolly clerk Peyton Moore made a flying trip to Highland on Friday to learn for a certainty if John Willihan had smallpox. He got but little information, but it is supposed to be a case of chills and fever. There are two cases of small pox in Crabbottom.

The reported case of mumps at Gilmore Sharp's has proven to be a gumboil on the back of the neck.

The people at Monterey are so badly frightened that you hardly eaer see a professional man on the streets. It is reported that they are preparing dugouts for them on Lawyer Square. They have quarantined against Pocahontas before ascertaining whether or not Pocahontas has the small pox, while at the same time there are two cases in Crabbottom. We hardly believe there is a case of small-pox in Pocahontas, but a genuine case of Cuban chicken pox. They should ascertain to a certainty whether or not Pocahontas has the dreaded disease before tearing their shirts, and not let one man worth his millions frighten the whole town—Why they say they could hear that gentleman holler from Monterey to Vanderpool when the news was circulated that 37 negroes were on their way to Staunton. Of course death is to be dreaded by some.—It is truthfully said that they have lived off of this county in a great measure for the past 20 years and now they get frightened over a typical case of chills and fever, and fine a Pocahontas man $25 if he enters their town.

We send the following out for the teachers to crack: A mother gave to each of her sons 30 apples to sell. Johnny sold his at two for a cent and brought home 15 cents. Clark disposed of his lot at three for a cent, returning 10 cents; their combined sales amounting to 25 cents. On the following day the mother went out with 60 apples and sold them at the rate of five for two cents, receiving 24 cents for the lot. Where is the missing one cent.

Have You Heard Of It?

You may have heard about SCOTT'S EMULSION and have a vague notion that it is cod-liver oil with its bad taste and smell and all its other repulsive features. It is cod-liver oil, the purest and the best in the world, but made so palatable that almost everybody can take it. Nearly all children like it and ask for more.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

looks like cream; it nourishes the wasted body of the baby, child or adult better than cream or any other food in existence. It bears about the same relation to other emulsions that cream does to milk. If you have had any experience with other so-called "just as good" preparations, you will find that this is a fact.

Marlinton is to have a new telephone service this month, each machine being put on a separate wire. This will be a blow struck at the general dissemination of news, but otherwise it will be a consummation greatly to be desired. Strange to say, the stringing of the phones on a wire in multiple has one feature in its favor. For instance, a man is wanted and his office is rung for, the signal being four short rings for instance. If he had a separate wire, if he was in his office he would answer, otherwise he would not be found. But when the signal is rung on 15 or 20 'phones throughout the town he may hear it as he walks along the street, or in a store, and rushing up to the phone answers the ring.

The Small-Pox Scare Over.

No new case of small-pox have developed and it is thought the disease will not spread as 20 days have gone by without any new cases. A number of our citizens whose hindsight has always been appreciably better than their foresight are doubtful as to whether it was a case of small-pox at all.

A small-pox epidemic will not take us unprepared again soon for the whole county has been vaccinated, thanks to the scare. Some have been inclined to think that because the vaccination did not make them sick or cause great ulcers on their arms, or wherever they were vaccinated, that the vaccine did not take. They may be relieved of uneasiness for with the modern ateptic methods of vaccination high fevers and suppurating ulcers are prevented by keeping out of the viris germs and impurities. It takes a medical man to tell certainly whether the vaccine takes or not.

A Quarantine Incident.

The guards of the shotgun quarantine which is enforced against the infected spot up the river from Marlinton, tell the following on Boyd B. Bartlett, one of their number.

About midnight they heard Boyd's gun go off with terrible roar. The guards rushed up and found Mr Bartlett calm but determined. He said: "I saw a darkey standing out there, and I told him to halt and he would n't move, and said halt again and he would n't move, and I let him have it."

An investigation showed a load of buckshot in a tall black stump.

DIED.

Died, at Irvine's camp, on Knapps Creek, February 10, 1900, John Randolph Tacy, aged 24. His ailment was pneumonia, preceded by measles. His parents were George and Caroline Tacy of Back Alleghany.

He was a young man highly esteemed for his good character, and his death is sicerely lamented. One of his physicians prayed with him at his request and he prayed earnestly for himself, and became reconciled to die, believing that he was accepted and saved by faith in Jesus. He had a word for his comrades and with tears promises were made to try to meet him in heaven. It was his wish to be buried near his home where his grave could be often seen and thus his parents and all others would be reminded of his being in heaven and would be waiting for them there.

Mrs Nancy Newcomer of Ronceverte, and Mrs Susan Carter, near Huntersville, Mrs Mary Childers, Buckhannon, W. Va., Andrew Auldridge, Kansas, and George Auldridge, Iowa, are her surviving children.

Mrs Auldridge was a daughter of John Smith, a pioneer settler of tae head of Stony Creek. In all the relations of life she was a very estimable person, and her children "rise up and call her blessed," and she was blessed in them. For more than seventy years she was a devout Christian in the pale of the M. E. Church.

INDIAN DRAFT.

The measles are still a legal tender in this part.

Billy Gay is just recovering from a dose of measles and all of family to have it. Several others in this neighborbood have been exposed.

The smallpox scare in this part was huge, but seems to be subsiding a little now. I see reported in the Buckeannon Delta that there is a wonderful smallpox scare in Buckhannon, and well it may be, as there are several cases in that town. It reports only one death in the State, Lawyer Bennett of Glennville, he being an aged gentleman and in poor health.

Dave McClure passed here today enroute for Driftwood.

Robert Simmons met with an accident caused by his horse falling and hurting him, not seriously.

Kemp Johnson, who went to his uncle Ewing Sharp's to have the measles and to keep them from his father's family, thinking he was able to go and went out too soon we suppose, has pneumonia in both lungs and quite low.

Gay & Co. are still shooting in the logs and rolling out the lumber.

Why not John Waugh, Sr., for Assessor.

Sure enough Beverly Waugh is not forgetful to visit measle patients. We are glad to see our friend at any time.

John E. Barlow is getting him up a team; says he will do his own plowing. That's right!

John Davy Liggett has moved to Walker Ervine's.

John Waugh has moved into the Sandridge house lately vacated by Josiah Dilley.

Robert L. Malcomb's have all recovered from the measles.

TRAVELLER.

To Whom it May Concern.

It is being circulated in certain sections of Pocahontas County, in order to injure my credit, that I am broke up and can't pay for the lands I have been buying in said County and will have to give up the lands, and lose what I have paid on them, &c.

Now in order to to quiet the minds of creditors and expose the falseness of these reports, I will say that am now closing up my all business in Highland County, Va., and will move my family to Pocahontas County in March, where I will continue in the Real Estate business. I am not only prepared to meet all my debts, but want to buy some more good timber and grazing land in Pocahontas. Any one wanting to sell me lands, or handle lands for them on a commission will please call on or address me at Marlinton after the 10th of March next, and oblige.

If all the people of the county would get vaccinated small-pox would not do much harm if it did get a start in our county. It is not that the disease is so very dangerous to life that it is so dreaded but if it gets started it spreads so rapidly. It is very important to see that it is kept in bounds before it gets a start in the county. Every body should get vaccinated without delay.

The doctors ought not to charge a family more than a dollar and a half to vaccinate them. A dollar is all right for one person but to pay a dollar for each person in a family of six or more is too much for any poor man to pay.

I enclose you a clipping from the Weekly World, Chatham, N. B., and hope you will publish it, as it might be of great benefit if the small-pox should get a hold in our county.

It is reported that there is a case of small-pox at Frost.

SCROFULA AND ITS AWFUL HORRORS
—CURED BY—
Johnston's Sarsaparilla
QUART BOTTLES.
A MOST WONDERFUL CURE.
A Grand Old Lady Gives Her Experience.

Mrs. Thankful Orilla Hurd lives in the beautiful village of Brighton, Livingston Co., Mich. This venerable and highly respected lady was born in the year 1812, the year of the great war, in Hebron, Washington Co., New York. She came to Michigan in 1840, the year of "Tippecanoe and Tyler too." All her faculties are excellently preserved, and possessing a very retentive memory, her mind is full of interesting reminiscences of her early life, of the early days of the State of Michigan and the interesting and remarkable people she has met, and the stirring events of which she was a witness. But nothing in her varied and manifold recollections are more marvelous and worthy of attention than are her experiences in the use of JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA. Mrs. Hurd inherited a tendency and predisposition to scrofula, that terribly destructive blood taint which has cursed and is cursing the lives of thousands and marking thousands more as victims of the death angel. Transmitted from generation to generation, it is found in neary every family in one form or another. It may make its appearance in dreadful running sores, in unsightly swellings in the neck or goitre, or in eruptions of varied forms. Attacking the mucous membrane, it may be known as catarrh in the head, or developing in the lungs it may be, and often is, the prime cause of consumption.

Speaking of her case, Mrs. Hurd says: "I was troubled for many years with a bad skin disease. My arms and limbs would break out in a mass of sores, discharging yellow matter. My neck began to swell and became very unsightly in appearance. My body was covered with scrofulous eruptions.. My eyes were also greatly inflamed and weakened, and they pained me very much. My blood was in a very bad condition and my head ached severely at frequent intervals, and I had no appetite. I had sores also in my ears. I was in a miserable condition. I had tried every remedy that had been recommended, and doctor after doctor had failed. One of the best physicians in the state told me I must die of scrofulous consumption, as internal abcesses were beginning to form. I at length was told of Dr. Johnston, of Detroit, and his famous Sarsaparilla. I tried a bottle, more as an experiment than anything else, as I had no faith in it, and greatly to my agreeable surprise, I began to grow better. You can be sure I kept on taking it. I took a great many bottles. But I steadily improved until I became entirely well. All the sores healed up, all the bad symptoms disappeared. I gained perfect health, and I have never been troubled with scrofula since. Of course an old lady of 83 years is not a young woman, but I have had remarkably good health since then, and I firmly believe that JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA is the greatest blood purifier and the best medicine in the wide world, both for scrofula and as a spring medicine." This remarkably interesting old lady did not lok to be more than sixty, and she repeated several times, "I believe my life was saved by JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA."

The undersigned have caused to be made an accurate survey and map of the said territory by a practical surveyor, showing the courses and distances of the boundaries thereof, and the amount of territory contained therein, which has been properly verified as required by Section 3 of Chapter 47 of the Code of West Virginia.

They further caused an accurate census to be taken on the 3d day of February, 1900, as required by Section 4 of the chapter aforesaid. Said survey, map, and census have been left for examination on the part of any person interested at the office of the Pocahontas Times a weekly newspaper in said town.

And on Saturday, the 10th day of March, 1900, between the hours of 6 a. m. and 6 p. m., the qualified voters residing within said territory will meet at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court of the said County, at the court-house thereof, to vote upon the question of such incorporation, by ballot, each voter voting a ballot with the words printed or written thereon:

For Incorporation.
OR Against Corporation.

Said election and proceedings to be be held according to the provisions of Chapter 47 of the Code of the State of West Virginia.

OL. 18, NO. 34 MARLINTON, WEST VIRGINIA, MARCH 15, 1900. $1.00 PER YEAR

West Virginia University,

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

The School of Music

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on orchestral instruments, including violin, cello, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Pre-Medical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

TO A WATERFOWL.

Whither, 'midst falling dew,
While glow the heavens with the last steps of day,
Far, through their rosy depths, dost thou pursue
Thy solitary way?

Vainly the fowler's eye
Might mark thy distant flight to do thee wrong,
As, darkly painted on the crimson sky
Thy figure floats along.

Seekest thou the the plashy brink
Of weedy lake, or marge of river wide,
Or where the rocking billows rise and sink
On the chafed ocean side?

There is a Power whose care
Teaches thy way along that pathless coast,—
The desert and illimitable air,—
Lone wandering, but not lost.

All day thy wings have fanned,
At that far height, the cold thin atmosphere,
Yet stoop not, weary, to the welcome land,
Though the dark night is near.

And soon thy toil shall end;
Soon shalt thou find a summer home, and rest,
And scream among thy fellows; reeds shall bend,
Soon, o'er thy sheltered nest.

Thou'rt gone, the abyss of heaven
Hath swallowed up thy form; yet, on my heart
Deeply has sunk the lesson thou hast given,
And shall not soon depart.

He who, from zone to zone,
Guides through the boundless sky thy certain flight,
In the long way that I must tread alone
Will lead my steps aright.

—WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

IN THE COURTS OF COWEN.

Withrow McClintic has a feud with the town of Cowen. Cowen is a little village in the Independent State of Webster which has recently incorporated itself and has a mayor and council and sergeant and other hoodoo things, and believes that order is Heaven's first law. To begin with it seems to have thrown down the glove to Withrow McClintic, of Pocahontas, who runs a big logging camp back in the woods from Cowen. It is rumored that Cowen is afraid that some medium sized woodsman will come down some day and shoulder the town and walk off with it. The fair city of Perth never dreaded the Highlanders of Scotland as much as Cowen dreads a visit from the lumber camps.

A short time ago the town was incorporated and it was feeling like a fighting cock, while it was about as dangerous as a boy with his first breeches on. Mr McClintic came to town and was attending to some duties before leaving town.

While he was busy about some matters he was tapped on the arm by a man who seemed to be making a vain effort to conceal his importance. This was a policeman who told him he was under arrest. He very naturally asked what he was charged with. The police looked shocked and said that he had "sworn an oath." Not stopping to ask what else a man could swear, the prisoner tried to remember whether he had lately used any words of unusual potency and failing, he denied the charge. The policeman insisted on hauling him before the Mayor, and his victim becoming annoyed did utter a few words of deep disgust and the offense was complete.

When the prisoner was in the presence of the Mayor there was an awkward pause, the town authorities apparently not knowing how to jump into the middle of the thing. The prisoner bearded the lions in their den and wound up his remarks by accusing one of the city officials of stealing a stack of hay from him. He then demanded the right to go out and get some witnesses to clear him of the charge. The officials, looking through a fourth reader and a World's Almanack which constituted the available authorities, decided the prisoner was within his rights and allowed him to go out to get his witnesses.

Mr McClintic got his horse and rode off to camp, his witnesses having left town while he was paying his town council. How long the city fathers waited in session for him to return can only be conjectured.

It soon became known to the escaped prisoner that the town resented this informal leave taking, so the fugitive arranged with a mutual friend a fair compromise on a money basis, and going into town with the obliging friend he handed the Mayor two dollars, who said in a grandiloquent way: "You are a free man!" and the contractor thought the incident was closed.

A week or so since the smallpox scare was on and Mr McClintic had to get his mail, especially the monthly check due him for his extensive lumber operations. The check was not there. The town was quarantined against Camden, but the Company's offices are this side the town and he got on his horse, at the suggestion of a hotel keeper, to ride down there.

The guard challenged him, but on the explanation that he was going to the Company's store allowed him to go on. He was returning later in the day, and when he got near Cowen, but still far outside the corporate limits, two men sprang out and caught his horse by the bride and unsnapped both reins. The rider used the reins with the heavy iron snaps to belabor the heads of the men, but they finally captured him and took him into Cowan and brough him before the city courts.

They had a very stormy trial during which the prisoner talked so plainly to a village doctor that the latter gentleman wanted to fight him. The upshot of it all was that the prisoner was fined and mulched in costs to the amount of $20. We asked the gentleman when he was here last week what the charge was, but they did not seem to have made that part of the performance very clear to him. He will appeal to the higher courts.

Now we Pocahontas people do not mind paying tribute to Webster every year at the springs, and we could even stand a little pleasantry on the part of the grand jury and sheriff, but when it comes to having Cowen make us walk the chalk mark, we very naturally draw the line.

WHAT DOES THE TELEPHONE MEAN?

Nearby there is a pole to which an insulated wire is attached and when the ear is placed on it an aeolian sound is heard. It is reported a bear listened to to it and thought it meant honey and undertook to get it out. A country boy heard it and wished to know if that was the way the news sounded while passing over the line.

So it seems all parties were of the impression that the murmuring of the wire meant something and so far they were correct, the error was simply as to what it does mean. To the writer the meaning is so significant as to its possibilities on society that it matters but little how one may reason about the possibilities, so he reasons sensibly about what eye has not yet seen nor ear heard until very recently.

Socially the telephone annihilates distance, and now families ten, twenty and thirty mile apart can converse as readily as neighbors used to do over the back yard fence, and be virtually as neighbors on adjoining lots. As to affairs of trade the tendency is to make farmers and stock raisers the masters of their respective situations, and be able to realize at their homes returns as favorable as if they were in the city markets and that too without the trouble and expense of moving their products farther than the nearest station, if indeed that far.

Department stores must soon be prepared to do as well by the farmer, the mechanic and the artisan as the city store, or the home merchants will be left. The new message of the telephone means the disenthralment of the producers and laborers from the middlemen and overturn their relative positions and sprout up direct dealing with the manufacturer and consumer.

An object lesson already occurred in one of the Western States that illustrates the point made. A broom-corn district was suddenly overrun by hustling agents offering to buy up all the material in sight for $80 a ton, which was the price the previous season. A person went to the telegraph office and interviewed his commission merchant and learned that the commodity was rated at $240 a ton in the city market. The telephone was used and he notified all in reach what was up, and they refused to sell, while others too remote from the telephone had sold out for $80, before the news could be circulated in their vicinity by the newspapers with their elaborate market reports two or three days old.

Now if precautions are used hustling dealers will not be able to take advantage of a sudden rise or sudden collapse in what the consumers have to buy or sell.

A Fable—Perhaps.

A Fat Salary once invited a number of friends to a swell dinner in order talk over plans for Social Progress. As the subject was a delicate one, only such guests were invited as would inspire awe by reason of their great names. The guest of honor was the Hon. S. I. Policy who comes from a very respectable family, which was further represented by Business Policy, Social Policy, Government Policy and others. Among the other guests present were Popular Sermon, Editorial Wisdom, Good Investment, Gilt Edge Security Watered Stoc, Political Pull, Handsome Income, Legal Advice and Eminent Respectability. The guest who were noticeable for their absence were Simple Justice, who has to work overtime as a blindfolded statue on the Court House, and could not get away for social functions; Equal Opportunity, who is not on good terms with the host, and Sound Principle who has said things that offended several of the guests, and has not a decent suit of clothes to wear anyhow. The result of the company's deliberations was to appoint a committee consisting of Blowyer Horne, Richly N. Dowd, and Miss Sweet Charity who were empowered to hire a secretary and stenographer to take charge of Social Progress and raise the necessary funds for its support. The committee, after consultation, selected as secretary a gentleman of great tact and discretion, Prof. Thusfar N. Nofarther, who has been duly empowered to attend to all business connected with Social Progress, and to relieve the benevolent patrons of all responsibility.—The Straight Edge

The Dogwood Must Go.

Dogwood is good for bobbins and spools for cotton mills. Therefore we suppose the dogwood will have to go. We printed a few days ago the announcement that carloads of it were being shipped from a nearby station on the Southern railway.

The dogwood timber is needed for the practical work of men, but we can not help wishing it had been otherwise. It is such a gallant and beautiful son of the forest. Its broad white blossoms are displayed by the time the poplar is putting out its first timid leaves. The dogwood is not afraid. We have seen it blooming while the snow fell against its spotless petals.

"In the month of May, when the dogwoods are blooming," is supposed, according to an old Southern song, to be the most propitious time for making love. It is true that all of us have learned by old habit to take the blooming of the dogwood as the real beginning of the year, that when its white blossom spangles the forests and we can see it from afar shining against the darkness of the evergreen or the bare limbs of the later trees we know that spring is here. Something will be gone from our lives when the dogwood is taken away. Because it is useful, because the wood is hard and the fibre of which it is built is close, it is doomed.—Atlanta (Ga.) Journal.

CALL FOR PRIMARY ELECTION.

Rules Governing Primary Commissioners of Election, Call for Convention.

At a meeting of the Democratic Executive Committee of Pocahontas County, West Virginia, held at the office of the undersigned chairman on the 6th day of March, 1900, pursuant to call, there were present: L. M. McClintic, and as proxy for Dr C. L. Austin and C. A. Lightner; C. E. Beard, G. W. Mann, G. R. Curry, John Waugh, Andrew Price, M. F. Herold, Levi Gay, proxy for J. C. Price; W. H. Grose, proxy for J. C. Loury.

It was ordered that a county convention be held at the court house of this county on to select delegates to the State convention, the Congressional convention, and State Senatorial convention, the convention to select delegates to the National convention, and to select a new Democratic Executive Committee for the two ensuing years.

Tuesday, April 3, 1900,

Every Democratic voter in the county is considered a delegate to said county convention, and the delegates of each district of the county shall be chosen from and by the voters present from said district.

It was further ordered that the county nominees be selected by a primary to be held on Saturday, May 12, 1900,

to nominate a Democratic candidate for Sheriff, House of Delegates, County Commissioner, Prosecuting Attorney, Assessor, and Surveyor, and the district offices of Justice of the Peace, Constable, and members of the Board of Education, the following rules governing such primary being adopted:

All Democrats and all others who wish to affiliate with the Democratic party in the nomination and election of county officers, are invited to vote in this primary, and their voting will be construed to be a promise and a pledge to support the nominees of this primary at the general election; but every one voting must be a legal voter of this county, entitled to cast a vote at the general election.

II.—The voting shall be by ballot, and the names of all candidates for offices to be voted for shall be on a single ballot, the candidates for each office to be grouped together under a heading specifying for what office they offer. The voter shall erase all the names on the ballot except those for whom he casts his vote, but no voter shall vote for more than one candidate for each office, and in such case the voter shall be considered as having erased all the names of the candidates for said office.

III.—The places of holding said election shall be at the voting places established and used in the general election of 1898 and at the same buildings.

IV.—The polls shall be kept open from Sunrise to sunset, but the commissioners are empowered to provide a second ballot box and open the ballot box previously used and commence to count the vote at 4 p. m., receiving votes that may be cast before sunset by depositing them in the ballot box provided for this purpose.

V.—The primary shall be conducted at each voting place by three commissioners hereinafter appointed. Said commissioners shall be sworn by some one legally authorized to administer an oath, to conduct the primary election in fairness and impartiality and in accordance with these instructions. Said commissioners are entitled to employ two clerks. The commissioners and clerks will each receive $1.00 from the funds in the hands of the ballot commissioners for [illegible] each. They shall keep [illegible] voting. T[illegible] count of th[illegible] and for w[illegible] give [illegible] tally sh[illegible] the said [illegible] committee of this county and lay the same before the committee which is hereby called to meet to canvass the returns of said primary election, on the 17th day of May at 1 o'clock, at which time they shall ascertain and declare the nominees selected by this primary. A quorum of said meeting shall consist of four or more members. The said sealed returns may be mailed to the chairman or secretary to be presented to the committee at this meeting.

VI.—The candidate receiving the largest number of votes in the county cast for the office for which he offers shall be declared nominated. This committee, in event of a contest, shall decide said contest, by a careful canvass and count of the ballots, and in case of a tie, then the executive committee in full session shall decide between the two candidates as to which shall be the nominee.

VII.—Levi Gay, J. W. Yeager and Andrew Price are appointed ballot commissioners to arrange for the printing and framing of said ballot. Every person desiring to be voted for in said primary shall forward to said ballot commission his announcement in writing, accompanied by the sum of $10 to help defray the expenses of printing the ballots and holding said election if he be a candidate for Sheriff, House of Delegates, County Commissioner, or Prosecuting Attorney, and $5 if he offers for Assessor or County Surveyor; and $2.50 if for any district office.

The said ballot commissioners shall cause to be printed a sufficient number of ballots to supply each candidate with all that he requires, and shall forward to each voting place in care of one of the commissioners of election a sufficient number to supply the voters of said precinct. Said candidates must forward their names to the ballot commissioners on or before the 28th day of April, 1900.

VIII.—Any voter of the county may vote for county officers outside of the precinct in which he resides, on his making oath in the presence of the commissioners, before some one legally qualified to administer an oath, that he is a bona fida voter of this county, and has not previously voted in this primary.

The following persons are hereby appointed to serve as commissioners to conduct the election at the precincts named:

Green Bank—John R. Warwick, J. F. Patterson, C. F. Lightner.

Dunmore—W. K. Jackson, Jacob Taylor, C. E. Pritchard.

Traveller's Repose—P. D. Yeager, Van Buren Arbogast, P. M. Yeager.

Editor Pocahontas Times:

I am visiting my uncle (W. H. McLaughlin) who lives in the famous old county of Lafayette, sixteen miles from Lexington in a beautiful farming district just south of the knolls and ridges that border on the banks of the Missouri River.

From your last issue it seems that you are undergoing the usual scare that follows smallpox. I am sorry that the disease has appeared in my old home. The people here have [illegible] a similar stage of excitement. They had several cases in Lexington a short time ago, and Kansas City is still finding two or three new cases each day. This prohibits our attending the Grand Band Concert given by Prof. Soust, March 4, in Convention Hall.

I would like to visit Convention Hall again before I return to West Virginia. I was there during the protracted meeting held by Dr D. L. Moody, Nov. 12, 1899, and with a crowd of about 10,000 people heard him deliver a most fitting sermon on, "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."—Gal. 6, 7.

We are almost entirely snow bound now. The snow fell Tuesday covering the ground to an average depth of about two feet. Most of the roads and lanes have drifted until they are impassable. The snow caused a wreck on the Missouri Pacific Railway last Tuesday night in which three persons were killed and six injured.

I have been attending school two miles from home and going with my teacher, Miss Amelia Moore. We have a delightful road, and our rides to and from school have been a great pleasure to me this winter, but we have not been able to get to school since the snow fell.

Some of our most esteemed friends, Mr Donald McNeel and sisters, left here February 22, for their future home in the State of Washington. Most of your readers will recognize them as old residents of Pocahontas county.

I have been the recipient of several copies of your paper, and wish to thank Rev W. T. Price for his thoughtfulness in so kindly remembering me.

Wishing my friends in Pocahontas the best of health and happiness, I remain yours truly,

TROUBLE BREWING.

A petition of 79 voters of the Huntersville district was filed with the county court last week asking that the Greenbrier River be made the boundary line between the Huntersville and Edray districts. This takes from Edray district the town of Marlinton, loveliest village of the plain, and nearly all the Greenbrier Railway. Hence these tears. Marlinton is indifferent, knowing that wherever her lot falls she will take the railway with her. The people of the district generally though are preparing to beseech the county court to leave matters in statu quo.

There is no special reason to make the change other than to give Huntersville a portion of the railroad, and make her more equal in size. The school taxes in Huntersville district have always been the highest of any district in the county.

One effect the change would have would be to make Edray district Republican, and Huntersville Democratic.

An objection to the change would be that Marlinton, to remain a voting precinct, would be cut off entirely from the country voters, who, without exception, live on the west side of the river. We look to see a very pretty fight over it.

The county court will give 30 days notice of the contemplated change, and we look to see the matter settled at next court.

This section once belonged to Huntersville and they say it was changed to enable the pioneer settlers of Marlin's Bottom to send their children across the river to school.

INCORPORATION ELECTION.

The election held at the court house last Saturday upon the incorporation of the town of Marlinton resulted in favor of incorporation by a vote of 41 to 0. This is a majority of voters residing in the boundary, as is required by law to vote in favor of the law.

Those staying away from the election have the effect of voting against the measure. There never seemed any doubt about the result but it was feared that all would not come out and vote, so some canvassing was done during the day to cause the voters to walk up to the court house.

The people of Marlinton are as remarkably inclined, with one or two glaring exceptions, as any people in the world. They can see a neighbor get [illegible] drunk and still be considerate of him, for they know that he will quit. [illegible] But the law [illegible] by not being [illegible] has [illegible] during the last six months. Here is an approximate calculation: 800 plain drunks at $2.50 per drunk, $2000; 20 general-like fights, at $50, $1000; 75 cases of turning up a bottle and drinking on the street in daylight, at $10, $750; 50 cases of using profane or obscene language in the presence of women or children, at $10, $500; other misdemeanors $1000; total $5,250.

The intention of the people here is to make one of the most orderly places in the country. Heretofore a man was allowed to get helplessly drunk if he did not commit an overt act, such as burning a house or shooting a prominent citizen. But by making the drunkeness itself an offense it will nip the trouble in the bud and keep a man from getting dunk, or if drunk cause him to act as though he were sober, which amounts to about the same thing.

The procedure to organize a municipal government briefly stated is as follows:

Upon proof that the law has been complied with, Judge McWhorter will direct the Clerk of the Circuit Court to issue a certificate of incorporation, and at the same time appoint three commissioners to hold the first election for officers. This election shall be held within sixty days of their appointment. It requires four weeks notice, so this election will probably be held about the 1st of May. The voters shall elect a mayor, recorder and five councilmen, who shall be owners of land in said boundary. They shall appoint a sergeant, who is ex officio treasurer, an assessor and a street commissioner. After the first election the elections are held every January.

The powers of mayor and council includes nearly everything of a minor nature pertaining to the conducting of the affairs of the village and maintaining order. The police force can arrest and detain anyone for offense committed, without a warrant, and a warrant issued by the mayor can be served any where in the county.

There seems to be a belief that if an offender gets out of the corporate limits he is safe. In Hillsboro, they say, the sergeant used to chase members of tough element over the corporation line and they would turn around and "ta'at" him. But they were in no place of sanctuary for they were liable to be arrested upon a warrant.

The policy of the first administration will probably be low taxation, heavy fines, and live stock to be kept up with the exception of bona fide milk cows which are to be accorded the liberty of the town.

Hillsboro has passed a curfew ordinance, making it unlawful for boys under 16 years of age to be seen on the streets after 7 p.m., unless they have good excuses. The bell is rung at seven when all boys under age must get under cover.

A BILLION AND A HALF.

Our assertion last week that there was a billion and a half of uncut timber in Pocahontas county of all kinds has been disputed. We have a letter from Mr Henry Gilmer, who intimates that he does not like to see "a good man fooled about his assets and resources." He puts the acreage of the county at 500,000 acres in round numbers on the basis that Pocahontas has 765 square miles. We gave the Assessor's return, 730,691 acres. You can choose between the assessor and the arithmetic. Mr Gilmer puts the timber at 300,000 acres of 1000 of merchantable timber per acre, 20 per cent of our estimate. That is not much of a come down from a professional statistician's figures.

Now we have not had anything to do with billions since we were at school. Billions and trillions do not figure in real life, still they might be useful in counting the trees of Pocahontas. There is a thing however which makes us believe that there is a billion and a half feet of timber in Pocahontas. About twenty million feet (measured) of pine is being floated [illegible] this year. This cutting does not diminish the timber of the county perceptibly. If there is seventy-five times as much timber left as goes down the Greenbrier [illegible] year there is a billion and a half. There is not that much pine but [illegible] everything—it may be here.

As Mr Gilmer is a native of Greenbrier he is not guilty of treason.

The victims of the Red Ash mine explosion is now estimated at 52. The mines in the neighborhood have suspended work and all are aiding in rescuing the bodies. The mine is leased and operated by a company of which J. Effinger, of Staunton, is president. The cause of the explosion has not been definitely determined. The Superintendent of the mine is John Lang, who is well known to a number of Pocahontas people. R. H. Catlett of Marlinton, has an interest in the land on which the mine was located.

This year's election means everything to the two parties in this state. If the Republicans secure the legislature they will redistrict the state and then goodby to hopes of Democratic supremacy. That the Democratic party will elect a majority of the members of the House of Delegates, there seems no doubt, and even if the State's electoral vote is secured by the Republicans, the chances of electing a Democratic United States Senator are more than good.

For calling another man a liar through the telephone a citizen of Boone county, Iowa had to pay a fine of $2.

Help... Nature

Babies and children need proper food, rarely ever medicine. If they do not thrive on their food something is wrong. They need a little help to get their digestive machinery working properly.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES of LIME & SODA will generally correct this difficulty.

If you will put from one-fourth to half a teaspoonful in baby's bottle three or four times a day you will soon see a marked improvement. For larger children, from half to a teaspoonful, according to age, dissolved in their milk, if you so desire, will very soon show its great nourishing power. If the mother's milk does not nourish the baby, she needs the emulsion. It will show an effect at once both upon mother and child.

Pianos that Stand

Three are a number of pianos that look well and sound fairly well—AT THE START. You can buy cheap Pianos that do that but a Piano should be made to last a life time. If it only stays good a few months it is dear at any price.

EMERSON PIANOS

are the kind that STAND. They are safe instruments to buy. They stand the wear and tear of every day usage, and with ordinary care three generations of children can practice on one. Besides their known goodness you have our guarantee—exchange if not satisfactory.

A guide who has done more or less plug fishing on Mooselookmeguntic lake says he can get a drink of nice, cold water when he is anchored on a lake, provided the water is deep enough. For deep fishing it is customary to sound for a clay bottom before casting anchor, and our informant claims that he can sound to secure a cool drink. He ties a weight to the bottom of his coffee bottle, and with the string tied also to the cork he drops it to the bottom; then by a quick jerk pulls the cork, the bottle fills with cold clear water, and he has only to pull it in.—Philips Phonograph.

WILD BILL.

Troubles in Colored Circles.

Mart McDowell, Marlinton's barber, got into a scrape last Thursday evening. It was due to corn whiskey, which you know has such deleterious effects on the system. He borrowed a Winchester rifle and went squirrel hunting and called at the McLaughlin Hotel and paid a board bill he was owing, on his way back. All was serene until he fell out with Mrs Ben Truss, a colored woman who was cooking at the hotel. They got into a scuffle in which Mart inflicted a scalp wound on the head of Mrs Truss with the barrel of his gun. This is not permissible in society, either white or colored, and, aside from the legal complications, Mart has regretted it since the moment it was done.

He went home and was presently visited by some friends of the woman he had insulted, who proceeded to wreck the tonsorial parlors, breaking five panes of glass and doing other damage. They broke the windows and shot into the building. Fortunately none of the large plate-glass mirrors were in range of the stones. He laid low and they presently took themselves off.

The next day Ben Truss went to Huntersville and swore out a warrant for assault with intent to kill. Mart gave bail to appear at court and waived an examination. No warrants have been issued for the parties who damaged the barber shop.

Johnny McGraw.

Johnny McGraw is in town. He is a firstclass lumberman and in no way connected with Hon John T. McGraw. He says he has two middle letters to his name, M and C. While at Elkins he saw "the other McGraw," and "by jokes" he went across the street and introduced himself. "By jokes," he told him he did every thing he could for Marlinton; that whenever he got a dollar ahead he came to Marlinton and spent it. He said he found the other McGraw to be a nice little Irishman "like himself."

He tells of meeting a lady who told him that he could have his own time to pay her for that land he bought. He told her that he was much obliged to her for since the railroad was cutting up his land so much he was not worth as much as he used to be, "by jokes."

He is a veteran of two wars, the civil and the Cuban war. During the latter war he served at Lexington, Ky. He expects a pension and back pay for his services in the Rebellion, which he will invest in Marlinton.

Big Mill Starts.

The St Lawrence mill started on Wednesday morning, with a full force of hands. Last week about two million feet of logs came in on the flush water enough to run the mill until the regular drive gets in. The first day's sawing, at slow feed to accustom the men to their work measured up about 74,000 feet.—West Virginia News.

FROST.

Plenty of mud and lots of travel.

The smallpox "scare" is over.

Items from Virginia.

Editor Pocahontas Times:

Dr John M. Hanger, one of the oldest and most prominent physicians and christian gentlemen of Staunton, was found dead in his stable Sunday, February 28. The immediate cause was apoplexy. He leaves a family of 9 children and many friends to mourn his death. He was a good man.

On Thursday night of last week Mr George W. Hippert died at his home in Waynesboro, Va., age 78 years. The cause of his death was paralysis and the infirmaties of old age. He was much respected and had lived a useful christian.

Miss Annie Folie died at her home near Mt. Crawford last Tuesday night. She was near sixteen and was much loved by all who knew her.

On last Friday evening William Nulty attempted to cross Middle River between New Hope and Mt Meridian, the streams being greatly swollen by the nights rain, and was drowned, and to-day (Sunday) at noon his body had not been found. His family are sadly bereaved and have the sympathy of the entire community.

There is a great deal of sickness and many deaths, and so many prominent people have passed over to enjoy a blessed and eternal rest.

The ladies are beginning to chat over their garden seeds and tomato and cabbage plants are flourishing in the sunny windows and we hail with delight the easter plant putting forth her buds, and enjoy the happy thought that Spring has come again.

But did n't the wild goose have a cool breeze in which to flap his wing Feb. 24!

We hail with delight each week the coming of the Staunton Spectator and Vindicator, edited by Colonel R. S. Turk, who is a wellknown and highly respected gentleman, both to the people of Virginia and West Virginia. We often find items of interest from West Virginia in the Spectator. The Times (for which we enclose the price of subscription) will bring us the news from our former home.

How many hearts were gladdened by sweet liberty since the new year set in?

GREEN BANK.

We are having a few days nice weather and farmers are plowing.

Our popular Deputy Sheets was in town Friday.

Jacob S. Wooddell is poorly at this time.

Clarence McClintic of Beverly was in town last Saturday.

Will some reader of the Times tell where the middle verse is in the Bible.

Captain Swecker was in town Saturday.

Mr Uriah Bird was in town last Saturday shaking hands and we suppose kissing the babies. He is a good man, and we suppose would make a good sheriff.

A farmer going to market with a lot of geese was asked if he had a hundred; he answered, if I had as many more, half as many, and two geese and a half, I would have a hundred. How many geese had the farmer?

It has been said that the bridges between Green Bank and Dunmore were not safe to drive a cow over, at least some of them. We wonder who is overseer.

There will be prayer meeting service at Liberty church every 1st and 3d Sunday at 10:30, and at Green Bank every 2d and 4th Sunday at 10:30 until we get a preacher.

Jacob S. Wooddell died last Sunday night aged about 70 years. He told the writer a short time ago that he was only waiting to cross over to his mansion in glory.

J. H. Madigan was in town Sunday.

Died at the home of her son near Oak Grove on Feb. 6th of old age, Mrs Fitzgerald, mother of R. Sheppler Fitzgerald, in the 80th year of her age, after having been a member of the church for years. She said she was ready, waiting the summons to enter her eternal rest.

ARBOVALE.

Misses Maud Yeager and Maggie Kerr were in town Thursday.

Karl Arbogast is on the sick list with quinzy, and is improving rapidly.

The measles in this community are pretty thick.

Dr Hunter Moomau is sick, and threatened with pneumonia.

Gordon Slaven has changed his abode from Deer Creek to Possum Hollow.

If you want good cheap goods go to S. J. Cowger and Brother at Arbovale.

Deputy Sheets was in town one day last week on business.

The Braffey School, taught by Forrest H. Houchin, closed last Thursday.

L. J. R. Dysard was in town Thursday evening last.

Miss Bertie Beard's school closed on last Thursday. She is a good teacher and liked by all.

Lawrence Dysard is going to Baltimore soon to lay in his summer goods.

Revener's mill is doing first class work turning out flour and bran.

W. W. Arbogast and family have gotton about over the measles.

The people have about recovered from the smallpox scare. A good many have little souvenirs in the shape of sore arms.

Benjamin Arbogast is the champion fence builder. He has built 500 panel of fence in the last two months.

George Hannah goes to the Reposs every week. We wonder why.

James Sutton is making sugar at James Kerr's.

The people on this end of the circuit have gotten Rev Pullin paid up. We hope he will be returned.

Died, March 5th, a little boy of William Galford's.

Sherman Sutton has sold his fine farm to Craig Ashford of Rosin Run.

The Sunday-school at this place is progressing nicely. Let every one turn out and make it a success.

Carl Arbogast and William Wooddell have gone to help O'Connell drive logs.

Why not run William B. Wooddell for President and Preston Ervine for vice-President this fall?

EDRAY.

The measles have about died away in this section.

Revs Atkinson and Moore and J. W. Tyler attended the quarterly meeting at Back St Sunday.

Mrs Lura Landes is very ill at this writing.

John S. Moore is teaching school at Huntersville. This is his second school this winter.

N. S. Duffield met with a painful accident while hauling sugarwater last week. He was standing on the wagon when the horses started, throwing him off hurting him severely. He has about recovered from the injuries received.

Harlow Waugh is quite a frequent visitor at the preachers.

Mrs Mary Ruckman is mending slowly.

Miss J. Ann Smith is visiting her sister Mrs Samuel Moore of Back Alleghany.

Last Sunday morning Miss Florence Moore ran a splinter under her finger nail. She had to have the doctor to cut it out, which was very painful indeed.

Miss Allie Smith is very low with fever. Her many friends hope she will soon recover.

Rev Atkinson will preach his farewell sermon next Sunday at Edray. He will start to conference the 19th of this month.

We see but little glowing done as yet.

Died, infant child of Mr and Mrs William Gay, near the Indian Draft.

Another little lamb is gone,
To dwell with him who gave;
Another little darling babe
Is sheltered in the grave.
God needed one more angel child
Amidst his shining band,
And so he bent with loving smile
And clasped our darlings hand.

REV. A. C. HAMIL.

Died, at the parsonage at Green Bank, W. Va., Feb. 24, 1900, Rev A. C. Hamill. He was born Nov 2, 1836, and was at the time of his death 63 years, 3 months and 22 days old. On November 14, 1861, he was married to Miss Ruth Wilson, who died February 21, 1879, leaving eight children, six of whom are alive: John S., Anna, Emma, Louisa, Nannie, of Wilson, W. Va. and Mrs Lucinda Harvey, of Ryano Glade, Md.

On June 26, 1889, he was married to Miss Hattie E. Oats, who survives him and with untiring devotion and anxiety that was pathetic, watched at his bedside and ministered to him in every possible way, scarcely allowing herself to take any rest or refreshments, and when the end came she was prostrated with grief, but said the Lord wonderfully sustained her when the trying hour came.

Rev Hamill was ordained a minister of the M. E. Church South in 1876, taking regular work in 1889, since which time he has ever been at his post of duty, subject to the call of his church and the Master, and he fell in the front ranks of the Army of the Lord. He preached 3 times on February 11, and after going home was taken with a chill, which resulted in that dread disease, pneumonia. He was so patient, was never heard to complain through all his sufferings, and shortly before his death he offered a prayer such as only he could offer, and thus he entered heaven.

The giving of facts is an easy matter, but when it comes to speaking of the character of the man it is quite different. One of his friends remarked since death that "he was a man in every sense of the word." To show the character of the man more fully, we quote from a letter written by him January 15, 1900, upon receipt of a letter containing the news of the death of his mother:

"I cannot express the sorrow this news brought to me, but amid it all I feel thankful that we do not sorrow as those who are without hope. Mother is not dead but sleepeth, or we might more truly say in the light of Divine revelation: She has passed from death unto life. As a ripe sheaf of corn cometh to the farmer, so after a long life in the Master's service, full of days, rich in Christian Experience, she has entered the rest that remaineth for the people of God. Sudden and unexpected as was the summons, doubtless it found her ready. Our kindred are passing away, who of us will be next none can tell. To me it is an admonition to be ready, to have my loins girded, and my lamp burning; that whether it may come to me as the unexpected midnight cry; or the gradual wasting of the lamp of life, I may finish my course with joy and the ministry of the Lord Jesus Christ."

His son was with him at the time of his death, and with much difficulty took his remains to Garrett county, Maryland, to the home of his boyhood, where he had expressed a wish to be buried. Memorial services were held at the M. E. Church at Blaine, W. Va., and addresses were made by Revs Bothen and Nevitt, of the M. E. Church. Eulogies on the life and character of the deceased were delivered by Robert C. Wilson and J. H. Rafter, after which the remains were interred in the family grave yard on the Hamill homestead, there to sleep among his kindred and friends.

Soldier of Christ, well done;
Praise be thy new employ,
And while eternal ages run,
Rest in thy Savior's Joy.

Three Years in the Penitentiary.

The trial of Thos. J. Williams on the charge of attempting to rape Mrs. Amanda Grim, of near Middlebrook, which has been in progress in the county court the better part of this week came to a close yesterday morning when the jury brought in a verdict of guilty and fixed his punishment at three years in the penitentiary. The prisoner never flinched when the verdict was rendered and appeared to be the most unconcerned man in the courtroom. A motion for new trial was made.—Staunton Spectator.

A MOST WONDERFUL CURE.

A Grand Old Lady Gives Her Experience.

Mrs. Thankful Orilla Hurd lives in the beautiful village of Brighton, Livingston Co., Mich. This venerable and highly respected lady was born in the year 1812, the year of the great war, in Hebron, Washington Co., New York. She came to Michigan in 1840, the year of "Tippecanoe and Tyler too." All her faculties are excellently preserved, and possessing a very retentive memory, her mind is full of interesting reminiscences of her early life, of the early days of the State of Michigan and the interesting and remarkable people she has met, and the stirring events of which she was a witness. But nothing in her varied and manifold recollections are more marvelous and worthy of attention than are her experiences in the use of JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA. Mrs. Hurd inherited a tendency and predisposition to scrofula, that terribly destructive blood taint which has cursed and is cursing the lives of thousands and marking thousands more as victims of the death angel. Transmitted from generation to generation, it is found in nearly every family in one form or another. It may make its appearance in dreadful running sores, in unsightly swellings in the neck or goitre, or in eruptions of varied forms. Attacking the mucous membrane, it may be known as catarrh in the head, or developing in the lungs it may be, and often is, the prime cause of consumption.

Speaking of her case, Mrs. Hurd says: "I was troubled for many years with a bad skin disease. My arms and limbs would break out in a mass of sores, discharging yellow matter. My neck began to swell and became very unsightly in appearance. My body was covered with scrofulous eruptions. My eyes were also greatly inflamed and weakened, and they pained me very much. My blood was in a very bad condition and my head ached severely at frequent intervals, and I had no appetite. I had sores also in my ears. I was in a miserable condition. I had tried every remedy that had been recommended, and doctor after doctor had failed. One of the best physicians in the state told me I must die of scrofulous consumption, as internal abscesses were beginning to form. I at length was told of Dr. Johnston, of Detroit, and his famous Sarsaparilla. I tried a bottle, more as an experiment than anything else, as I had no faith in it, and greatly to my agreeable surprise, I began to grow better. You can be sure I kept on taking it. I took a great many bottles. But I steadily improved until I became entirely well. All the sores healed up, all the bad symptoms disappeared. I gained perfect health, and I have never been troubled with scrofula since. Of course an old lady of 83 years is not a young woman, but I have had remarkably good health since then, and I firmly believe that JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA is the greatest blood purifier and the best medicine in the wide world, both for scrofula and as a spring medicine." This remarkably interesting old lady did not look to be more than sixty, and she repeated several times, "I believe my life was saved by JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA."

HE CAUGHT SENATOR PLATT.

A Reminiscense of the 1896 Campaign That Is Interesting.

If Senator Thomas C. Platt has one peculiarity more pronounced than another it is his discretion. While no political leader in New York is more affable to reporters than Mr. Platt, none gives out less information that he has not carefully prepared. In the campaign of 1896 Mr. Platt was a central figure. Anything from him was worth space. It was before the St. Louis convention, and he was supposed to carry in his pocket the 72 votes of the Empire State. It was about this time that a very young newspaper reporter seated himself among the veteran political reporters in the amen corner of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, where Mr. Platt makes his city home.

Every one was expecting an important declaration, but none came. Mr. Platt appeared, as was his custom. He smiled in his usual confidential and somewhat mysterious way and said there was nothing to give out. There was no going behind these returns, apparently, but this young reporter had wisdom beyond his years. Probably that is the reason that he is one of the most successful editors in the country to-day. He followed Mr. Platt out to the street. As they mingled with the evening throng he linked his arm in his.

"Mr. Platt," said he, "you're the biggest politician in New York and I'm the youngest reporter. I've got to get a story from you or lose my job. Now, I don't care a cent what you talk about, but as a friend I would advise you to talk politics."

Mr. Platt, who is tall, slender and gray-bearded, with a style of humor that can only be characterized as grim, disengaged his arm from that of his young friend and looked at him. He was astonished for the first time in years.

"Well, I haven't got anything to say," he replied, "but if you are so dead set on a political story I'll talk to you. I suppose it doesn't make any difference whether I discuss national or local politics. You seem to insist upon politics." And he did discuss politics to the extent of a column and a half.—Phil. Saturday Post.

ENCIRCLED BY A "LIVE" WIRE.

Cleverness With Which the Victim Walked Out of the Loop.

"I witnessed a really astonishing exhibition of coolness and presence of mind this afternoon," said a New Orleans insurance man a few days ago. "Some workmen were removing an overhead wire on upper Prytanian street, when one end of it broke loose and dropped down to the pavement. It doubled into a sort of loop as it fell, and, by a singular chance, it completely encircled a young man who was passing, without, however, touching him anywhere.

Some people were standing in a nearby doorway, and immediately yelled "Live wire!" Nine men out of ten would have lost their heads completely under such circumstances, but this young man was as calm as a summer's morning. The wire was wriggling all around him like an immense snake, and threatened every moment to strike him on the legs, but he made no effort to jump. On the contrary, he stood perfectly still, puffing away at a cigar he had been smoking as he came along. Presently, when he saw an opportunity, he sauntered quietly out of the open end of the loop, as unconcerned, to all appearances, as a man walking out of a drawing room.

"I was on the opposite side of the street at the time the thing occurred, and I must confess it made my hair bristle on my head. I ran across and could not help remarking to the young man that I admired his pluck. He laughed. 'Oh, that's all on the surface!' he said. 'I'm dripping with sweat and am really scared half to death.' I would like to round off this story by saying that the wire was carrying enough current to kill an elephant, but the truth is that it was not connected at the time and was as harmless as a piece of clothes line. Still, that was something nobody knew for half an hour, and I insist that it has no bearing on the real merits of the case."—N. O. Times-Democrat.

Stage Heroes Are Scarce.

"The making of actresses is easier than the making of actors," writes Franklin Fyles of "The Theatre and Its People" in the December Ladies' Home Journal. "The young women are by nature more apt and pliable. Their faces are most mobile, their manners more graceful, their habits of speech and bearing more variable. When the rounding of talent comes and the the graduates are turned out for the professional service there are half a dozen proficient actresses to every actor of equal ability. This is shown at the matinee trial performances, in which the female roles are generally well played, while the male ones are not. If promising actresses are more numerous, six to one, than actors, the same ratio operates in favor of young men in getting work. A good-looking fellow finds himself in no such glutted market as discourages his sister aspirant. If he is clever he will readily get an opening even though he is ugly. The masculine roles in plays predominate largely. Of comely intelligent and tolerable facile actresses the supply is far in excess of the demand. Heroes are scarce. Heroines are plenty."

The Spider's Appetite.

Commenting on an amount which a spider actually consumed during 24 hours Sir J. Lubbock says: At a similar rate of consumption a man weighing 160 pounds will require a whole fat [illegible] for breakfast, a steer and five sheep for dinner, and for supper two bullocks, eight sheep and four hogs, and just before retiring nearly four barrels of fresh fish.

WHITTIER AT HOME.

Gail Hamilton's Picture of the Poet by His Own Fireside.

The first installment of a series of letters that passed between Whittier and Gail Hamilton are published for the first time in the December Ladies' Home Journal. In one letter (written, however, to a friend) Gail Hamilton gives this interesting glimpse of Whittier at home:

"Imagine Whitter and me sitting together one whole day and two evenings all the time and then repeating it. * * * One of the brass knobs on the Franklin stove was loose and came off in my hand. I turned it over and remarked upon its brightness. He said, 'Now, doesn't thee know that thee is making work?' 'How?' I asked. 'Why destroying the brightness by handling it.' I rubbed it with my handkerchief and asked the housekeeper if I had made her any work. 'Oh' she said, 'you make me no work. Mr. Whittier always takes care of these brasses himself. That accounted, I said, for his anxiety—and dismissed mine—for I did not think a man generally had any more work to do than was good for him! * * * The little balls of the trimming of my dress kept coming off and were lying around on the floor. I picked one up just as I was coming away and said: 'There, I will give you that a keepsake.' He laughed and said he had two in his pocket already. * * * He told some company in the evening that I had talked so much it had made him hoarse."

Surely an Artistic Screen.

A impecunious maiden with artistic tendencies recently found herself in need of a screen to hide the baldness of the necessary washstand, the one disturbing element in an otherwise dainty room. A friend gave her a Japanese screen of dilapidated antiquity, adding that she could recover it and it would be as good as new.

After pricing the pretty things in tapestry and Oriental drapery our ingenious maiden decided she must manufacture something herself. She invested in a heavy cartridge paper of a dark gray tone which she carefully pasted on one side of the screen. Across the bottom she made an artistic scroll design in sepia, and then sat herself down to wait for visitors in the artistic and decorative line, of which she had many.

Her first caller was a youth whose drawings have enlivened the pages of many a daily journal. To him she explained her predicament, and he good-naturedly produced the ubiquitous bit of crayon and sketched in one of his popular cartoons. Other friends soon came to her assistance, and at the end of a week the screen was finished, completely covered with autographed sketches, all of considerable artistic merit and many of no little intrinsic value as well.—N. Y. Herald.

Lipton Must Wed.

London society is very busy finding Sir Thomas Lipton a wife. Ladies go at him constantly with the question: "Why are you not married?"

The reply of the owner of the Shamrock is characteristic. He says: "The truth is, I have led such a busy life and have been so much occupied that I have never had time to marry."

Society in the meantime attaches his name to that of Miss Stanley, a charming young lady, tall, brunette and slender, of whom he has seen a great deal and who was at his dinner party recently. She is the daughter of Lady Jeune by her first marriage.

THE STINGY MAN.

Once there was a stingy man with money by the peck,
And all he lacked to be a hog was bristles on his neck;
He occupied a mansion with no one but his wife,
And never gave a nickel to an orphan in his life.
He lived so high on luxuries he had rheumatic ghout,
And the devil surely got him when his light went out.

At breakfast, noon, and supper-time he never thought of grace,
And went to church on Sunday with a sanctimonious face;
He couldn't bear the sermon for thinking of his stocks,
And he never put a penny in the missionary box.
Without a bit of joking, I think beyond a doubt,
The devil must a-got him when his light went out.

County Sketches

A Scattering Vote.

Thomas J. Bloomfield was torn by conflicting opinions. He was what is known variously as a prominent citizen, a wealthy farmer, an influential man, a pillar in the church, and a big man generally in the neighborhood in which he lived. He had been intimately associated with the affairs of the county for forty or fifty years. He had held office for sufficient number of years to show that he could be elected if he wanted to, and when other people were elected he generally had a finger in the pie. But now he was on the horns of a dilemma.

It was all on account of this new fangled way of running for the sheriffalty. The Sheriff not only has the management of the police affairs of the county, but he is treasurer besides. And when you combine in one man the management of the social relations and finances of the county, you entrust to one man two very important departments. This is the reason that West Virginia high sheriffs are head and shoulders above the ordinary sheriffs of other States.

Over in Virginia one prominent citizen is sheriff and another prominent citizen is treasurer. The sheriff and the treasurer in West Virginia are both to be found under one hat. And this is what makes the West Virginia sheriff such a big man. Figuratively speaking, he would not sleep in the same bed with a Virginia sheriff.

Next to the high sheriff is to be found the deputy-sheriff, and it had become the custom in the county of Wauchope, where T. J. Bloomfield lived, for the candidate for sheriff to name, before the primary, the men to whom the "deputyships would be offered," so worded to save the sheriff from harm for making a contract against public policy. This "naming of deputies" was done under the erroneous idea that the average man has more friends than enemies and that the names of the men who were to be exalted to the position of deputy sheriff would add strength to the head of the ticket.

This did not cause any very serious trouble to those who voted lightly, or to those who would be voted by their friends on election day, but if a voter meant to scratch deeply and well the composite ticket was apt to be a stumbling block to him.

A Wertheimer headed one ticket. He belonged to a numerous clan, and he had associated with himself a Wyndham from Tumbletag District and a Roden from the Redbrush District.

A McCormick headed the ticket on the other side, and distracted public attention from himself to a certain extent by naming a Gowan and an Upton as his running mates.

They had all been pursuing Bloomfield for his vote and his influence, for each had whispered to confidential friends that Bloomfield of [illegible] Creek would be for him, when the time came, and each was doing what he could to make his words come true.

He was friendly with Wertheimer, for the Wertheimers had always supported him [illegible] when he had run for County Court but, on the other hand, one of Wyndham's uncles had stolen a steer from him some thirty years ago and he had never liked any of the tribe since. As for Roden, he was wholly impossible. He had come by on a sleek, well-fed sorrel and had traded it to Bloomfield for a mule colt. The colt was rough and untrimmed, but it was of standard value and sound, as are all mule colts. The sorrel proved to be without any wind to speak of, and would make uncomfortable noises in his throat when forced to go faster than a walk. Bloomfield had allowed that there would come a day when he would have a chance at Roden, and his somewhat unexpected entrance into politics had afforded one. But like the hunter when his favorite hound had a deer by the head, he could not shoot at Roden without injuring his friend Wertheimer.

On the other hand he had a feud with McCormick of long standing. He had promised McCormick publicly and fervently to vote against him and his posterity as long as they all should live, for some dirty work he had accused McCormick of doing him in one of his own campaigns. Now the representative citizen of Wauchope County hated systematically and well, and Bloomfield was not in a position to "tech McCormick with a forty-foot pole." In regard to deputy Gowan, he was in a measure indifferent to him. His position on the question of the relocation of the county seat had not been sound, but it had been a consistent one from his point of view, and he did not hold that against him. The third man, Upton was his nephew and one he liked almost as well as his own children.

It became a matter of conjecture with the politicians as to which candidate would have the benefit of his support, but he remained undecided up to the day of election. He would scratch his old gray head and wonder if he was not aging too fast. One day he would feel that he was going over to Wertheimer, but by the next morning he would be inclined to swallow McCormick for his nephew's sake. His neighbors were anxious to know how he stood, and if he had said he was for one or the other, a good many of them would have immediately remembered that they intended to vote that ticket too.

The evening before the date of the primary he spoke of it at the supper table and said that he wished he could tell how to vote and the eldest son suggested that pap had better toss up a dollar. The old man seemed to be pleased at the idea and he produced a dollar and tossed it up to the ceiling. A shepherd pup had been watching the proceedings and captured the dollar before it got fairly settled and rushed out in the night and lost it, and it has not been found to this day. The whole family turned and hunted for that dollar with a lantern and tallow candles, and the pup wondered why every body kicked at him when he came near. The old man went to bed in a very bad humor. He rode off to the election the next day mourning over his loss. He explained to his friends that he had spent a dollar trying to find out who to vote for, and had to give it up. The voters generally wondered how they made up their minds to vote the way they did, but all succeeded in voting for one or the other, except our friend. He cast his vote for one Phillip Robinson, a very good man for the place, but who had not run because he had failed to make satisfactory arrangements with the deputies he wanted.

This was the reason the vote stood Wertheimer 814, McCormick 814, Robinson 1, and caused the great [illegible] in county politics that year. To decide the tie they caused the nomination of a Sheriff to be made by a convention and Wertheimer threw his strength to Robinson, who came up on a No-deputy ticket. Robinson got the nomination and was duly elected, and appointed Wertheimer, Wyndham and Roden his deputies, and there is [illegible] in Wauchope county to this day over the matter.

SIR WILFRID LAWSON'S VIEWS.

To the Editor W. Cumberland Times:

Sir,—I have noticed in your issue of the 21st inst. some remarks on my attitude in relation to the war.

Will you allow me to make some comments thereon?

I should like to do so, because the writer deals with the matter very courteously and does not assume that every one who objects to the war must be either a knave or a fool, and also because your paper circulates largely among my constituents, through its medium I may possibly bring before some of them aspects of the war question with which they are not familiar.

The article in question demurs to my calling the war 'a crime and a cruelty.'

About the cruelty there can however really be no difference of opinion, for what can be more cruel than blowing men to pieces, piercing them through with deadly weapons, and leaving those who have not met their death promptly to languish in torture on the 'stricken field'? And yet all this is the very essence of war.

The dispute then is whether the war is a 'crime.'

Here again I suppose that we shall all agree that unnecessary war is a great crime.

The question is, was this war unnecessary, or 'inevitable' as its supporters say.

In the article several reasons are given to prove that the war was necessary.

The case of Edgar is alluded to. The policeman who killed Edgar was tried for murder and acquitted (some say improperly, but almost all those who have carefully studied the facts say properly), and it seems that such an incident is a strange justification for going to war with the country where it occurred.

Next the petition of the inhabitants of Johannesburg against the "iniquities and corruption" of the Boer oligarchy is alluded to.

I happened to be reading to-day a statement by a leading man of the South African League who took the greatest credit to the League for having got up that petition—That by the way. But, assuming that every word in the petition was absolute truth, surely we are not to go to war with every corrupt government which we can find.

In that case we shall never be at peace.

The Franchise is then alluded to, but the real point in dispute was 'Naturalization.'

Here again I can not see that we were justified in going to war with the Transvaal Government because it refused to give such facilities as we thought right for English citizens throwing off their nationality and becoming politically Boers.

The famous despatch of September 8th is mentioned in the article, but it was the despatch of August 28th which was what I may call the heart-breaking one.

The Boers understood it in the sense in which every one else understood it, but which Mr Chamberlain has since explained was a misunderstanding. That misunderstanding was never removed—hence the war.

The very thought of thousands of brave men having died on account of a misunderstanding is to me a horror and a nightmare.

Then the ultimatum and invasion are mentioned, which no one will expect me for one moment to justify.

But I hold strongly with Captain Bethell, a Yorkshire Conservative member, that while "the Boers technically commenced the war, we did so morally."

We had so acted as literally to drive the Boers to believe that we were determined to fight with them, and they, after the manner of those who believe in fighting, as unfortunately do, determined to strike the first blow.

But the writer says that "the testimony of the Christian Churches in South Africa, and particularly of the Nonconformists, is practically unanimous in favor of the war."

But, after all, Christian Churches have not always been the soundest guides on political matters. Byron wrote:

'Christians have burned each other quite persuaded
That all the apostles would have done as they did.'

And a careful study of the facts is better than relying on the opinions of other people, however excellent they may be.

And surely it behooves each one of us to be sure of his ground before sanctioning war with all its sins and sufferings.

When in a criminal court the life of a single man is in debate, the utmost care is taken to make sure of the facts, and and one failing in that duty is visited with the heaviest reprobation of all honest men.

What then is to be said of those who 'lightly and unadvisedly' send thousands of brave men to their doom? I remember hearing John Bright quote in the House of Commons, the lines:

'For when the life of man is in debate,
No time can be too long, no pains too great.'

Yet at this moment we see two so called Christians nations engaged in the most awful mutual slaughter on account of no trouble having been taken to explain a misunderstood despatch!

I conceive that the great bulk of my fellow countrymen at this moment firmly believe that justice is on our side.

Yet no one is quite clear sighted in his own case, and is well to try and see matters from the point of view of our opponents.

Sir, I have tried in these few words to show that the continued slaughter going on in South Africa, without any visible effort to cause its cessation, is a crime.

If I be right in this view, all those who do not try to stop the war are, so far, criminally responsible for it.

Those who are called public men can hardly do anything better than try to explain as fully as possible the nature, objects, and circumstances of the war.

Thousands and thousands on this matter are in absolute ignorance.

Words in favor of peace are boycotted by the bulk of the Press; public meetings are broken up by organized violence, while from our pulpits proceed the most extraordinarily bellicose doctrines, to which no reply is possible.

Under these circumstances one welcomes the refuge which is afforded in the columns of an independent newspaper, and if you grant me that favor, perhaps I may lead some of your readers to consider whether or not this war can or can not be justly called a crime.

Yours,
WILFRID LAWSON.

Froze the Dog and the Quail.

Marlinton, W. Va., March 4.—Down here among the highest mountains of the Alleghanies, the weather man has but little to do with the temperature in winter or summer. When he gives a reckoning of ten degrees below for the State of West Virginia, it is liable to be from twenty to thirty below; and in summer when he gives the other parts of the State 100 in the shade, it often stays as low as 60 among the valleys between the high ranges, and there are places where the sun does not get entirely rid of the snow before June.

During the first week in February in this section fully a foot of hard, fine snow fell. On Saturday the 3d, 'Squire William Green decided that it would be a good day to take out a young bird dog he had raised and give him a few lessons, even though it was so cold that quail were not likely to be out. The squire and the dog went up the valley between Rocky Knob and Peterson's Mountain, perhaps two miles from home. After half an hour the squire found that he was too cold for comfort, even in his [illegible] coat, and the dog showed signs of distress. The squire determined to turn back, but when he whistled for the dog the faithful brute did not respond. He called him, but to no avail. For fifteen minutes he tried to find the dog and finally gave it up, deciding that he had started home on his own account. At home the dog was not in his kennel, nor had any one seen him. The dog was mourned as lost until today, when the squire decided to make another search for him, it being one of the few comfortable days since he was lost. The squire went back to the point in the valley where he had last seen the brute, and after an hour's search looked behind a clump of pine scrubs, where a remarkable sight met his eyes. There stood the dog on all four feet, legs braced, nose pointing squarely in front of him, frozen as stiff as [illegible]. Perhaps ten feet away, and directly in the direction his nose was pointing, was a bunch of quail, also frozen as hard as adamant.

The dog had scented the game on that fatal Saturday, and, while his master called and whistled, stood riveted by his instinct, waiting to be released from his work. In that position he had frozen to death, while the game he was covering died the same death. There had been no weather since to thaw his body, and he and the quail had remained as they were over four weeks ago.

The squire gathered up his frozen dog and the icy quail and brought them to town, where they are now on exhibition in the show window of Doddridge's general store, arranged about as they were in the woods. They present a novel appearance, being as lifelike as though they had not been in cold storage for a month.—Richmond Dispatch.

OBITUARY.

Mrs G. A. Boblett, daughter of Mr and Mrs Allen Grimes, was born Feb. 9th, 1856, departed this life January 19th, 1900. She was married to Mr Harvey Boblett June 25th, 1872.

Was converted in early childhood at the Old Bethel Church, on Swago, and joined that church on probation. She lived a consistent christian life, but was never permanently connected with any church until she joined the Presbyterian church in 1895. She had been afflicted for several months, but was only confined to her bed a week. She bore her sufferings with christian fortitude. On Wednesday night she called her family to her bedside and embracing them in her arms, said she felt she was sinking and wanted to talk to them, probably for the last time. She wanted those who had not given their hearts to God to promise to meet her in Heaven.

On Thursday she talked to all and had a good word for all who came in. When she had bid them all goodbye, she wanted some one to join her in singing. Her husband joined her and sang, "There are angels hovering round"; she also joined with her daughter in singing, "On Jordan's stormy banks I stand."

She requested all to care for her little ones she was leaving behind, and for her husband to gather the little flock and take them to Sunday-school. She told them not to wish for her back, but to be faithful and come to her.

On Friday evening she remarked to a friend, "The crossing is very near and I am ready for the call."

She leaves a husband and ten children, seven daughters and three sons; two daughters married, Mrs E. S. McClure and Mrs Seymour Gladwell. She was a true and faithful wife, kind and patient mother.

'Farewell dear mother, sweet thy rest,
Weary with years and worn with pain,
Farewell, till in some happy place
We shall behold thy face again.
'Tis ours to miss thee all our years
And tender memories of thee keep,
Thine in the Lord to rest, for so,
'He giveth His beloved sleep.' "

I would like to know the opinion of some of the readers on this question: What is the most important historical event of the Nineteenth Century?

In your last issue you wished to know the opinion of the people on the primary vote. My thoughts, Mr Editor, are conveyed in these words: "In every county office we want a MAN:"

Let us drop our politics,
When it comes to county tricks,
And vote for him.
If he is a Democrat—
What care you or I for that?—
But vote for him.
Or be he a noble man,
And is a Republican,
Then vote for him.
I care not for his name,
Or the home from whence he came,
I'll vote for him.
If his life is dark as night,
And he does his business right;
I'll vote for him.
Sober then must be his throat
When he seeks to find my vote—
But vote for him.
But I care not; at the polls
Time will tell the guilty souls;
Just vote for him.
Look around just all you can,
But be sure you find a man:
And vote for him.

The Republican State Committee has an eye on Greenbrier, one of the strongholds of Democracy. It is said the plan is to list every doubtful voter and assign each one to a Republican, who is to stick to him until he lands his vote.

A Fiendish Attack.

An attack was lately made on C. F. Collier of Cherokee, Iowa, that nearly proved fatal. It came through his kidneys. His back got so lame he could not stoop without great pain, nor sit in a chair except propped by cushions. A WONDERFUL YARN.

We failed to perform the perfunctory duty of denying the truth of the article on the front page, concerning the frozen dog and bevy of quail. The article has been printed in a number of daily papers lately and the Forest and Stream. The postmaster here has received numerous inquiries from apparently rational men as to the truth of the article. They may repeat for their comfort:

"The world of fools hath such a store,
That he who would not see an ass,
Must stay at home and bolt his door,
And break his looking glass."

This tale is very nearly as old as the hills, and every few years it is localized and made to do duty again. There is no Squire Green, no Doddridge's store, no Petersons mountain, no Bald Knob, no setter dog, and precious few quail. All together it reminds us of a verse from James Whitcomb Riley:

"They sang, this ain't no board fence,
This ain't nine little goblins with green glass eyes;
This is a vision the mind invents
After a supper of cold mince pies."

We print on the first page Sir Wilfred Lawson's views of the war as written by him for a local newspaper published near his home. He is one of the most famous opponents of the war in the House of Commons. He is like many of the most humane leaders of our country who see nothing in our boast of enlightenment and civilization if we have to submit the arbitrament of arms in the manner of people of a ruder age. England and the United States are each engaged in wars of conquest such as many optimists had fondly believed belonged to a bygone age.

Rev Chas Sheldon took a daily at Topeka, Kansas, and turned it into a religious daily and ran it six days last week without getting [illegible]. Publishers' Notes.

Do you know that about one hundred real estate men all over the United States have subscribed for the Times lately. You might place a land advertisement advantageously in the Times.

Armour & Company of Chicago have issued a 13 sheet $1000 prize Calender. It is a beautiful work of art, and is given free to purchasers of their meat extracts and soups. Write them if your grocer does not keep their goods.

Remember our combination subscription offer, this paper one year and the Farm Journal nearly five years for $1.00. The offer applies to all subscribers who pay up arrearages (at $1.00 per year) and one year in advance.

The most of our subscribers have received a sample copy of the Farm Journal, and can judge of its merits for themselves. It is the best farmers paper published, and is chock full of sense besides. It also puts you in touch with reliable firms dealing in every sort of farm implement and equipment. The publishers guarantee the reliability of every advertiser.

We have sent in the names of 210 Farm Journal subscribers to date. These are receiving the paper regularly, duly credited on the label to 1904. The number ought to be increased to 1000 before the offer is withdrawn.

Danger Signals!

Do you take cold with every change in the weather? Does your throat feel raw? And do sharp pains dart through your chest?

Don't you know these are danger signals which point to pneumonia, bronchitis, or consumption itself?

If you are ailing and have lost flesh lately, they are certainly danger signals. The question for you to decide is, "Have I the vitality to throw off these diseases?"

Don't wait to try SCOTT'S EMULSION "as a last resort." There is no remedy equal to it for fortifying the system. Prevention is easy.

Scott's Emulsion

prevents consumption and hosts of other diseases which attack the weak and those with poor blood.

SCOTT'S EMULSION is the one standard remedy for inflamed throats and lungs, for colds, bronchitis and consumption. It is a food medicine of remarkable power. A food, because it nourishes the body; and a medicine, because it corrects diseased conditions.

FROST.

We had a fifteen inch snow last Friday morning, which was very discouraging to those who are short of feed.

Mrs Mary Curry lost a good cow last week.

William Gibson has a bad case of mumps. A great many persons have been exposed to them.

G. M Jordan has been very ill, but is improving under the skillful treatment of Dr Moore.

Benj Sharp has lately purchased the L. W. Herold property at this place, and moved in Monday.

The writer of the Frost items in last weeks paper, erred in stating that hay is scarce in this part.

Sherman Curry's Tomorrow [illegible] failed to get the mail through to Anthony's Creek Saturday and J. A. Moore took it the rest of the way. The same thing occurred Monday and the mail did not get out at all. We would like to have our mail every day if we could get it.

Local Events.

There is nothing new in political circles.

There are a number of victims of grip in this county.

Mrs W. A. Bratton is expected home this week.

Uriah Bird has returned from a trip to the Upper End.

Mrs S. L. Brown and John Pullin are very ill at this time.

Miss Sallie McLaughlin has entered as a pupil of the Marlinton Academy.

A. L. Connell, of Clover Lick, was called to Harrisonburg by the illness by his wife.

The indications point strongly to F. P. Marshall being the next sheriff of Randolph County.

Any one who has an old coin for sale, particularly old copper cents, will do well to call on Dr Joseph C. Brown at Marlinton, W. Va.

The case of Hiram B. Sibley v. John Stacey, Carrie Thomas and others is about ready for a hearing in the Greenbrier Circuit Court.

T. D. Moore of Eiray started this week to attend the spring term of Marshall College State Normal School at Huntington.

Died, at the residence of J. C. McCoy, March 19, Mrs Julia A. Brown, aged 83. The deceased was the mother of Mrs Anthony Kincaid, of this place.

Items from Augusta.

Mrs John Feuchtenberger died last Sunday at the home of her sister Mrs Edward Emmett, in Staunton. She was 25 years old.

Mrs Theodore Hoppe died at her home on Sears Hill, last Saturday, aged 69.

Mrs W. W. Manley died at her home near Penrose, after an illness of three years.

Mrs Wm. Groves died at her home at Hermitage Monday morning of pneumonia. She leaves a family of small children to mourn her sad death.

Dr R. F. Davis, of Hermitage, is very low with pneumonia. He is one of our most prominent physicians.

Dr J. C. Bowman, of Crimora, is extremely ill with pneumonia.

Jos. Beard, of New Hope, is low with pneumonia.

Charles Harris and Mrs Jos. Wilson, of Anne, are as low as can be with pneumonia.

Mrs Mollie Patterson, of New Hope, is very ill. Also infant son of Prof E. A. Aldhyer.

The body of William Nutty, who was drowned Friday, March 2, in Middle River, was found late Sunday evening near the place he attempted to cross.

The German measles are raging in some parts of this county, and at one time created a great deal of excitement, it being supposed to be smallpox.

Drs W. H. Stout and L. P. Harris, the most prominent physicians of New Hope, owing to almost constant practice night and day, say they are almost broken down.

Mrs T. J. Williams, of Frost, whose death occurred February 23, had many friends in this county who deeply regret the sad heart aches she had to endure during her severe illness. Her sadly bereaved children have their deepest sympathy. She was a sister of Paschal B. Williams, of Ft. Defiance, who is highly respected.

On Friday night the house of Homer Wyens, of Hermitage, was completely destroyed by fire.

Grass is beginning to grow and the farmers are wearing smiling faces. The ladies are chatting over the prospect of early gardens.

Pocahontas Times Prize Contest.

To follow the lead of a number of wideawake newspapers, to increase our circulation, and to afford an interesting and instructing occasion for the exercise of a little mental ingenuity, the proprietors of this paper have inaugurated a in which old and young, rich and poor, high and low may engage for profit or amusement. The guesses will be in connection with the all-absorbing topic of the opening of the Greenbrier Railway.

GRAND PRIZE GUESSING CONTEST,

FIRST PRIZE.

The person guessing nearest to the day on which the road will be formally opened for passenger traffic will receive one Royal Gem Duplex Tin Biscuit Cutter—a useful and valuable implement for any kitchen.

SECOND PRIZE.

The person who forwards to this office the first correct solution how they turn the train around to get back, a can of Starcher's Aluminated Baking Powder.

THIRD PRIZE.

The person who guesses nearest to the number of bars in the cowcatcher of the locomotive, a cake of Superior Laundry Soap.

All guesses must be accompanied with the sum of one dollar, in return for which they will receive free for one year the Pocahontas Times, a family newspaper, and the editor's receipt, "How to live without working."

Weather Notes.

After a week of good weather, winter set in in earnest last week. The days had been warm and butterflies had appeared. Some trout had been caught, the farmers were speeding the plow, the roads were getting in shape, and the mail was coming in on time. We were congratulating ourselves that there would not be much more winter.

Wednesday night snow set in and kept coming down until it measured 16 inches on the level. Butterflies Wednesday, snow flies Thursday. Business was stagnated. It was the deepest snow of the winter by far.

Notice to Confederate Veterans

A meeting of Moffett Poage Camp No. [illegible] United Confederate Veterans is called to meet at the office of the Clerk of the County Court of Pocahontas, promptly at 2 p. m. on Wednesday, April 4, 1900, to elect officers for the ensuing year, to appoint delegates to the Reunion to be held at Louisville, Ky., on May 30 to June 3, and to transact such other business as may be necessary. A full attendance of the camp is urged.

IN QUARANTINE.

Seventy five Men were Penned up in Camp No 3.

The quarantine has been raised on Camp No. 3, six miles from Marlinton, for some time. The one case of smallpox was managed so skillfully that no new case developed and the danger is over. The patient however still occupies the old Harper house and has no communication with anyone. The other men in camp send him his meals. They set the food down on a bench and call to him, and he comes and gets it when they have gone away. He is shunned as though he were a leper. As soon as he can get permission to come home he will leave. His clothes have been burned and the buildings have been disinfected. The contractor will burn the camp building and the county should burn the old log house, recompensing the owner for it.

Seventy-five men remained in camp during the scourge. An immune, a darky from Alexandria, waited on the sick man, and Dr Brown, the camp physician, visited him once a day up to February 26, when he had so far recovered that his visits became unnecessary. The doctor would change his clothes before each visit, and afterwards wash his hands, face and head with a solution of carbolic acid.

It is a disputed question whether the disease is contagious until the vesicles are formed, and it is for this reason, or because the men who were exposed to him had been vaccinated, that the disease did not spread from the exposure before the disease was recognized. After the vesicles had begun to form and the disease was recognized every precaution which skill and care could suggest was taken, and to this the camp owes its immunity.

It was a very trying time. If a man got a headache, he was in a perfect agony of suspense thinking that the disease had taken hold of him. One of the foremen burned up the only deck of cards in camp, and there was more Bible reading done than at any camp on the river it is safe to say.

In regard to the delay of several days in reporting the case by Dr Brown, Dr J. E. Robins, member of the State Board of Health, for the Third Congressional District, writes: "Your delay in making a diagnosis has been the history of all the cases I have seen in the adjoining counties. No one seeing a case where there is no small-pox and no special reason to apprehend an outbreak of the same can diagnose a case before the popular stage.

A man named Fields who has nursed sixty cases of small-pox, came on to nurse the patient, or be ready to help if new cases developed. He pronounced it small-pox, and there can be no doubt that it was small-pox in spite of a good deal of skepticism evinced by persons not in so good a position to judge.

We have secured from Dr Brown a report of the case and the symptoms each day from his note book:

Patient: Arthur Rowzie, white, had never been vaccinated, 23 years old, from Rockbridge co., Virginia. Arrived at camp February 4, from a visit to his home and in Lynchburg. On February 8th, 9 days from the day he was in Lynchburg, he got up with a headache, and was given a simple preparation for a headache.

2nd day of disease: Did not see patient.

3rd: High fever, violent headache, temperature 104½, pulse, 120 to the minute, no appetite, sick at the stomach; had a chill the day before; pain in the back of neck, and said he felt like he had been beaten.

4th. Did not see him, but he began to break out that day.

5th. Was broken out with red bumps which felt like shot under under the skin. Very numerous on forehead. Feeling natural; was not suffering and wanted to get up and wrestle with those who thought he had smallpox.

6th. Decided it was small-pox. Vaccinated Captain Munday, the Superintendent, and he vaccinated the doctor. Bumps had gotten larger and were beginning to get soft. Noticed the smell peculiar to the disease.

7th. Vesicles beginning to form, containing 4 to 6 drops of clear liquid, which would run out if stuck with a pin.

8th. Vesicles completely filled, larger than a pea; face completely covered with them.

9th. Pustules were forming; liquid changed to very purulent pus.

10th. Pustules as large as the end of a man's thumb. Face swollen by them almost beyond recognition. Pustules on body about two days later in developing. Pustules on the body were separate but on face the bases were crowding each other.

11th. Secondary fever set in. Temperature 102. Pustules beginning to scab. [illegible]

12th. Swelling going down; much better; clothes would stiffen from pus oozing out in two days. Scabs beginning to form on the face.

13th. Improving slowly.

14th. Doing well. Swelling going down; scales dropping off of forehead.

15th. Called at 1 a. m. Severe pain in back of neck and shoulders. Patient, who had been in good spirits all the time, thought he was going to die that night. Supposed he had taken cold, and was able to relieve him.

He continued to get better for the next three days and the doctor visited him until the 18th day of the disease, the 26th day of February, and he has not seen him since. Patient got up on the 17th day but was very weak.

The negro nurse stayed with him for a while and then thoroughly disinfected himself and left, and since that time Mr Rowzie has not had the companionship of men. The darkey nurse says that he burned the straw-colored scales or scabs which came off the patient by the double handful. Vaccination is all that saved the county, and we cannot be too deeply thankful that the danger is past.

BROWN'S CREEK.

Plenty of snow, mud, rain, and sunshine; regular March weather.

The sick are all convalescent. C. P. Corbett has had the western chills.

George H. McLaughlin of Marlinton passed up our creek to his farm near Dunmore.

S. J. Boggs and Floyd Moore were up on the creek Sunday.

The Mt. Tabor school, taught by George E. Moore, will close next Tuesday.

We are sorry to hear of the serious illness of Amos J. Dilley. Hope he may soon recover.

H. P. McGlaughlin is clearing a corn field.

Ed Fenwick is in the opossum business.

All on the move: James Logan of Randolph moves to Frank Hamilton's place; John McAlpin to the Harper place; Asbury Hiner to Mrs W. H. Cleek's place; George Hamilton will move soon to his place on Knapp's Creek; J. J. Noonan expects to move this spring to Covington, Va.

We noticed in your last issue from the Arbovale correspondent the names of Billy B. Wooddell and Preston Ervine for President and vice-President. I would say Billy Wooters for President and Andrew Hughes for vice President.

Yours truly, JOHN DOOLEY.

MILL POINT.

Joseph Kellison died at the home of his nephew Luther Kellison, March 14, aged 84 years. Three days later his brother John Kellison died at the home of his son Luther, aged 82 years. Thus passed away two aged and respected citizens of this community, who had spent the greater part of their lives together.

W. T. Slavin is on the sick list.

Born to Rev and Mrs J. H. Lough a son, on the 13th inst.

Martin Boblett and Vinton Slaven returned to day from a trip across Yew mountain. They say the snow struck them around the pistol pocket.

Saukey Boblett is improving slowly.

Marshall Isabel was the guest of John L. Cleek, Sunday.

Rev Hogsett and F. C. Moore will deliver lectures after the close of the business meeting of the Marvin Chapel Epworth League, the last Saturday night in March.

X. Y. Z.

GLADE HILL.

Jack Frost is looking in at our window again, with a foot and a half of snow.

Sugar making is in full blast.

The chilling winds are blowing, and Marvin Gum's sawmill is not going.

Uriah Bird was in this part last week, shaking hands.

Haze Grimes has a bad case of measles.

We were sorry to hear of the death of Harl Arbogast, near Green Bank. The bereaved family have the sympathy of this community.

A. G. Dilley spent last week in Highland.

Ellis Buzzard says he don't care if the birds never sing—It's a girl!

Jesse Noel has the mumps.

Feed is getting scarce.

C. W. Dilley goes to the football at Frost every Saturday evening and the barn-yard fowls are often singing their Sunday morning song when he returns. Keep an eye on the gobbler. BUZZ.

LEWISBURG.

Lewisburg is never overflooded with news, but we will give the Times a few items this week.

Dr Sam Austin has returned from White Sulphur.

Rev Telford has gone to New York in the interest of his school.

Mr and Mrs Rucker of Huntersville as the guests of Dr Rucker and family.

Mrs W. A. Bratton of Marlinton is in this city visiting Miss Janie Stuart Price.

T. S. McNeel of Pocahontas was in town last week.

Miss Pearl Beard of Academy has returned to the Seminary.

Fred Wallace has been sick for a few days.

Sam Price and Sam Austin, who are attending the University of Virginia, came home on a visit.

Rev Dobbs preached at the Old Stone Church Sunday.

Rev Dr White and wife have returned from Virginia.

A. M. McLaughlin of Clifton was in town on business.

Miss Elizabeth Price of "Beau-Desert" was in town Thursday and Friday.

Bright Farrier was run over by the stage coach but sustained no serious injuries.

J. W. Arbuckle was in Hinton on business last week.

Jake Beard was in town last week.

Success to the Times.

CARPETBAGER.

DUNMORE.

Some sugar trees have been bored.

Grandpap George McLaughlin, G. W. Wagner and other railroad men were in town one night last week.

E. O. Moore is thinking of entering the race for Assessor. He will make a strong race. He has conditionally sold his farm to Adam Bennett, of Pendleton County.

Uriah Bird has been up several days, seeing how the land lies.

There is a move on foot for a road from Stoney Bottom to the Big Spring; also around the Snake Den; from Dunmore to Meadow Dale; a bridge across the river at the mouth of Settlington's Creek. This will open up a through straight road from Monterey to Linnwood; a distance of 31 miles.

A little child, one year old, of William Galford, died last Monday.

Jacob Woddell died at his home at Green Bank Sunday night, aged 70 years. Mr Wooddell was an honest, upright christian gentleman and leaves many friends to mourn his loss.

Mrs Lizzie Taylor is quite ill at this writing. Mrs Dave Smith is still quite ill.

Rev Anderson, of the Huntersville District, will preach at Green Bank Sunday morning; Dunmore at night.

Mr Shanklin has returned from a trip. He was badly burned by the explosion of a lamp at Covington, Virginia.

Three of the Italians, who were blown up on the railroad, have been sent to the Hospital for treatment.

Old Jack Nottingham, a faithful mule, died some time ago, aged 35 years. He had not been shod since the war.

Miss Alice McLaughlin has gone to the Big Fill to teach school.

Ed Spitzer's little child, aged two weeks, died at Frost Sunday night.

We have some mumps and measles to spare.

William Gladwell has improved his building and has opened a thundering big grocery store.

We understand that J. L. Dysard and Dr C. L. Austin started to Baltimore Wednesday to lay in a spring stock of goods.

Sheriff Sheets and Auctioneer Swecker will sell the personal effects of William Hill, deceased, and rent the farm, March 24.

There is talk of connecting the telephone line with Highland co., six miles from Frost soon.

The bone mill will be started in a few days.

Admiral Dan's drive was at Leather Bark Monday night.

George Beverage is still suffering from a fall from a wagon.

We are sorry to learn the misfortune which happened our friend George B. Sutton. He had his house burned with all its contents.

Coon and Buster Bowers killed a catamount last week nearly as big as a horse.

We agree with the Green Bank correspondent in regard to the small-pox, but we think the parties who started the report should be made to pay the expenses.

Auctioneer Swecker will sell a lot of fine clothing at the Hill sale.

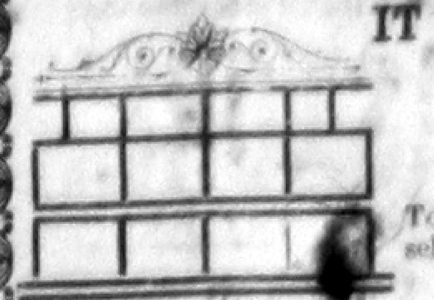
Uncle Washington Moore is sick at this writing. MR POSS.

NOTICE

There will be a meeting of the Republican Executive Committee of Pocahontas County at my office on the 3d day of April, 1900, at 2 o'clock (first day of Court). Please let every member be present, as important business is to be transacted.

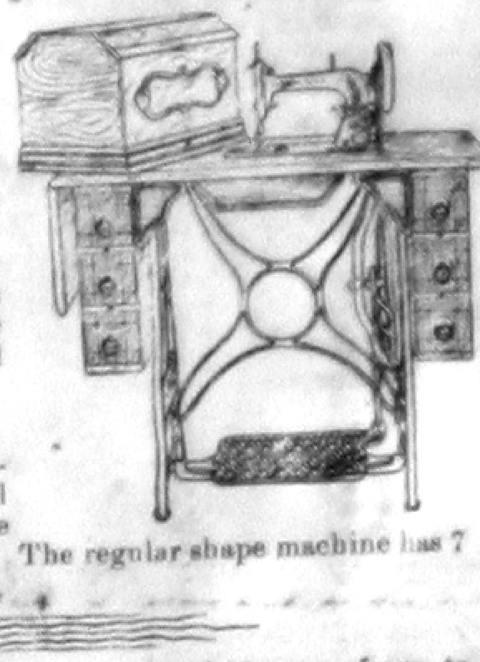
S. C. McNEIL, Chairman.

IT IS LIKE BUILDING A HOUSE WITH BLOCKS



To try to establish a business by selling poor goods at low prices.

I am not going to build my business that way, but will sell you good goods at half prices, as I want to start my spring business with new goods at right prices.



I will offer you for the next ten days, or until I come back from market, High Arm Singer Sewing Machines—they are perfect, light running—just as good as the machine your neighbor has paid 65 dollars; you can have your choice—the drop head or regulr kind

$22.90,

Every machine is warranted for ten years. All attachments free. The regular price is $30.00. The regular shape machine has 7 drawers nicely finished.

WANTED—50 Boys, between 3 and 18 years of age, to fill good positions in my wear-proof boys suits. Wil make you following low prices:

Boys Suits, gray Cassimer, blue flannel, blach cheviot, &c, worth from $1.50 to $3.00, you can have them from 68c to one dollar and 68c.

All my last season's Men's fancy negligee shirts that were 50c, 75c, and one dollar each, will close out from 30c to 47c each.

These good are just as good styles as I will have later, but I wish to start the spring season with a clean stock.

One dollar will have the purchasing power of two dollars to buy my wrappers. The prices run from 75c to $1.25. You can have them from 37 1-2c to 73c.

Thanking you for past favors, I hope you will continue your patronage in the future. Yours for bargains now and a nice clean spring stock soon,

PAUL GOLDEN.

S. J. BOGGS'

All Wool Pants Goods, Flannels, Heavy Shirts, Heavy Shoes, and All Winter Goods will be sold almost at your own price, as I do not intend to carry any winter goods over.

To pass me by is to waste money;
To buy from me is to save money.

I will also sell a nice, new, and up to date line of Millinery for cost and carringe.

Give me a trial and be convinced.
MONEY SAVED IS MONEY MADE.

I not only save you money on all the goods you purchase, bu tmake your dollars worth more. I thank my many customers for their patronage during the past year, and expect to get a larger patronage during the new year by giving them more goods for less money than they can get elsewhere.

RESPECTFULLY,

S. J. BOGGS,
HUNTERSVILLE, W. VA.

Stop the Clock:
IF YOU HAVE NO MORE USE FOR TIME.

Stop Buying of Us:
IF YOU ARE TIRED OF SAVING MONEY.

We thank our many customers for their patronage during the past year, and we are glad to say that we have made a success of selling for cash. We are going to enlarge our building, increase our stock and diminish prices. Everybody claims to sell cheap, but we convince by actual demonstration. Its Values that create new business, and its Values like ours that bring to our store trade that we would not otherwise get. Unless you are proof against bargains our prices must command your attention. Spot cash gets more bargains and better bargains in a week than credit gets in a year. We buy for cash. There can be no misunderstanding when prices are named in black and white:

Granulated Sugar, 6 1-2c
Good Green Coffee, 10c lb
Arbuckle Coffee, - 12 1-2
Best Quality Coal Oil 160 Test, per gal. 20c

SCROFULA AND ITS AWFUL HORRORS

—CURED BY—

Johnston's Sarsaparilla

QUART BOTTLES.

A MOST WONDERFUL CURE.

A Grand Old Lady Gives Her Experience.

Mrs. Thankful Orilla Hurd lives in the beautiful village of Brighton, Livingston Co., Mich. This venerable and highly respected lady was born in the year 1812, the year of the great war, in Hebron, Washington Co., New York. She came to Michigan in 1840, the year of "Tippecanoe and Tyler too." All her faculties are excellently preserved, and possessing a very retentive memory, her mind is full of interesting reminiscences of her early life, of the early days of the State of Michigan and the interesting and remarkable people she has met, and the stirring events of which she was a witness. But nothing in her varied and manifold recollections are more marvelous and worthy of attention than are her experiences in the use of JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA. Mrs. Hurd inherited a tendency and predisposition to scrofula, that terribly destructive blood taint which has cursed and is cursing the lives of thousands and marking thousands more as victims of the death angel. Transmitted from generation to generation, it is found in neary every family in one form or another. It may make its appearance in dreadful running sores, in unsightly swellings in the neck or goitre, or in eruptions of varied forms. Attacking the mucous membrane, it may be known as catarrh in the head, or developing in the lungs it may be, and often is, the prime cause of consumption.

Speaking of her case, Mrs. Hurd says: "I was troubled for many years with a bad skin disease. My arms and limbs would break out in a mass of sores, discharging yellow matter. My neck began to swell and became very unsightly in appearance. My body was covered with scrofulous eruptions.. My eyes were also greatly inflamed and weakened, and they pained me very much. My blood was in a very bad condition and my head ached severely at frequent intervals, and I had no appetite. I had sores also in my ears. I was in a miserable condition. I had tried every remedy that had been recommended, and doctor after doctor had failed. One of the best physicians in the state told me I must die of scrofulous consumption, as internal abcesses were beginning to form. I at length was told of Dr. Johnston, of Detroit, and his famous Sarsaparilla. I tried a bottle, more as an experiment than anything else, as I had no faith in it, and greatly to my agreeable surprise, I began to grow better. You can be sure I kept on taking it. I took a great many bottles. But I steadily improved until I became entirely well. All the sores healed up, all the bad symptoms disappeared. I gained perfect health, and I have never been troubled with scrofula since. Of course an old lady of 83 years is not a young woman, but I have had remarkably good health since then, and I firmly believe that JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA is the greatest blood purifier and the best medicine in the wide world, both for scrofula and as a spring medicine." This remarkably interesting old lady did not lok to be more than sixty, and she repeated several times, "I believe my life was saved by JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA."

LAND WITHOUT STRIKES.

A Law Which Has Been Remarkably Successful in New Zealand.

New Zealond has anticipated the rest of the world by enacting a law which deals so rationally with all trade disputes that it has actully prevented strikes for the last five years. It is impossible to present more than an outline of the plan.

Both ssociations of employers and the trade unions may be incorporated. Those which are chartered or registered, choose the members of their own board and also the members of the court to which disputes are referred. Whether organized or not, the associations and trade unions are subject to the law.

The colony of New Zealand is divided into industrial districts, for each of which there is a conciliation board elected for three years. It consists of two persons chosen by registered employers; two by registered trade unions, and one disinterested person elected by the four, who is chairman. When a dispute arises between employers and the men in their employ, either party may refer the matter in dispute to the district board, which has full authority to investigate the facts and to command a settlement.

In case either party will not accept the decision the matter is referred to the State court. This consists of one person representing the trade unions, one the employers, and a chairman, a Judge of the supreme court, appointed by the Governor. The court has a three years' term and is wisely independent of politics.

A decision by this court is final and must be accepted under a penalty for violation not exceeding £500, or $2,500. Moreover, when a dispute has been referred to the conciliation board, and until it is finally settled, a strike or lockout is illegal.

That there have been about fifty cases referred to district boards or to the court in the past five years, that during that time there has neither strike nor lockout in New Zealand and that in every case the decision has been accepted by both parties, seems to prove either that the law is excellent, or that it is excellently administered. Perhaps it demonstrates both propositions. The necessity for the passage of a similar law in this country is to apparent to require argument. Aside from the interests of the employers and the employed, the greater interests of the general public demand it.—Youth's Companion.

IN SOUTH AFRICA.

How the British Care for the Wounded Soldiers.

Modern artillery's effectiveness has put a very different complexion upon the uses and necessities of field hospitals. A field hospital used to be very near the fighting line—it was often actually under fire. But nowadays, when artillery fire is commonly effective at four thousand yards, no field hospital could be allowed sufficiently near the fighting line to permit of the wounded being taken directly to it, and the organization of aid has been altogether altered.

In South Africa it has been arranged that all the effective aid in the field will be that of the Army Medical Corps. Voluntary aid will confine itself to the lines of communication between the field and the base hospital and between the base and general hospitals. The working organization is as follows:—

Accompanying the fighting line are the bearer companies of the Army Medical Corps—three or four men to each regular regimental company. When a man drops out wounded, the Army Medical Corps men pick him up and take him to the nearest dressing station, where he is attended to as quickly as possible. From the dressing station the wounded are taken to collecting stations, these being placed at points where more shelter is obtainable.

In the case of collecting stations, it is possible, of course, to select more effective shelter than at the dressing stations, where shelter is more a matter of improvisation. From the collecting stations the wounded are carried as quickly as possible to the field hospital. Here, generally speaking, they remain a day, and are then removed to the base hospital.

There will be twelve field hospitals in South Africa, four stationary or base hospitals and four general hospitals, each with its complete staff. The distribution of these hospitals will be determined by the officers commanding in South Africa, and must depend on the manner in which the military situation develops.

Tyrolese Courting.

When a young Tyrolese goes a-courting in earnest he carries with him a bottle of wine, of which he pours out a portion and presents it to the object of his affection.

If she accepts it the whole affair is settled. Very often the girl has not made up her mind, and then she will take refuge in excuses, so as not to drink the wine, and yet not refuse it point blank, for that is considered a gross insult, proving that she has been merely trifling with the affections of her lover. She will, for instance, maintain that the wine "looks sour," or that wine "disagrees with her." In fact she makes use of any subterfuge that presents itself at the moment.

Shy lovers loth to make sure of their case beforehand, find it a very happy inspiration. Not a word need be spoken, and the girl is spared the painful "No" of civilization.

A Lost River.

One of the most remarkable freaks of nature occurs in Mexico. It is a river that is not a river. The bed of it lies in a valley between the Rio Grande and Pecos Rivers. It is not a dead or dried-up stream. It is simply lost. Numerous big tributaries flow into it from the neighboring mountains. Immediately, however, they reach the bed of the main stream they disappear from sight. Thus for some [illegible]

A few evenings ago a gentleman stepped from a train at one of the London stations, when a young lady skipped up to him, threw her arms rapturously about his neck and kissed him many times, saying "Oh, papa, I'm so glad you have come!" The old gentleman threw both arms around her, and held her firmly to his breast.

Soon she looked up into his face and horror stood in her eye.

'Oh, my! you are not my papa!' she said' trying to free herself from his embrace.

"Yes I am," insisted the old man, holding her tightly; "you are my long-lost daughter, and I am going to keep you in my arms till I get a policeman."

When the officer came he found the old gentleman's diamond pin in the girl's hand.—Selected.

Baby,s Wireless Telephone Plan.

The Rev. Case Davis, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Warren, Ill., has a daughter nearly 3 years of age who is very particular about saying her prayers before retiring each night. One evening last week her mother was detained from hearing her prayers at the usual hour, and the little Louise waited patiently some time. Finally patience ceased to be a virtue with her, and she climbed upon a chair and, taking down the receiver of the telephone, shouted into it:

"Hello, central: dive me heaven. I want to say my prayers."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

West Virginia University,
MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as noticeable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

The School of Music

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Premedical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

A PORTER'S JOKE.

When Pullman cars were first invented did this joke happen and it has been kept alive by antiquarians. The ancient narrators tell it and people can not choose but hear. The young grow up and enjoy it and pass it on to the next generation.

There was a passenger who was hard to wake, and on going to bed called the porter and said: "Here I want to get off at Earlyville at 4 o'clock. I will be sleepy but I want you to put me off at all hazards. Don't mind my fighting or resisting, I must be put off. Here are two dollars."

The passenger woke next morning fifty miles beyond Earlyville. He looked out to find the porter who had failed to wake him, and saw him bleeding and sorely wounded. One ear was half torn off, an eye blacked, and his clothes were torn. The passenger shouted to him: "Here, porter, why did'nt you put me off at Earlyville?"

The porter saw him and gasped: "Fore de Lawd, boss, who did I put off at Earlyville anyhow?"

TIMBER.

It is hard to make people believe what wonderful forests we have in Pocahontas. We have known many a man to pass thro the county, following a road along the top of the river ridges or thro a farming section, and go away thinking he has some idea of the county. He will say that the timber of Pocahontas is highly overrated. It takes time to know this county, and it is so large that probably no man can say he knows it thoroughly.

There are many thousand acres of oak in this county in the burnt woods sections that do not amount to much, but on the other hand there are vast sections where the forests are so dense and dank that a forest fire has never been known.

Last year Colonel Dan O'Connel cutting on the headwaters of the Greenbrier River for the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company, took four and one half million feet of spruce off of one hundred acres, an average of 45,000 feet to the acre, and three and one half millions off of 200 acres, an average of 22,500 feet to the acre.

On the head of Williams River some Pennsylvanian lumber dealers measured average acres of timber on the stump and found an average yield of 65,000 feet to the acre. They measured a tree which was not unusual for its size, which was 19 inches at the butt and at the height of 84 feet was still over seven inches in diameter. The timber of Pocahontas represents many millions of dollars.

A DOCTOR'S JOKE.

We asked a doctor the other day what he thought of the old adage, "At forty every man's a physician or a fool." He said he did not know about that but he did know of some who were both.

A DASTARD'S DEED.

The delicate gold refiner's scales showed the weight to be two pounds. A frog hair would have brought the bar down. The purchaser turned over a certified check for $2,000 and the little package to two Marlinton [illegible], making the price paid for the golden treasure [illegible] that of a king's ransom. He concealed the precious package under his cloak and slipped out in the night. But the beady eyes of Bridger Creek Bill, the desperado, had been fixed upon the transfer through the plate glass window and when the unsuspecting citizen turned his steps homeward, the outlaw followed with stealthy tread. At the darkest turning the fatal knife was lifted and it descended and was driven home and Percival Timberly, a Marlinton millionaire was no more. Clutching the two-pound roll of butter, for which he had shed blood, the villain fled to the fastnesses of the mountains.

Mrs Percival Timberly had been a Biltsinger and with that haughty house it was considered a disgrace not to have butter on the table. To a Biltsinger disgrace was worse than death. For his high resolve to have butter on the table at all hazards. Percival Timberly sacrificed his life and property in the spring of 1900.

Mrs Percival being left butterless did not long survive her husband.

A POUND OF COAL.

To the student of natural science one of the most interesting and suggestive topics is what is termed "correlation of growth." This interest is owing to the fact that it implies a mental purpose, not to be regarded as a physical cause. In the sense of external adaptations, correlation of growth may be regarded as one of the most common or, in a sense, universal of all the Laws of Nature. As an illustration of correlation of growth, let us consider the origin, nature, and capacities of a pound of coal. This article is a substance correlated in a truly wonderful manner with the needs, the powers, and the industrial energies of humanity; for it contains within itself, in a condensed and portable form, a store of physical force that seems well-nigh incredible for one to believe as to amount.

The particles of one pound weight of coal are held together by a Force that being liberated and applied in the form of heat, that force is capable of lifting one million times its own weight to the height of one foot. No other substance yet known to man is comparable to coal as a furnisher of Force. This seems to be its special use or function, a fusnisher of force in relation to man's mechanical and inventive powers. Now the strange thing about all this that this pound of coal should have been rendered capable of exerting its power or discharging its special use by processes of preparation that began millions of years before there was a man to need it and use it. Now such an external correlation of growth is nevertheless a result arising by way of a natural consequence out of certain physical courses working according to natural laws, owing to internal correlations of growth between solar heat and vegetable structure, and again between solar heat and vegetable structure, and the causes that occasion such interchanges between sea and land as to put the sea where the land was and the land where the sea was.

As a working theory, correlation of growth comes nearer than most others to illustrate the method in which vital forces are made to evolve a new Form of Life, but it does not explain the reason how vital forces originate a new form of life in the creative sense. And even if the How could be explained, that explanation could give no reliable information at all of the fittings of that new Form of Life into the outward requirements of its own life. Pure the scientist goes, but he can go no farther by sight. If he has eyes to see and a pure truth-loving mind to reason with, he devoutly recognizes the correlation of growth, and all other external correlations as in their very nature belong to Mind are the workings of Mind, and are intelligible only in the light of Mind.

As long as a pound of coal remains on the earth, and one human being capable of correct reasoning about its origin and history as an illustration of "correlation of growth," it will be evidence of the result of a Mental Purpose, and the physical means by which this pound of coal have been worked to order, subject to direction, and had that order and direction determined by foresight, forethought and contrivance. The pound of coal and pure human reason are in a beautiful sense witnesses to the fact that the Creator's works of Providence are His most holy, wise, and powerful in preserving and governing all his creatures and all their actions.

A Hot Time in Old Vermont.

The New York Sun thinks there is a "hot time" ahead in the old town of Northfield, Vt., and it explains the situation there as follows:

Though the Green Mountain State is now blessed with a prohibition law, any town that wishes it may have, under the law, a public liquor agency, the liquor, of course to the drunk for medicinal purpose and there were invalids enough in Northfield to secure such an agency for their town by casting a majority of votes at town meeting. The sound and well Northfieldians, however having no use for liquor themselves, frown upon its use by others and they held another town meeting at which they passed an ordinance that the names of the persons buying liquor at the agency, and likewise the name of those unsuccessfully trying to buy it, should be printed each month in the local newspaper.

Thus, at little cost, Northfield provides itself with a continuous program of social and domestic entertainment that will drive dullness from the town for many a long day and which promises to enliven the intellectual life of the whole State. Already the Vermont journals are discussing the many ethical sides of the matter, and with some warmth. 'Resolved, It is no disgrace to be on the town's liquor list,' is a question that will engage the best debating talent in many a Vermont lyceum. Sociologists are hastening to the spot to write books on The Northfield Plan We look with hopeful anticipation also to the improvement in the science of apologetics promised by the publication of the Northfield lists."

The Elkins Extension.

The engineers in charge of the branch of the West Virginia Central and Pittsburg railway, to be built from Elkins to the Greenbrier division of the Chesapeake and Ohio, now under construction, announce that bids will be received until April 15 next for the granding and mason work of this line. As already stated in the Manufacturers Record, it is to be forty-three miles in length. The contracts for two tunnels have already been let. John W, moore at Elkins is engineer.

A Substantial Fact.

W. R. Clark, Pickaway, Virginia says: I have for several years been using Ramons Pills in my family with most satisfactory result, and do not hesitate to recommend them to my customers as superior to any of the various kinds kept in stock. Not only are your pills relible but Ramons Relief and Nerve and Bone Oil are the most satisfactory remedies I ever handled, and if they were more generally used, they would often make the Doctors bill only 25c. instead of $20. These goods need no dusting in my stock because they are constantly coming in and a going out are Trade Winners and Trade Keepers. These good qualities are not a theory but a substantial fact.

All Newspaper Men Will Tell You So.

The editor may read the proofs of a newspaper four times and pass repeatedly over the same error without seeing it, says an exchange. All newspaper men will tell you so. But just as soon as the paper is printed in its complete shape, there stands that error out in front of you so big that you cannot see anything else. It is a strange fact. And this is the reason that it is so easy to edit a paper after it is printed.

ADIRONDACK TOWN'S RISE.

TUPPER LAKE VILLAGE A COW PASTURE TEN YEARS AGO.

Uncle John Hurd Built a Railroad from Nowhere to the Place, then Put Up a Lumber Mill and the People Came.

From the New York Sun.

Tupper Lake Village, N. Y., is the town that Uncle John Hurd built over night in McLaughlin's cow-pasture, and that shortly grew to such proportions as to admit only one rival in the Adirondacks, in point of population, and none in point of trade. It has risen since Phoniz-like from the ruins of a disastrous fire that swept away the entire business part last summer, and proved by its marvelous recuperative power, tho a town of mushroom growth in the beginning; it has a substantial reason for existence.

The pioneer and patriarch of Tupper Lake is old William McLaughlin, who was born at Calais, Me., in 1812, and came into the Adirondacks with a lumber company forty seven years ago. Previous to McLaughlin a trapper named Cole had built a little shanty on the river bank and cleared an acre of ground for a garden patch, and supported his family on venison and fish as the mainstay, and a few vegetables by way of a relish. McLaughlin cleared forty or fifty acres of land and started the typical backwoods lumber farm, which is designed primarily for raising hay for the horses employed in dsawing logs.

The first year McLaughlin was at Tupper Lake hay for the requirements of the lumber companies was hauled from Lake Champlain through the centre of the Adirondacks, over frozen lakes and roughly constructed roads across the portages. The distance as the trail ran was about sixty miles, and a considerable part of the hay was eaten by the horses on the way. At times when storms delayed progress some of the teams ate up all the hay and turned back without ever seeing Tupper Lake. It was customary for three or four teams to travel in company, and all were fed from the load of one of the sleds.

At that time nothing but pine was cut, and spruce was regarded as of little consequence. The logs were driven down the Raquette River to Hewitville, three miles from Pottsdam, and there sawed into lumber. The river was then in much better condition for floating the logs than it is to-day, and only thirty-five days were required for the first drive, whereas logs which go by this route at present are from seventy-five to one hundred days on the way. Continuous driving has scooped out the banks and widened the stream, and with less water it is a vastly more difficult and tedious matter to get the logs through than it was in the early days of lumbering.

In 1871 the State built the reservour down below Raquette Pond that backed up the water of the river for miles and killed hundreds of thousands of growing trees, many of which still stretch their gaunt limbs heavenward. Ten years ago there were only half a dozen families living in the neighborhood of Tupper Lake. McLaughlin, Sim and Mart Moody, Sim Ratty, George McBride, and Ernest Johnson were the permanent residents, living at intervals of a mile or more from each other.

Four years before John Hurd had gone to Moira at the northwest corner of the woods and started a railroad south into the wilderness without any very apparent objective point unless it was his purpose to bisect the Adirondacks and connect with the existing Delaware and Hudson branch at North Creek at the diametrically opposite corner. First the road was built to St. Regis Falls, a distance of twelve miles from Moira. Then after a time it was extended about six miles farther to Santa Clara, then fourteen miles to Brandon, and finally by the longest jump of all to the shores of the Raquette. It was a spasmodic piece of railroad progression, characteristic of the eccentricity of the man who planned it. If John Hurd intended to piece out his road at the ends and make it a connecting link in a trunk line between New York and Ottowa he was doomed to disappointment, for the road came to a standstill so far as work on its southern terminus is concerned. Hurd named his terminus Tupper Lake, altho it is as a matter of fact two miles from Tupper Lake and on the shores of an entirely distinct sheet of water known as Raquette pond. It was his way to anticipate events.

The road ran through unbroken forests and ended nowhere. As there was no traffic that could be counted upon to pay operating expenses Hurd set to work to create this necessary adjunct. Other men construct railroads to supply a real or prospective demand, but John Hurd was not built on the ordinary plan, and reversed the process. Having finished his road he decided that he must have lumber as the most available freight to carry over it, and to supply this he built what was then said to be the largest sawmill in the world. In this enterprise his usual plan of putting the cart before the horse was adhered to. First he built the mill and afterward he began looking around for the logs on which to set it working. Here he encountered a snag of more than ordinary proportions. On all sides were hundreds of square miles of timber land, but not one acre was his, and the companies owning the land all had use for their logs and could not profitably be persuaded to part with them. There were three mills in Pottsdam and three just above that got a considerable part of their logs at Tupper Lake, by way of the Raquette River, and no one of them was anxious to share with Uncle John. Nevertheless he finished the mill with a capacity of turning out a million feet in four days, and then it was that the hunter, returning from his winter trapping, rubbed his eyes to see a town of 2000 inhabitants and the busy stir of industry where before had been the stump-dotted field and the cows belled so that they could the more easily be found in the thickets when milking time came.

It was a heterogeneous assemblage of bustling Yankees and voluable French Canadians that awoke mornings in the little, unpainted frme dwellings and fell to their task of converting forest trees into daily bread. Money circulated freely, and there was good fortune for every one with the single exception of the man who made the town. He had met and conquered successive barriers, but at last there was one that he could not surmount, and if report is to be credited it was the lack of logs to convert into lumber to carry over his railroad. The big mill ran a year. Hurd tried making wire reels and baskets and similar articles, but if there was a profit on these the volume of business was not large enough and the crisis could not be averted. To-day John Hurd walks the streets of Tupper Lake and sees prosperity on every side, but the control of his various enterprises has passed into other hands and he does not share the prosperity.

Tupper Lake village at present has a population of 3,000. Two years ago a Raines law census was taken to regulate the license fee and the returns then gave something in excess of 2500 inhabitants. It has three churches, but the Roman Catholic far out numbers the others in point of attendance, ministering to the spiritual needs of 800 families.

The fire which swept the business part of the town started in the pioneer store of King & Page, and was probably of incendiary origin. It was at its height at midnight and carried everything before it fanned by a strong southwesterly wind. There was then no city water and no mains in the streets of the village and the fire department had trouble with their hose and could do nothing to combat the flames. Persons on the streets of Utica, a hundred miles away, saw the reflection of the fire in the sky but the residents of the little town of Axton, fifteen miles north of Tupper, were unaware of the holocaust till the following morning, when they awoke to find the ground strewn with cinders from the burned town.

Many men lost their all in the fire, but the embers had hardly cooled when the work of rebuilding the town commenced. A water system was installed, supplied with high pressure from a mountain lake three miles away, while larger and more substantial buildings were erected, and despite the crushing loss only a few months ago, the town at the present time appears to the casual visitor at least to be better and more prosperous than ever before.

It was said recently that the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo in 1901 would require 10,000,000 feet of lumber for building purposes, and that the placing of this great order would affect the lumber market of the contry. Tupper Lake could in an emergency fill the contract in thirty days without unduly affecting the local market or or straining the facilities of production. Hurd's great mill, which is now owned by the New York Export Lumber Company, would have to be put in operation, it is true, but this could be easily accomplished if the proper indoucement was forthcoming.

At present, however, only a part of the spruce logs cut around Tupper Lake are converted into lumber. The Santa Clara Lumber Co the International Paper Company, and the Norwood Manufacturing Company convert their logs into pulp stock for the manufacture of paper. Exclusive of the old Hurd mill, and including both pulp and lumber, Tupper Lake will probably manufacture the equivalent of 60,000,000 board measure of spruce and pine logs during the open season of 1900.

YOU CAN DO GOOD!

You can help a good cause along and also be paid for it in the following way. Wrap neatly and securely any cloth bound book of 125 pages or more (it may be an old school book if not torn) and mail it to the Fruitdale Seminary, at Fruitdale, Ala., as a contribution to the library. It will be thankfully received and they will, in return for your kindness send you an excellent little paper a whole year and six curious shells from the Gulf Mexico, no two alike.

How To Gain Flesh

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is strange, but it often happens.

Somehow the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food, which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.

A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health; if you have not got it you can get it by taking

NEW HOPE, VA.

Since our last writing we read in the Vindicator of a great many deaths that have occurred during last week, many of whom left bright evidence of hope of a happy home beyond.

We are glad to rectify the mistake about the death of Dr J. W. Watson reported last week. He is much better.

The death of Rev W. T. Yarbrough took place at New Hope on the 19th. He had been a consistent Baptist worker for many years.

On Saturday Mrs Harnsbarger was buried at the Brethren church near New Hope, and on Sunday Mrs Garber. They were both advanced in years.

The Rev J. W. Martin was a pleasant caller at the home of the writer yesterday, and expressed his regret at the loss the good people of Green Bank had to sustain thro the death of Rev A. C. Hamil.

The writer is very much in hope the smallpox scare is over in old Pocahontas, and that it may never set up its scarecrow again.

We would be glad to be out in the old Sugar country and enjoy a taste of the sweets that are being made in that part by many friends and relatives.

Spring seems to have gone back on us during the past two weeks. Wheat is not looking well at this writing, and after all we fear a late spring.

We earnestly wish the good people of Pocahontas would all subscribe for the Staunton Spectator and Vindicator, for through its columns we get sound doctrine. The editor himself is such a good old Democrat.

We wish our many friends in Pocahontas the best of health and great success in all their undertakings.

We feel quite sure that the worthy Rev W. T. Price, who is well acquainted in the Valley, will be pleased to learn, if he has not already heard, that Rev J. N. Vandeventer and his faithful band of workers are making quite extensive arrangements to build a Presbyterian church in the quiet little town of New Hope. They have the lumber sawed and other arrangements made. While the writer is not a Presbyterian, it is my earnest wish to see the good work go on, and hope that the good Presbyterians in old Pocahontas will add a kind word of prayer and that Rev W. T. Price may add a letter of encouragement and send a copy of the Times to Rev J. N. Vandeventer at Ft. Defiance. He is a gentleman of good report, a noble christian and an able speaker, and deserves a great deal of encouragement for the good work he is carrying on. The writer earnestly desires to see him and his faithful band of workers in the near future permitted to worship God unmolested, under their own vine and fig tree.

A FRIEND.

MILL POINT.

Gentle spring time is here. Soon the silvery snow flakes will cease to fall. Plowing seems to be in order.

O. E. Wilson and Sandia Auldridge have been ill from effects of grippe but are recovering.

We learn that George Dilley has taken a job of hauling for Rev T. W. Hogsett.

Rev T. W. Hogsett has gotten his blacksmith tools and will go to work soon.

T. C. Ware and sons have been turning out a lot of new hives.

O. E. Wilson has received a first class set of emery wheels. Any one having worn out saws will be more than pleased if they give him a trial.

The Marvin Chapel Sunday School was reorganized March 25. May great success attend their labors.

Marlin Ware went duck hunting a few days since, but did not get any.

The Marvin Chapel Epworth League met Saturday night, conducted by the President, Lee Ruckman. Speeches were delivered by Rev Hogsett and F. E. Moore. Meetings every Sunday. All are kindly invited to attend. If it does you no good, it can surely do you no harm.

Lee Ruckman is attending school at Marlinton. We truly wish him success.

HUNTERSVILLE and EXPANSION.

What is destined to be the most absorbing topic in connection with the next meeting of the County Court is the question of changing the boundary line between Huntersville and Edray Districts. The petition has been filed, and we consider it all but certain that the result will be that Huntersville will get her share of the railroad mileage. As far as we have been informed, the people of Edray are willing to give up half the mileage of the railroad to Huntersville, but are practically united in opposing the desire of the petitioners that the river should be the line, for then they would lose nearly all the railroad, as well as the town of Marlinton.

It seems that the County Court has absolute power in fixing the boundaries of the district. There does not seem to be any way to appeal from its decision on this point. The law requires the county to be divided in not less than three nor more than ten districts. The olive branch held out by the correspondent from the Huntersville district in last week's paper can hardly be accepted, for Edray district is already larger than many counties, and it is hard to get two justices and two constables located, as it is. It will not be many years until the county will have to have several new districts created, and to decrease the number from four to three would be a move in the wrong direction.

As far as the town of Marlinton is concerned, it is more than likely that the next legislature will make it an independent school district, and so it will not be affected by the question of district taxes. The trouble will come in about the voting precincts. Either two voting precincts will have to be established, or the voters in West Marlinton and surrounding country, tho living in sight of the polls, will have to ride to Edray to vote. The Buckeye neighborhood also would come by and cast wistful eyes at their last voting precinct and go on to Edray and cast their votes, a proceeding which would bring any action that caused such inconvenience periodically to light and cause plenty of grumbling.

The logical solution of the problem seems to be to give Huntersville district the railroad line above Marlinton, making the river the line, leaving the town of Marlinton and the railroad below it to Edray district.

The member from Huntersville will certainly be regarded as having come to be for Huntersville in the matter. The member for the [illegible] [illegible] will be [illegible] in the wellfare of Edray district. The third member, who is from Green Bank, is in a position to view the matter from a wholly disinterested standpoint.

The most pronounced grievance the Edray people have is the fact that a few years ago the Board of Education built a large two-story school-house on the east side of the river, which Huntersville seems willing to assimilate.

SANCTIFICATION.

We hear a great deal about sanctification, and our ideas on the subject, it may well be believed, were very murky and uncertain. Lately we have been looking the matter up and have come to the conclusion that a sanctified man is merely a christian who is "sot in his ways." If a man is really sanctified you can trade horses with him without looking in his horses mouth. As there is no way of knowing whether he is sanctified or not, it is better to look in the mouth anyway as an ordinary business precaution. If the man claims to be sanctified it is best not to trade horses with him at all, for when an individual gets so puffed up in his own conceit that he believes he has lost the art of sinning, he is a dangerous man in the community. He will skin you alive, and give God the glory. He will set himself up as a standard, measure everything by his narrowness, and be dead to faith, hope, and charity.

We received a copy of a paper devoted to special view of sanctification, or holiness,—the kind that comes in an instant and lasts forever,—and in it was a letter from an evangelist who believed in instantaneous sanctification. He seems a trifle narrow and fairly eaten up with egotism. Here is an excerpt from his letter reporting a series of meetings:

"One man told his wife he would not live with her if she professed sanctification; but, all praise to God's matchless name, he sanctified her. I found much opposition from the whiskey element, and one old man, a wandering star, left our meeting in a fit of passion. But God helped me to lay judgment to the line, and his precious truth swept away false creeds, false customs, false traditions, false standards of morals and false conceptions of God."

His must be a comfortable conception of religion. In our humble opinion, one of the best signs that one has lost of a want of sanctification is the pretense on the part of an individual that he is sanctified. We firmly believe that in many christians the power to do any material evil is dead, but in each case everyone has more assurance of the fact than the man himself. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."

Sanctification may be defined as the process by which the Holy Spirit [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

We find a good definition in [illegible]

BUCKEYE.

We are glad to say the good people of our town and neighborhood who have been wrestling with grip are improving nicely.

J. J. Strang has moved a part of his force to camp No. 2. We can see from the active movements of Mr McCormick he is a man of experience in railroad affairs. Let the good work go on.

D. P. B. says the hairs of his head may be all numbered, but that does not prevent Sunday curl on his mustache.

We notice some people are often forced to realize the truth of the old saying. A mule is dangerous at both ends.

About the behavior of outsiders at church, a close observer says that our own boys have worn out a great deal of boot and shoe leather kicking the church house. Swago must pull the beam out of her own eye before she can justly condemn the morals of other people. Don't throw stones while living in glass houses.

To be plain, we have had some very bad behavior at church—but who is to blame? The "Mountain Rover" would say other boys; but I would say the members of the church, who have the rights and powers of protection. It is thru their own fault that the House of God and its occupants are mistreated by the degraded part of humanity. Why not command a decent respect for the sacred places of religious worship? The right and only way to christianity and to populate the church is to abolish all wickedness within the pale. The Bible reads similar to this: Keep thy house in order.

Put Your Finger on Your Pulse

You feel the blood rushing along.

But what kind of blood? That is the question.

Is it pure blood or impure blood?

If the blood is impure then you are weak and languid; your appetite is poor and your digestion is weak. You cannot sleep well and the morning finds you unprepared for the work of the day. Your checks are pale and your complexion is sallow. You are troubled with pimples, boils, or some eruption of the skin. Why not purify your blood?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

will do it. Take it a few days and then put your finger on your pulse again. You can feel the difference. It is stronger and your circulation better. Send for our book on Impure Blood.

If you are billious, take Ayer's Pills. They greatly aid the Sarsaparilla. They cure constipation also.

A Leaf from my Note-Book.

Mr Hicks says: "April opens fair and mild." Yesterday, the first day of April, was fair but not very mild in this section. Today however the prospect for mild weather seems more favorable, so we start from Slaty Fork to go to Edray. Let us say right here that Slaty Fork's enterprising merchant L. D. Sharp is doing a good business. He is just now arranging to enlarge his store house and improve his stock of goods.

Let us hurry on across the Creek and exchange a few pleasant words with Charles Curtis, the blacksmith, whose shop stands on the margin of the Creek. Mr Curtis is a friendly man and a good blacksmith. He is doing well where he is, but expects to move away from that stand soon. We hope he will do well where he goes.

Standing just inside the door of the shop is Burton Hoover, son of George Hoover. Burton is also a blacksmith, and we understand he will occupy this shop as soon as Mr Curtis moves away. Burton is a good boy and will no doubt fill the place well and make a mark in the world.

Our faithful horse carries us up the hillside and down the next slope. We meet William Hannah, son of Andy Hannah, who lives to the right at the mouth of Slaty Fork. The usual friendly greetings through with, we inquire of him, though he seems to be in a hurry, if his folks are well of the measles. He says they are about well.

Looking down a ravine here we seem to almost get a glimpse of a neat little school house nestled down in a quiet little vale among some sugar trees, just above the mouth of Slaty Fork. Here the Slaty Fork school is kept and here in the favorable seasons of the year there is kept a thriving Sunday school. Here the good people of this section meet to sing and pray and worship their Creator on His glad day.

Imagine you see also beyond this. Look down the Creek a little from the school house and round a point to the right and look upon the Big Spring Fork of Elk, as it comes bubbling along like Tennyson's Brook to "go on forever." Here on this noted spot we find we can go to mill, and find also that nice man Mr Griffin ready and willing to grind a grist for us.

A little farther up the stream lives Hugh Sharp a great man for bee hives. Captain Munday, of Buchannon, spends much of his time with Mr Sharp, and were it not for a family that occupies a part of Mr Sharp's house we can not tell what these gentlemen would do, as one is a widower and the other a batchelor. If you want to have a good sociable time, however, and get well and intelligently entertained, just call over to see Captain Munday and Hugh Sharp.

While we are here in contemplation of these things we must not neglect to notice the "King of the Gaulies"—H. B. Sharp, who lives a little below, at the mouth of Big Spring and Laurel Creek. Here is one of the foremost hunters of all this country. We are not sure but Hannon would rather hunt than eat when he is hungry. This place used to be thronged with sportsmen when the game law was favorable for them. Dont you forget it, this man will use you well if you go to see him.

We glance still down stream and "see or seem to see" S. B. Moore's and John Poage's grazing farm occupied at present by Messrs Cook and Grimes. Mr Grimes moved with his family down in here during that very cold weather in February, 1899. He is about to leave and go back to his old place near Dunmore.

We cannot delay here longer, but hurry on by Sheldon Hannah's place. We have a sympathetic thought here, unexpressed as haste forbids us to call. Mr Hannah's son, Clark Hannah is in Randolph County very low with typhoid fever. His mother and oldest sister are at his bedside. We do sincerely hope he will soon recover.

We started out to go to Edray and mean to go there, but bear with us as we make our bow here for the present, and promise more later. With good will to all men,

A. M.

CLOVER CREEK.

The health of this community is good.

Mr Kramer's family have recovered from the measles.

Dr Ligon's family have the measles.

Woods Dilley has gotten some better from a very painful cut on the ankle bone.

You can begin to hear the lambs bleat.

Brown Hiner and Jake Gibson are the boss horse traders.

Oscar Bell returned from Virginia with a bunch of cattle.

S. B. Hannah was down the other day. He has a fine lot of cattle at his farm here.

Died, near Driftwood, on the night of March 20th, Mrs Nancy McCloud, wife of James McCloud, a good Christian lady; and on the 23d her second daughter Emma was called away to be with her we trust in that better land. We learn that another member of the family is in a dangerous condition.

Hon Sheriff Hill was in this section the other day getting ready for court. He is the best sheriff we have had for years.

Born to Mr and Mrs John Shinaberry a big boy.

Look here, what is the matter with the people of Pocahontas county? Some one all the time going with papers getting signers for roads and other changes. If there is any part of this county needs money appropriated on roads it is Clover Creek. This road is almost impassable, railroad wagons cutting it all to pieces. You want a railroad, and you want what few county roads there are kept up with the hands and spend the money on paths where it aint safe for a rocky mountain goat to travel, let alone a man on horseback or in a wagon. Now we only have 6 or 7 standing hands, and we have 6 or 7 miles of public right of way to try to make a road on this spring, though this is the first time we have said a word, something will have to be done or the railroaders will have to haul their goods by way of Green Bank or Edray from Huttonsville.

I see a number of announcements in the Times for county officers but have n't seen a candidate this winter. If the honorable people are not worth the seeing of the candidates, the candidates are not worth the voting for.

To the Voters of Huntersville District: What do you mean, what do you want with that little old town of Marlinton? It is under water; it is not a suitable place to build a court house; there would never be any likelihood of a railroad there. Are you all you all not able to pay your taxes, poor fellows. We pity you all but we can not sympathize with you. We trust the honorable County Court, or whoever has this to settle, will give it plenty of thought, for this is matter should have careful attention.

Why not run Edward Showalter for Constable. We believe he would make a good one and we need one in this part.

[SE]VEN RUNNING SORES CURED

[Joh]nston's Sarsaparilla

QUART BOTTLES.

[TH]E GREAT SPRING MEDICINE.

[JOHNSTON']S SARSAPARILLA as a Blood Food and Nerve Energizer, is the [GREATEST] MEDICINE ever discovered. It comes as a rich blessing from [the "wo]rn out," the run down, the overworked and debilitated. That "tired [feeling," the sin]king spells," the languor and despondency which arise from badly nour[ished bodies,] thin, vitiated blood and an underfed body, vanish as if by a magic [... dullness, weari]ness, lassitude and nervous prostration which accompany the spring, [and the heats] of summer, are conquered and banished at once." For every form of [... and] all ailments of the brain and nerve, insomnia, hysteria and nervousness [it is alm]ost a specific. It furnishes the very elements to rebuild worn-out nerve [... b]rain, nerve centers and nerves, calming and equalizing their action; it [... rich, p]urest blood. Newness of life, new hope, new strength follow its faith[ful use ...] the weak strong, and the old young again.

[... an an]tiquated (but now happily exploded) method in the good old times, to [cure Syphilis]m, Scrofula, Cancer and other troublesome disorders arising from [... the system] with powerful alteratives, such as mercury, arsenic and other mineral [poisons. It was ex]pected by this treatment that the poison could be killed while the blood [coursed] through its channels holding in its circulation the specific germs of the [disease. In t]his way, every part of the body became more or less diseased. Noth[ing is more t]errible than a horribly destructive blood taint. It not only attacks vita[l ...] structures of the body, but many times the bones are honey-combed [... It] often seeks out the nerves and spinal cord, and again it will bring de[struction to] some vital organ, as the kidneys, liver or stomach. There is only one [... remedy] for the cure of blood taint. That is, PURIFICATION! Every particle [... must] be removed through the excretory channels, the lungs, kidneys, bowels, [...] "First pure, then peaceable." The great restorative, reconstructive and [blood f]ood, JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA, not only radically and ex[pels ...] the taint, but also removes all mercury, calomel and other minerals, [... veins] and arteries with the ruby, glowing current of vitality. "The blood is [the life," and] health means pure blood. The old and reliable remedy, JOHNSTON'S [SARSAPARIL]LA, is universally regarded as the greatest Blood Purifier ever discov[ered. Its fame] is now established beyond question or cavil.

TRADE WITHOUT MONEY.

A Society in London Aims to Abolish Poverty.

That money is the root of all evil is a view which has recently found favor among political economists. Most people think it is the want of it that matters. Now some co-operative reformers have started an experiment to discover what amount of truth there is in these two views. The scheme in question is the work of the Co-operative Brotherhood Trust, Limited, and they have hit upon a very ingenious plan for trading without money. Before explaining what this is, however, it would be well to state their reasons for adopting it, which are something more than merely sentimental objections to current coin.

One result of our present systems of currency is that money has a value far beyond any of the commodities it represents. The demand for it has increased more of late years than has the supply, and the result is that a man who has no money at all stands to-day but a poor chance of getting any, and a fairly good one of "going under," though he may all the same be able to do useful work that his fellows need. To-day there are some thousands of men all able to produce something of benefit to the community, and yet all of them idle, merely because they lack money.

Take the case of one of these. For the time being all the vacant jobs are full and he is unable to get employment.

Now, unless he has money enough to set himself up in a small business, or money enough to extensively advertise his goods, it is useless for him to produce any. He does not know how to get any one to buy them if he does. Accordingly he drifts and drifts, and finally becomes a member of what is apparently the surplus class.

Only apparently, however, for really while he is unable to find people who want his goods there are plenty who are only too willing to consume them. Only, like himself, they cannot purchase, because for the time being, at any rate, they are without money.

The result is that both the potential consumer and the potential producer have to stand idle, though both have labor force and both are capable of producing something of use to one another. Without money, however, they cannot do this, and what happens is that an artificial poverty seizes both of them and their energies are paralyzed.

It is this artificial poverty that the Co-operative Brotherhood Trust, limited, have set themselves to abolish, and they do this by bringing the idle consumer and the idle producer together and exchanging the labor of one for the labor of the other.

They manage to effect this in a very clever way. In connection with the trust an exchange circle has been started, and this is the medium through which all the labor products are exchanged, and in the following manner:

We will say a carpenter has become one of the unemployed. He is out of work and has not enough money to set up in business for himself, but he joins the exchange circle and puts his name down on the directory.

He offers to supply tables, chairs or whatever it is that he can most easily make, and offers at the same time to do odd jobs.

When some other member of the circle who is in need of the thing he offers buys it, and pays him, not in money, but in barter notes and to which he has become entitled by the work he himself has executed for a third member of the exchange circle.

These barter notes not only entitle the bearer to as much as their face value of the goods in the circle, but also to such goods as are in the store, and these include groceries and provisions, clothes, hosieries, furniture, athletic requisites, and nearly everything except alcoholic beverages.

If the holder of any particular barter note desires to realize it in cash the committee endeavors to oblige him. But it is, of course, preferable that he should take it out in food made by other members, as only in this way can the circle be self-supporting.

Of course, the success of the circle largely depends on the number of people joining it. Obviously the goods cannot be exchanged without at least a fair number of exchanges. But, though yet in its infancy, it is vigorously developing, and the fact that tradesmen are accepting barter notes instead of cash augues well for it.—Pearson's Weekly.

THE GRAND ARMY.

It Will Soon Be a Memory of Good Deeds and Brave Men.

One of the bravest "standing armies" in the world is dying out. The Grand Army of the Republic, that band of gray-haired warriors whose pride and dearest recollection it is that they once served their country, is shrinking with appalling swiftness to the point where it will be only a memory of good deeds and brave men who have done them.

Statistics as to the membership and death-rate of the organization tell a story as touching as the tenderest funeral sermon. They show that in a few years more the roll-call will be an empty ceremony—the summons to the national encampment a vain appeal to the heroes of '61.

Within twelve months—the year of 189[illegible]—according to a report just issued, more than 17,000 members of the Grand Army died. This death-rate was more than double that of the previous year. If the past year (1899) has shown a corresponding decline in membership, the friends of the organization have ample ground for the concern they express as to its future.

The high water mark of the Grand Army's prosperity was not reached until some time after the death of its founder, Dr. Benjamin F. Stephenson.

It is set down to the eternal credit of the Army that it originated one of our most inspiring national holidays—Memorial Day. This is the most interesting act in the history of the Army and by all means the most popular act of Gen. Logan's administration.

This holiday, which has been celebrated with such fervor for thirty years, was originally the suggestion of a citizen of German birth whose very name has been forgotten. It was established by Gen. Logan and the leaders of the Army and a few years later made by congress a legal holiday.

Tears do not necessarily indicate a tender heart. Lots of tears are shed for the purpose of softening a hard heart.

TIPPING.

It Seems to Be Legal as Well as General in Germany.

The question of giving gratuities to waiters and servants is as much a vexed one in this country as it is on your side of the Channel. Even your man servant or maid expects in Germany a "tip" from your guests after they have dined or lunched with you, and it constantly happens that on engaging a servant you are asked: "How about tips? Can I expect much from this source, and may I keep all I get, or have I to share the tips with other servants?" I have even known mistresses to hold out as an inducement to servants the fact that they entertain a good deal, whereby the wages are considerably supplemented by gratuities from guests.

One very curious feature about German everyday life is the readiness of people to give a "trinkgeld" the equivalent of the French "pourboire," under which name the donation is more familiar to English ears. The feature is curious, because the Teuton is by nature thrifty, and many of them are more close than thrifty. And yet the same person who will expect a hard-working teacher of languages to give lessons at from sixpence to one shilling an hour will often be seen to bestow a groschen on the shop servant who has brought a parcel to his house or halfpenny on the tramway conductor for handing him his penny ticket. The postal officials who pay the money orders and bring the money to your house are entitled to charge a halfpenny for doing so, but look very sour if you do not add another halfpenny of your accord. small "tips" all around are de rigueur in German daily life.

It is always understood that the porter and the boots at a hotel may expect a gratuity from the guests. Now, the porter does little more for you than hand you your key and take off his hat to you as you enter and leave your hostelry, and in small towns he summons the boots at your departure by vigorously ringing his bell, and for these amenities he is rewarded in a sort of geometrical progression. The boots realy doels render services. He blacks your boots and brushes your clothes and is ready to assist you to pack, and sits on your portmanteau for you if need be when you want to lock it. Notwithstanding this it often happens that he comes off second or third best in the way of rewards.

It has, however, always been supposed that the largesse assigned to him was a voluntary one. This idea has now, according to the decision of a court at Chemnitz, in Saxony, been shown, at the expense of a certain commercial traveler who recently visited that town, to have been an illusion. The man in question remained at Cremnitz for four weeks at a local hostelry, performing his mercantile duties, and on leaving handed to the boots for the usual service rendered by that functionary the sum of four shillings as a gratuity. The boots demanded twelve shillings, that is to say, at the rate of three shillings a week. As the higher sum was not paid he brought an action against the traveler, and the court declared that the latter was to pay ten shillings. The reasons given for the judgment were that although the boots received board and lodging from the landlord, he was paid nothing in cash; on the other hand, he had to give remuneration in money out of his own pocket to two assistants who helped him to do the work.—London Post.

Sat Next to Grant.

Visitors to Washington will probably remember an old second-hand book dealer, who on nice days sits in front of his shop, on the north side of Pennsylvania avenue, just opposite Peace Monument. He relates one story in which he and Gen. Grant figure rather prominently.

The old bookseller had received a ticket for a theatrical performance. He went early and took his seat in the parquet. Soon a family, consisting of a husband and wife and several grown up daughters took the seats to his right. A little later a man came and sat on his left next the aisle. The old bookseller is blind in the left eye, and did not pay any attention to the man on his left. At the end of the first act the lady on his right leaned over and asked if the stranger were not General Grant. Sure enough, it was, and the lady was so informed.

"I reckon you can see a bit better from this chair where I am sittin'," the old gentleman remarked, "and if you think you'd rather change with me I'm willing."

A second invitation was not required. "And I didn't have to change only with the woman but with the hul family, and I thought they'd push me out in the aisle. But I'll bet that to this day the woman tells of the time when she sat next to the President," the old bookseller adds.—Exchange.

The Confidence of Youth.

"And now that you are through college, what are you going to do?" asked a friend of a youthful graduate.

"I shall study medicine," was the grave reply of the ambitious young man.

"But isn't that profession already overcrowded?" asked the friend.

"Possibly it is," remarked the knowing youth, "but I propose to study medicine just the same, and those who are already in the profession will have to take their chances."—Chicago News.

Battles and Rain.

It is a curious fact, well known, however, to weather experts—that heavy firing will generally cause rain, even though the sky was clear beforehand. At Waterloo rain came down in torrents. So it did in several of the big battles of the civil war—Gettysburg, for example. The tremendous concussion shakes the little globules which are always present invisible in the atmosphere together and so brings them down.

Worse Than War.

France loses every year by infectious and contagious diseases 240,000 lives, or nearly double the number of lives lost in the Franco-Prussian war of 1870.

In China an inferior on horseback meeting a superior dismounts and waits until the other has passed.

PROCRASTINATION.

Be wise to-day; 'tis madness to defer;
Next day the fatal precedent will plead;
Thus on, till wisdom is pushed out of life.
Procrastination is the thief of time;
Year after year it steals, till all are fled,
And to the mercies of a moment leaves
The vast concerns of an eternal scene.
If not so frequent, would not this be strange?
That 'tis so frequent, this is stranger still.
Of man's miraculous mistakes this bears
The palm, 'That all men are about to live,'
Forever on the brink of being born
All pay themselves the compliment to think
They one day shall not drivel, and their pride
On this reversion takes up ready praise;
At least their own their future selves applaud:
How excellent that life they ne'er will lead!
Time lodged in their own hands is Folly's vails;
That lodged in Fate's to wisdom they consign;
The thing they can't but purpose they postpone.

'Tis not in folly not to scorn a fool,
And scarce in human wisdom to do more
All promise is poor dilatory man,
And that through every stage. When young, indeed,
In full content we sometimes nobly rest,
Unanxious for ourselves, and only wish
As duteous sons, our fathers were more wise.
At thirty, man suspects himself a fool;
Knows it at forty, and reforms his plan;
At fifty, chides his infamous delay,
Pushes his prudent purpose to resolve;
In all the magnanimity of thought
Resolves, and re-resolves; then dies the same.
And why? because he thinks himself immortal.
All men think all men mortal but themselves;
Themselves, when some alarming shock of fate
Strikes through their wounded hearts the sudden dread;
But their hearts wounded, like the wounded air,
Soon close; where passed the shaft no trace is found,
As from the wing no scar the sky retains.
The parted wave no furrow from the keel,
So dies in human hearts the tho't of death,
E'en with the tender tear which nature sheds
O'er those we love, we drop it in their grave.

INFLUENZA.

Influenza, one of the class of diseases to which the term Zymotic is now applied, has long been recognized by medidal writers, altho its name, borrowed from the Italian is somewhat modern in this country. Cullen called it catarhus e contagio, but altho, in most cases, it closely resembles ordinary catarrh, it presents certain points of difference from that disease. In addition to the ordinary symptoms of catarrh, there is a sudden, early and very striking debility and depression of spirits. This early debility is one of the most marked and characteristic signs of influenza. The mucous membrances (especially the pulmonary membrane) are much affected. The tongue is white and creamy, the sense of taste is lost, there is no appetite, the pulse is soft and weak, the skin, altho at first hot and dry, soon becomes moist and, and the patient complains of pains and soreness in various parts of the body.

In simple, uncomplicated cases convalescence supervenes in the course of a week or sooner, but influenza is very frequently complicated with bronchitis or pneumonia, in which case it is much more persistent and dangerous.

Influenza affords an excellent example of an epidemic disease, a whole community being often attacked in the course of a few hours. From this it may be inferred that the occurrence of this disease is connected with some particular condition of the atmosphere, but what that condition is is not known. Not infrequently influenza follows close upon a sudden thaw; sometimes it is preceded by thick, ill smelling fogs. One hypothesis refers the complaint to some change in the electrical state of the air; and one of the latest and most probable conjectures regarding its exciting cause is that of Schonbein, who refers it to the presence of an excess of Ozone in the atmosphere. Like cholera, influenza generally follows a westerly direction, or one from the south-east towards the north west, and its course seems to be altogether independent of currents of air, as it frequently travels against the prevailing wind.

Few diseases increase the death-rate to such an extent as influenza more, however, in consequence of the great number of persons who are attacked in a severe epidemic than in consequence of its danger in individual cases.—Chamber's Encyclopaedia.

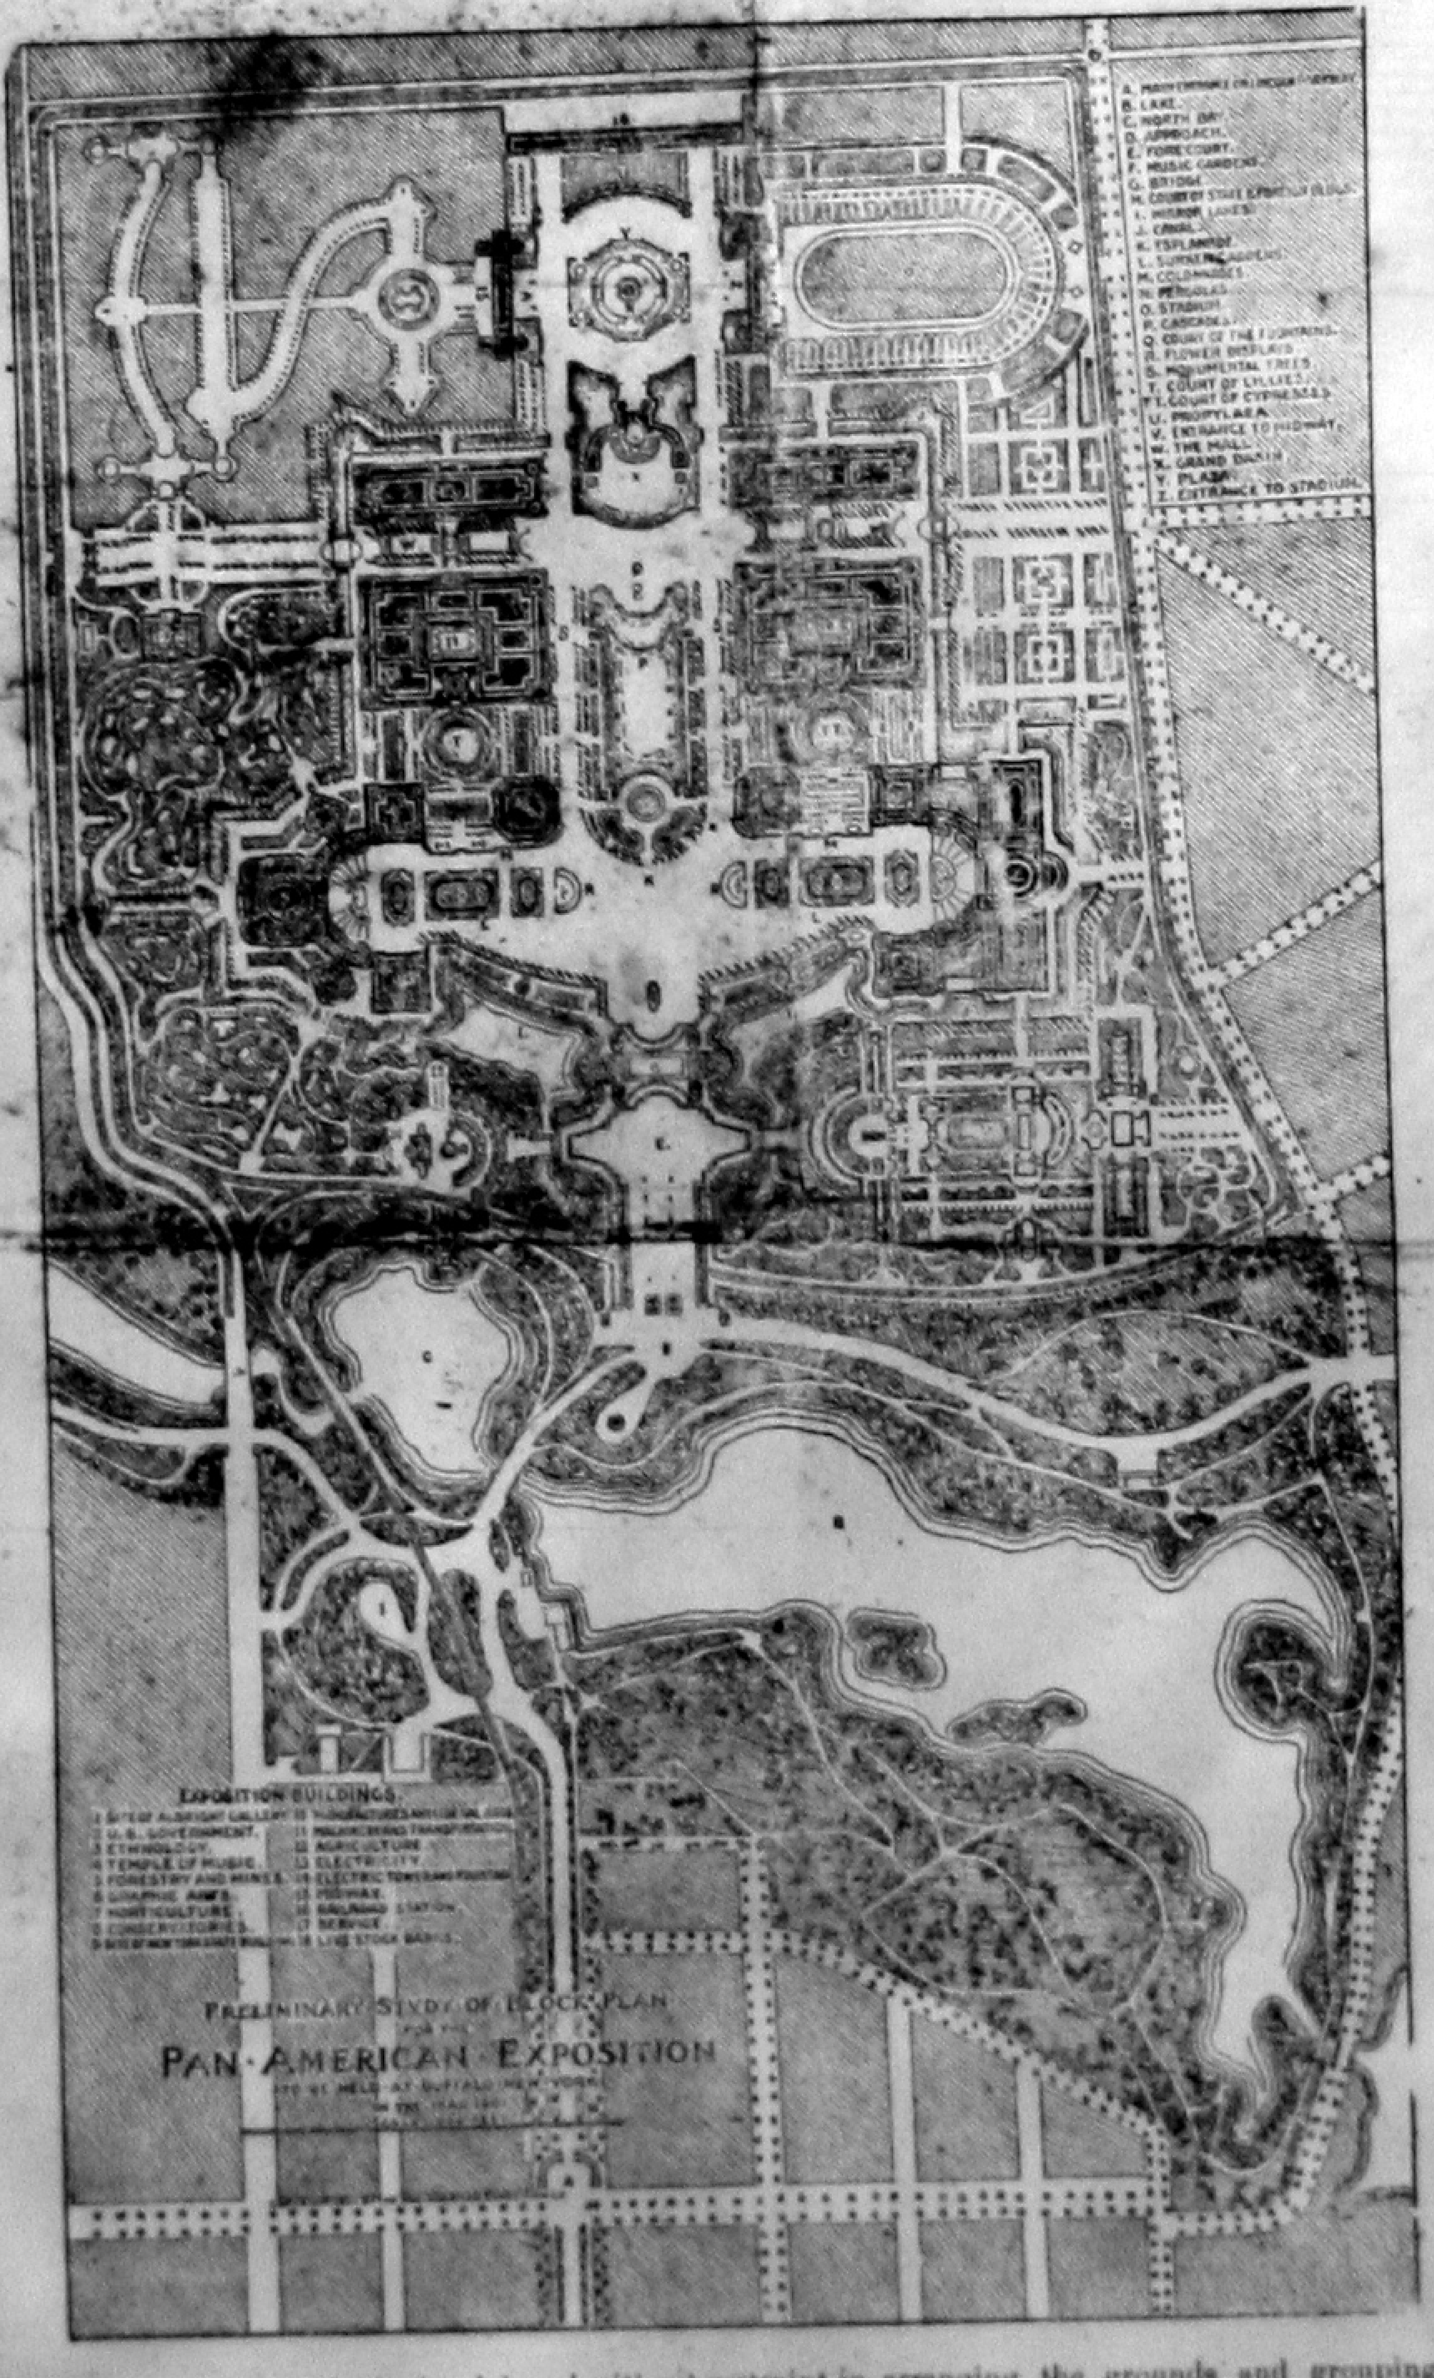
The most important point in the treatment of influenza is not to bleed the patient or in any way to depress his vital powers. He should be kept in bed; his bowels should be gently opened, his skin slightly acted upon, if dry; and, if the cough be troublesome, a mustard poultice should be applied to the chest and an expectorant mixture prescribed. In persons of weak or broken-down constitutions, wine, beef-tea, and wine and tonics must be taken from the outset. The debility that often remains for a considerable period after the establishment of convalescence is best met by the preparations of iron and quinine.

—"Ma, may I go out to play?" "No; you must sit still where you are." Pause. "Ma, may I go down into the kitchen?" "No; I want you to sit perfectly quiet." Pause. "Ma, may I sit on the floor and play marbles?" "I have told you twice that I want you to sit just where you are and be quiet, and mean exactly what I say." Pause. "Ma, may I grow?"—Collier's Weekly.

Enterprise.

"Next month," wrote the editor of one of the most progressive of the many magazines having each the largest number of intelligent readers, in his prospectus, "We shall begin the publication of 1000—count them—1000 articles on the Second Epistle of St. Peter, by the Colonel of Oklahoma Volunteers!" Then he remarked to his etourage that he guessed certain rival publications would wish they had never been born, so hot was the pace become.—Detroit Journal.

—"The time will come," said the agitator, "when the laboring man will have the wealthy under his feet." "In which case," interjected the trifler, "he will be walking on his uppers."



THE hand of the artist has labored without restraint in arranging the grounds and grouping the buildings for the great Pan American Exposition, to be held at Buffalo in 1901. The plan has been completed after protected and painstaking study of the grounds and their surroundings, and with a keen appreciation of all the requirements of an Exposition upon the scale of magnificence here contemplated. The completed work will be a masterpiece, in which the designer of buildings and the landscape architect will alike share the honors. American architectural genius has indeed here produced glorious results. If one were to see only the exterior of this splendid Exposition he will find himself abundantly repaid for his visit to Buffalo in the Pan-American year.

The Exposition grounds include 350 acres, of which 133 acres are improved park lands, a part of Delaware Park. The grounds are about one mile from north to south and a half mile from east to west. Their situation is in the northern part of the city, accessible from every direction. The park lands form the southern part of the extensive grounds, and are pronounced by expert landscape architects to be among the most beautiful in the world. The trees and shrubbery in wonderful variety, the romantic footpaths leading in all directions among the thick foliage, the loveliest of lakes, on whose surface numberless swans and other water fowl of immaculate plumage are constantly at sport, the wide reaches of lawn and the rich embroidery of flowers, everywhere to be seen, all combine to refresh and restore the mind of him who tarries within these delectable precincts.—(From Press Report of the Pan-American Exposition.)

Robber Band of Four.

Holds Up Young Willie Rhodes a Block from Home—The Robber Chief, Aged 8, Gets the Spoil, One Dime—Bike Cop Runs Down the Gang and Two Land in the Gerry Jail.

From the New York Sun.

Eleven-year-old Willie Rhodes, who lives with his stepfather Mace Langly, at 160 West Seventy-ninth Street, was sent out yesterday morning to do an errand at the house of a friend of the family in Central Park West. Willie presents an appearance suggesting the possession of what boys regard as riches. He had reached Central Park West and had walked down to Seventy-eighth street when he he was accosted by four boys, all about 10 years old, whose apparent chief was a thickset, black-haired boy.

"Say, young feller," began the thickset boy, addressing young Rhodes, who was three years his senior, "have yer got money about yer? If yer have we want it. We need it in our business. Ever hear of gentlemen robbers? Them 's us. Loosen up now, or you 'll get a jolt in the jaw."

Willie not being inclined to "loosen up" answeree by trying to press on to finish his errand. The thickset boy seized him by the collar. Another of the boys tripped him up, and while Willie lay on the sidewalk one of the boys went through his pockets. The amount of 10 cents was extracted, and the four youthful robbers, after threatening dire vengeance on Willie if he attempted to follow them, made a rapid movement down Central Park West. Willie rose from the sidewalk and started to pursue, but realizing that their number was too great to give any hope of recovering his money, abandoned the idea.

A moment later Bicycle Policeman Schofield came down the avenue on his wheel. He listened to Willie's story and rode after the departed boys. He chased them eight blocks and finally corraled all four, taking them to the Bicycle Squad headquarters. The sergeant discharged two of the band on the ground that there was not sufficient evidence that they were bad boys, but the other two, Edward Weiters, 8 years old, and Hurry Mellin, 11, were sent to the West Fifty-fourth street police court. Magistrate Zeller, subduing an almost uncontrollable grin, presented a stern face to the young bandits. Gerry Agent Kuhn flanked them, a terrifying snarl on his face, and the bicycle policeman behind them explained the case in tones of ominous thunder. Willie Bhode's face wore a grin of triumph. The hitherto bold chief Edmund Weiters looked around as Spartacus may have looked when he declared that he was chief.

"Never done it," he blurted out.

"Shut up," said the policeman on the Bridge.

Edmund covered his face with his grimy hands. The sound of sobs came from behind the hands and Edmund pulled out a handkerchief which he held over his eyes. The other prisoner gave an audible sniff betokening disgust.

"He," said Mellin, pointing to his chief, "was awful brave when dey was four of us agin one. An' to think he got de dime too!"

The scorned chief kept his face hidden and still sobbed. The magistrate asked the policeman if the fathers of the prisoners were in court. The policeman said they were not. The magistrate pondered.

"Say, your Honor," put in the Gerry agent, "just look at this young fellow (pointing to young Weiters). He 's only bluffing. I just saw him spitting in his handkerchief to make it wet so you'd think they were tears he was weeping."

It was true, as the comparatively dry condition of his eyes testified when they were uncovered.

"I'll hold you boys for examination on Friday," said Magistrate Zeller in his severest tone. "You are bad boys. You 'll have to stay with the Gerry Society until Friday."

Then, as the extent of their fate dawned on them, the two prisoners did break down and they wept copiously as they were led away.

A Modern Magazine's Enterprise

On March 3, 1900 Mr. Peter Mac Queen M. A. of The National Magazine editorial staff, will sail direct for Delagoa bay, Lorenzo Marquez, and report the prevailing situation of affairs in the Transvaal drictly to "The National Magazine." Mr. MacQueen's splendid record in the Philippines last year, his work during the Turko-Grecian war, and in Cuba and Porto Rico during the Spanish-American war easly places him in the front rank of war correspondents.

A keen and accurate observer; an intrepid and fearless investigator, and a facile and strong writer he is enquipped to furnish the readers of "The National Magazine with exclusive and intensely interesting information, which will constitute a leading feature of the coming issues of this magazine. The American people at this time want something more than the monotonous, trite, censored news filtered through London. The future of South Africa is a question of vital interest to Americans and while maintaining a strict neutrality they want reliable information from the armies on both sides. Very little or nothing has thus far come direct from the Transvaal and that is what "The National Magazine" promises to have if possible.

Marie Correli's New Story.

Marie Corelli, for the first time in five years, has written a short story for an American magazine. The Laurels of the Brave is the title of a bitter, brilliant, timely story which she has just finished for The Saturday Evening Post, of Philadelphia. It deals with the South African War Charities, and handles without gloves the Society Department of the English War Office and the women who, for advertising purposes, are donning khaki.

The Laurels of the Brave, superbly illustrated by Harrison Fisher, will appear in The Saturday Evening Post of April 14.

Tillman as an "Exhorter."

Senator Tillman has made his speech protesting against the administration's policy in the Philippines. He has all the fervor of old-time oratory, and read from manuscript in a staccato way, with a decided South Carolina accent. He shrieks like an exhorter, but has a power and strength of eloquence which hold the closest attention of his hearers. Thoroughly original in his manner and methods he remains one of the most picturesque individualities in the Senate.—"The National Magazine," for March.

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern which is not afraid to be generous. The proprietors of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption Coughs and Colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles and have the satisfaction of knowing it has cured thousands of hopeless cases Asthma Bronchitis, La Grippe and all Throat, Chest and Lung diseases are surely cured by it.

Trial bottles free at Harry R. Echols Marlinton; S. J. Brown, Mill Point, E. L. Beard & Co., Academy; H. N. Hannah, Renick's Valley; S. F. Myles, Falling Springs, W. Va.

"This medicine is a fake," declared the irate invalid; "you guaranteed it to cure after all others failed, but it hasn't done me a bit of good." "Maybe," returned the cautiously, "you didn't try all others.—Exchange.

COUNTY DISTRICTS.

The expansion movement of the Huntersville district is still a very interesting matter. To grant the prayer of the petition would probably be as unjust to Edray district as it now seems unjust to leave Huntersville without any railroad. It seems to a great many that the interests of the county demand that the county court at its next session take the matter in hand and redistrict the whole county, forming at least two more magisterial districts. The county is one of the largest in the State. Greenbrier about the same size has nine districts, and with smaller districts the school boards and justices would have a better chance to cover the territory. When the present lines are changed it should be done with a view to the changed conditions of the county caused by the railroad.

Dewey is doomed to the bitterest chagrin and disappointment in his Presidential aspirations. His published utterances are of such childlike simplicity that the public refuses to take him into serious consideration as a candidate for the Presidency. The Admiral's hosts of friends regret most his untactful action. He seems to have a fatal habit of doing the right thing at the wrong time. The announcement of his candidacy should have come months ago when the country was at his feet, or later just before the conventions meet (whichever one he decided to select) when if his case had been in the hands of astute politicians, enough delegates might have been stampeded to him to give him the nomination. However, we think the Admiral is suffering from swell head.

Colonel A. C. L. Gatewood has yielded to the solicitation of many friends, and his announcement for County Commissioner appears this week. There could not be a more suitable man for the position. He will not canvass the county, but leave the matter entirely in the hands of his friends.

THE ENGAGEMENT OF ANTIQUE.

FOUGHT JAN. 14, 1900.

[Sung to the tune of "My Old New Hampshire Home.]

I.

When the sun lit up the hills of old Antique,
O'er the waters rolled a terrible cannonade;
And our boys in blue were lined to face the music,
And prepared to charge the hills and make a raid.
Around our ears the shot and shell was screaming,
From every hill-top shot a streak of streak of flame,
In the trenches we could see their bolos gleaming,
But we drove them from their stronghold just the same.

CHORUS:

We have faced the storm before,
To the charge we go once more,
Side by side we fought at Passai and San Blas;
Tho we go to death and the grave,
The stars and stripes shall proudly wave
O'er the islands in the tropics far away

II.

On the open plain the gallant scouts were waiting,
On their line we made a halt and faced the foe,
And the "Kaclacs" ne'er shall forget the greeting
That was sent them by the gallant boys in blue.
The day before they sent an invitation
They were ready to receive us, so they said,
But they did not linger for the presentation.
To the mountains every creeping rebel fled.

III.

And we stormed the hills with only one battalion:
It was the Second of our Nineteenth Infantry:
On that day we struck a blow to the rebellion:
And our rifles sang a fearful melody,
The Concord sent a broadside in conclusion.
So we give a cheer for all her gallant crew,
The Mosquito Fleet did noble execution.
Every man stood by his gun, his colors true.

CHORUS.

We have faced the storm before,
To the charge we go once more,
Side by side we fought at Passai and San Blas;
Tho' we go to death and the grave,
The stars and stripes shall proudly wave
O'er the islands of the tropics faraway.

Respectfully dedicated to the men of the 2nd Battalion of the 19th U. S. Infantry, who fought at San Blas, Passai, Antique and various other engagements on Island de Panay, by

There were forty-four indictments made for misdemeanors and one for felony.

"It takes great moral courage to say 'No,'" remarked the clerical looking individual. "Yes, indeed," asserted the pert maid. "People notice it so nowadays if you don't say 'Nit.'—Philadelphia Record.

DEER CREEK.

All quiet along the Creek, except the croaking of the frogs and wild geese.

We have about nine months of winter here and the other three late in the fall.

The measles had about died down, but it has broken out anew in the [illegible] of Pine Grove.

George Beverage, whose hip was unjointed by falling off a load of hay, has been lying in one position for four weeks, and may have to lie that way a week or two longer before the bandages can be removed though he seems to be resting easy.

Mrs S. B. Hannah is getting along very well this winter.

S. B. Hannah's little boy has been very sick with tonsilitis, but is much better.

Last January while some men were blasting below Sam Cassell's some of them ran under a cliff of rocks for shelter. When the blast went off it shook the rocks and set a den of rattlesnakes to whizzing. The men did not see any snakes, but from the sound it must have been a large den.

What do you think about the road leading from the main road below Liberty Church across Little Mountain. There is but one hand on the road besides the overseer. If there is no money appropriated for this road it will soon be impassable.

To the voters of Pocahontas Co: We should look well to our interests and should support our county men If we don't watch our interests it will be like the Italians coming in here and running out the American people As far as we can learn Deer Creek is solid for T. S. McNeel for Prosecuting Attorney, L. M. McClintic for House of Delegates, and M. J. McNeel for County Commissioner. Come along Mr Buzzard with your mule, we'll vote for you too. As for the Sheriffalty they have got it so mixed that it would take a Philadelphia lawyer to unravel it.—A-Sol Phares will not serve the people of Green Bank another term as magistrate, suppose we elect S B. Hannah.

Catch Cold Easily?

Are you frequently hoarse? Do you have that annoying tickling in your throat? Would you feel relieved if you could raise something? Does your cough annoy you at night, and do you raise more mucus in the morning?

Then you should always keep on hand a bottle of

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

If you have a weak throat you cannot be too careful. You cannot begin treatment too early. Each cold makes you more liable to another, and the last one is always harder to cure than the one before it.

Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral Plaster protects the lungs from colds.

should always be kept in the house for the following reasons:

FIRST—Because, if any member of the family has a hard cold, it will cure it.

SECOND—Because, if the children are delicate and sickly, it will make them strong and well.

THIRD—Because, if the father or mother is losing flesh and becoming thin and emaciated, it will build them up and give them flesh and strength.

FOURTH—Because it is the standard remedy in all throat and lung affections.

No household should be without it. It can be taken in summer as well as in winter.

The Veteran in Politics.

When it suits, the war record of our candidates can be recalled to make or mar a man in politics. The beardless boy who pointed the rifle barrel in the sixties is ripe for office now, but we could never see that a grateful county went out of its way to any great extent to elect them to office.

We hear a tale from a West Virginia county where an appeal failed. A wealthy gold Democrat, a Confederate veteran, approached a man whose father had been a gallant Confederate soldier. He said: "Vote for Major B. He was a Confederate hero. Why are you for C. His war record will not bear looking into. If your father knew you were supporting C. he would turn over in his grave."

"He turned over four years ago."

"What caused him?" asked the gold Democrat.

"Your voting for McKinley."

A Leaf From My Note-Book.

We proceed on our way from Slaty Fork to Edray. We left our readers at Sheldon Hannah's place. We notice Mr Hannah killed a dog of his that went mad a few days ago. Several dogs have gone mad in this vicinity this spring and had to be killed. Some two or three head of cattle are reported to have been bitten by mad dogs and had to be killed also.

We wish to give a passing glance at all the settlers along this road, and yet there are some families that we know nothing about, and must now pass along with this mere mention of them.

We pass a house to the left on a little eminence. We know but little of an aged couple who used to live here and yet we have heard of them, and know something at least of their family. Passing here we feel like alighting from our horse and looking for the sacred spot on the floor of this old house where the "husband and the father prayed." You will ask us why we think they were followers of the meek and lowly Jesus. We answer we think they were, for "by their fruits ye shall know them." Rev Geo. P. Hannah, of the M. E. Church, Henry Hannah, merchant in Renicks Valley; Mrs Silas Sharp, of Slaty Fork, and the late Mrs Samuel Gibson were born and raised here.

Just beyond this place we find Grant Higgins sitting on the fence by the roadside. To all appearances he has just returned from salting some stock. He is seated here for a few moments chatting with Levi Gibson who is seated on his horse, heading down stream. We learn from these young men that the morning air is a little too cold for comfort and yet they wish to be sociable and exchange a few words, as is the custom with people in crossing roads through life. "We go this way [that is, through life] but once." Let us help each other all we can as we meet and cross roads.

Yonder is Samuel Gibson's residence to the right of the road and near the bank of the Creek. This man and his little family seem comfortable and happy. He, however, with the rest of us, has seen trouble in this life. He has his second wife and a bright little boy to cheer him up and make him happy. His first wife was referred to above in speaking of the last mentioned family.

We are nearing Samuel Hannah's place. Here is very comfortably situated one of the nicest men on this Creek.

The Creek bottom widens out here and the grand old mountains lift their heads higher and present an attractive scene to the onlooker. These lofty peaks attract and gather the fruitful showers in summer which greatly helps to make these fields productive.

Still this bottom widens out more and more as we proceed on our journey. On one side of the road here are the ruins of a burned-down house, which belonged to Boad Hannah. This house was burned early last fall. A little later in the season William Gibson had a barn burned on the opposite side of the road. These gentlemen lost greatly by the burning of these buildings. To tell how these fires originated is out of the question. So far as we know the whole matter is wrapped in mystery. There will, however, be a by and by, whether it be a sweet or bitter by and by, be an uncovering of all mysteries. Let us all transact our affairs so that whatever leaps to light we never shall be ashamed. We need to stand securely when we shall be disrobed of all our surroundings in a condition of things when every man's work shall be thoroughly tried.

Time flies, but we do not fly up this Creek very fast on this trip, but don't hurry us and we will work cheaper. A. M.

BROWNSBURG.

(In Colored Circles.)

There has been a good deal of sickness in our part, but nearly all are able to be out again.

We are having beautiful weather now. Wheat and grass are beginning to grow. Look out for Good Friday for it is a good time to plant potatoes.

There will be preaching here Easter Sunday at 11 a. m.

Our school is in session, taught by Professor J. W. Renick.

Miss Juliana McDowell, who has been visiting her relations and friends at Hot Springs has returned home.

Willie Wilson is off to Virginia to buy grain.

We hear that William Miller died at his home near Driscol of pneumonia. He was a highly respected citizen.

Mrs Annie Walker departed this life on April 4th. She was the wife of William Walker and the daughter of Howard Tibbs and Louisa Tibbs, and the mother of three children, who with her husband survive her. Her remains were placed in the Brownsburg graveyard, attended by a good many people. The funeral services were conducted by Rev G. P. Moore of Edray.

Died, near Traveler's Repose, Tuesday, April 3, Mrs George Houchin.

Mrs C. B. Swecker, Mrs C. D. Bussard and Mrs Z. B. Grimes are on the sick list.

Mrs Dave Smith is no better.

Auctioneer Swecker will sell the personal effects of James McClure Saturday, April 14.

All the candidates in the county are expected to attend the McClure sale, April 14.

Auctioneer Swecker will close out the personal effects of Jacob M. Rider, April 20.

The auction at Frost was largely attended and I never didn't see the like of goods sold.

Mrs Belle Nottingham left on Thursday for Woodstock, Ill.

N. B. Gragg, of Ritchie County, was in on a visit. He says they have big chunks of gold out there.

Shep Bird was in town Monday.

B. F. McElwee left for Baltimore Tuesday. He says he is going to buy the largest stock of goods in the Upper End.

Judge C. F. Moore was at his old home last week.

We believe the people of Pocahontas county would like to have Henry Gilmer for Judge.

John Rock spent a few days at home.

George and Newt Rayburn were in town Monday.

William Miller, col., of Knapps Creek, died Sunday evening, aged 34 years.

There is a great deal of sickness in our neighborhood: Mrs R. L. Nottingham has pneumonia. Mrs L. H. Moore is quite sick; also Mrs L. E. Campbell.

Miss Emma Taylor is at Edray.

A good many wagons are off to Huttonsville and Hot Springs for grain. The farmer wants to plant lots of corn and taters this year.

Cattle are coming to the backings, and the ramps have not begun to smell yet.

E. N. Moore is on the sick list.

Road overseers should throw out the loose rock and plow open the ditches. It saves the road and work also.

SEVEN RUNNING SORES CURED
—BY—
Johnston's Sarsaparilla
QUART BOTTLES.

THE GREAT SPRING MEDICINE.

JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA as a Blood Food and Nerve Energizer, is the greatest SPRING MEDICINE ever discovered. It comes as a rich blessing from heaven to the "worn out," the run down, the overworked and debilitated. That "tired feeling," those "sinking spells," the languor and despondency which arise from badly nourished nerves, from thin, vitiated blood and an underfed body, vanish as if by a magic spell. The weariness, lassitude and nervous prostration which accompany the springtime and the heat of summer, are conquered and banished at once. For every form of neurasthenia, and all ailments of the brain and nerve, insomnia hysteria and nervousness generally, it is almost a specific. It furnishes the very elements to rebuild worn-out nerve tissues. It feeds brain, nerve centers and nerves, calming and equalizing their action; it makes rich, red, honest blood. Newness of life, new hope, new strength follow its faithful use. It makes the weak strong, and the old young again.

It was the antiquated (but now happily exploded) method in the good old times, to treat Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Cancer, and other troublesome disorders arising from BLOOD TAINT with powerful alteratives, such as mercury, arsenic and other mineral agents. It was expected by this treatment that the poison could be killed while the blood was left to course through its channels holding in its circulation the specific germs of the disease. But in this way, every part of the body became more or less diseased. Nothing can be more terrible than a horribly destructive blood taint. It not only attacks virulently the different structures of the body, but many times the bones are honey-combed and destroyed. It often seeks out the nerves and spinal cord, and again it will bring decay and death to some vital organ, as the kidneys, liver or stomach. There is only one scientific method for the cure of blood taint. That is, PURIFICATION! Every particle of the blood must be removed through the excretory channels, the lungs, kidneys, bowels, liver and skin. "First pure, then peaceable." The great restorative, reconstructive and vitalizer of the blood, JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA, not only radically and exhaustively removes the taint, but also removes all mercury, calomel and other minerals, and fills the veins and arteries with the ruby, glowing current of vitality. "The blood is the life." Good health means pure blood. The old and reliable remedy, JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA, is universally regarded as the greatest Blood Purifier ever discovered. This fact is now established beyond question or cavil.

Small-Pox and Vaccination.

If the reports of the recent senseless scares concerning the prevalence of small-pox in different sections of the country can be made to carry with them a becomingly useful object lesson to the public at large they will serve a most excellent purpose.

It is well conceded in this day and generation, with health boards almost everywhere, that there is no possible danger of the spread of the disease if the well attested preventive measure of timely vaccination be rigidly enforced. In fact, there is no good reason why the malady should exist at all when almost absolute protection against possible attacks is freely guaranteed. Thus it is fair to assume when an epidemic appears in any given locality that the victims have either been neglectful of their opportunities to gain immunity or have been culpably ignorant of the advantages of being on the safe side.

It has been so abundantly proved that no one is absolutely secure against the disease unless he is properly vaccinated that no one should be willing to run the risk of being an exception to the rule. If the public refuses to be convinced of this fact the boards of health very justly take the matter in their own hands and act accordingly.

So far as New York is concerned the system of protection is so perfect that there is never any cause for alarm regarding the possibility of the occurrence of an epidemic. The manner in which the Columbia student was taken in hand and the prompt vaccination of his comrades were almost foregone conclusions. It is such actions as these that tend to assure citizens of their safety at all times and under all circumstances.

In order to offset any possible alarm regarding the spread of the disease in this city it is well to know that only four cases have been reported to the Health Board during the last week, and these are now safely housed in the hospital on North Brother Island. Further than this, all the persons who have been in direct contact with the sick ones have been carefully isolated, even after being vaccinated, and, as usual in such cases, will be in charge of the health officials until all danger of communicating the disease has passed.

All this, however, should not lull the public mind into any sense of false security. Whenever small-pox is present in a community it is always best, in case of any reasonable doubt of absolute protection, to be revaccinated. Especially should this be the case when there has been accidental exposure to infection, as it is apparently not yet definitely settled how long immunity lasts in any given individual.

Regarding vaccination there is no real danger to the patient so long as pure virus is used and proper precautions are taken in introducing it. It is claimed by all medical authorities that it is impossible to transmit by simple vaccine any other than its own specific property. The accidents which are occasionally noted are always due either to spurious virus, to the admixture of infected blood or inflammatory products from another person, or to unclean instruments in the hands of the vaccinator. It is well also to bear in mind that no one can be absolutely safe during an epidemic unless revaccination fails to "take." If he needs the protection at all he needs it badly. In any event, the venture is one of the few things which if it does no good never works any harm. There is certainly, then, no argument against being sure on both sides.—New York Herald.

A Substantial Fact.

W. R. Clark, Pickaway, Virginia says: I have for several years been using Ramons Pills in my family with most satisfactory result, and do not hesitate to recommend them to my customers as superior to any of the various kinds kept in stock. Not only are your pills reliable but Ramons Relief and Nerve and Bone Oil are the most satisfactory remedies I ever handled, and if they were more generally used, they would often make the Doctors bill only 25c instead of $20. These goods need no dusting in my stock because they are constantly coming in and a going out are Trade Winners and Trade Keepers. These good qualities are not a theory but a substantial fact.

Your Cold Cured for 5c.
[illegible]

Trapping a Villian.

A writer on Klondike customs and dangers says, in the Independent, that there is here, as every where, a class of ex-criminals whom the lone voyager must guard against.

Last year, he says, the man who went out with the first mail after the closing of the river fell in with a traveller, hungry and cold, stumbling along the unbroken trail. The messenger took pity on him, shared his food with him, made a fire and warmed his half-frozen body.

All day they traved over the ice, and at night the messenger made the man lie down to sleep, while he watched to scare the wolves away and keep the fire burning. It was long past midnight when he awoke the sleeper and asked him to watch, so that he himself might snatch a nap before setting out again on the long journey.

The messenger was sleeping soundly when he was startled by a blow on the head. He leaped up and was terrified to find that his companion was standing over him, striking at him with an axe.

The messenger dropped to one side and threw off his sleeping-robe and the fur cap that had saved his life. Then the would-be murderer was plainly embarrassed. To be sure he had the axe, but it is not easy to kill a man when he is looking. He hesitated, and in that second the messenger conceived a brilliant thought.

"Ah, poor chap!" said he pathetically, as one conciliates a snarling dog. "Cold and hunger have driven him crazy!"

The man let the axe fall. He almost smiled. It was so well to be out of a nasty job! Yes, he would be crazy. Appearing to forget the matter, he left the axe where it had fallen, and began to rummage in the grub-sack. The dogs awoke, and the two men breakfasted and started long before dawn. That day the messenger carried the axe and insisted that the madman should walk in front.

At the next mounted police station, the man, much to his surprise, was handed over to the officer in charge. Now his efforts to play crazy were a sad failure. He was taken to Dawson, tried and sentenced to fourteen years imprisonment.

Historic Potomac.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad follows the Potomac for a distance of 150 miles. It is a curious fact that every mile of territory from New Nork to Pittsburg travelled over by the Baltimore road was traversed over and over again by George Washington from the time he surveyed a wagon road over the mountains to the end of the Revolution. His connection with the French and Indian war recalls the many names which the Potomac has borne. It is said that the first white settlers at Jamestown gave it the name of "Pawtomax," in consequence of a tribe of Indians of that name living near Harper's Ferry. West of that point it was called by the Indians "Cohongoron" or "Cohongoluta." It was also called "Quirrough" in the grant of the Northern Neck by Charles II of England to the Fairfaxes, but it has not been suggested where he or his petitioners obtained that queer title for it.

Through the evolution of names it became "Potomac." Every school boy knows the important part this famous river plays in history. "First in War and First in Peace," like the illustrious Washington, who lived his life, fought his battles, won his honor, died, and now sleeps on the banks of this famous river, which flows quietly on to the sea past Mt Vernon.

Spreads Like Wildfire.

When things are "the best" they become "the best selling." Abraham Hare, a leading druggist, of Belleville, O., writes: "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitters I have handled in 20 years. You know why? Most diseases begin in disorders of stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels, blood and nerves. Electric Bitters tone up the stomach, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, hence cures multitudes of maladies. It builds up the entire system. established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. TALES OF A TRAVELER.

HOT MILLIONAIRES.

The average citizen goes thro' Hot Springs as quietly as possible, and does not try to match dollars with the guests at the Homestead. We have heard of several of our Pocahontas County citizens who tried to maintain the dignity of the county at the Homestead and after a few agonizing meals pay the price of a steer at the office. There is a tale related to me as a fact that a countryman was charged $5 for a bottle of glycerine at the hotel drugstore, and came away a sadder and a wiser man. The management evidently believes in pleasing the guests and takes this sure means of discouraging the visits of the hoi polloi. A man must have the god essence, money, to be at home there.

Every door opens but to golden keys there, and to the man who reflects that we all will be dead some day—dead and dissolved into the elements—it seems strange that there should be this difference. It is not so strange that the arts should elevate man, but for wealth with which the most common may be endowed should so soon show in every line and feature of the man, passeth understanding

The golf links were dotted with people clubbing balls about. I remember seeing a bad boy hit at a toad with a stick and miss it. That is golf pure and simple. Put on a red coat and get a young darkey to carry your clubs. Hit at the ball with a haughty air and miss it, and the excitement is glorious. I have known of a noted man to stop in his buggy opposite the links and curse the inanity of the whole proceeding. We saw a subserviency in some of the denizens of the Hot Springs occasioned by the proximity of the tin gods that might have belonged to France before the Revolution.

The man in the play said to the girl: "Don't marry the millionaire. He may loose his money and then you will have a decayed remnant on your hands." But we slunk through Hot Springs like a whipped cur for all this philosophy.

We were reminded while there of a tale. There were three wise men of Gotham who went to the Hot Springs to meet a capitalist on important business. Two decided to stop at the Homestead even though it cost them half of their kingdom. The third decided to go to the Hoover House. They transacted their business and came home. The two at the Homestead had their bill settled by the capitalist while the one at the humble hotel paid his own bill. Then the two put this proposition to him: "Is it cheaper to stop at the cheap hotel and pay, or stop at the Homestead and have somebody pay for you."

SIGNS OF "THOU SHALT NOT."

The city signs worry me beyond measure. I will be contentedly walking along on an asphalt pavement thinking how delightful it is to have such pavements when I come beside an ordinary grass plot and see the sign, "Keep off the grass." There immediately comes to me a desire to cut across the grass plot and am only restrained by fear of the consequences.

I go into a gallery and have to leave my umbrella so that I will not point to the pictures. Immediately I have the insane desire to use an umbrella in pointing to a picture.

The street car says, "No Smoking." Immediately my eye catches it I feel like smoking. Another sign: "Don't expectorate in this car," and I feel like spitting.

I saw some particularly aggravating signs at the Zoological Gardens in Washington. The first sign said: "Do not break or carry away any branch of a tree or injure any plant whatever." I feel sure I could have walked through all the timber land in Pocahontas without wanting to injure or destroy a single tree, but now I felt if I were allowed I would go to destroying all the park timber.

Near the Bengal tiger, who is frightful to look at even behind bars of inch iron, is a sign: "Do not annoy the animals." I immediately think that the annoying of animals is a privilege denied me.

Another sign is over the tapir, so called by the way he is finished up. "Do not throw anything in this enclosure, this applies especially to peanuts." I felt like throwing all manner of things to the tapir, but every thing I thought of would have afforded me tame pleasure compared to the great joy of throwing a peanut to the beast.

THE DEWEY CANDIDACY.

The coming out of Dewey for President caused a great stir in Washington and there is no end of conjecture as to what effect it will have. The least thing that it can do for the party is to bring into the convention a very important element of the party, and if the friends of Bryan are not entirely mad they will not be treated contumely.

There is no one responsible for the assertion I am about to make except myself. It is that Bryan himself is at the bottom of Dewey's candidacy, and that they will both be on the ticket. Nearly every successful presidential ticket represented the two elements of the party. The element prevailing nominated their leader for President. It is a safe, sensible thing to do and eminently just and fair. If Bryan's friends are more numerous let him accept the first place to which he is entitled when viewed from a personal standpoint, or the second place if it is more expedient to nominate the man who by his masterly action caused his country to thrill with the knowledge that Americans were more than a match for the European power against which we had declared war. Whose flawless victory made the heart throb and the eyes grow dim as we read.

It is growing more evident every day that as usual the swing of pendulum will bring the Democrats into power this fall.

STREET MEETINGS.

Last Sunday I attended some of the open air meetings on Pennsylvania Avenue. The Salvation Army was as beautiful a little service of its kind as you even saw. The two pure demure little Salvation Army lasses with good sweet faces stood up with a guitar each and sang and played with two men one of whom kept time during the chorus with a big brass drum. One of the girls made a neat address showing that the truly happy earthly life is the life of a Christian. She said, among other things, that wordly people gave up so much for wordly pleasure that it would be a pity for them to have no happiness in life. The girls had sweet refined voices, and I found the Salvation Army people to be very different from what I had imagined them.

Then came a lot of people who belonged to some mission work, and took turns in talking for religion. There was a colored man who was good at expressing himself. He prayed that his words would be "backed up by the Holy Ghost." He reminded his hearers that some time they would "shake hands with time." He said he was the graduate of the High School. Of the lower schooling he had not a day, but he was a "graduate of heaven." An old man eigthy years old told an artless tale. He said a young lady was then staying at his house. The week before she had been in West Virginia. There she had seen the farmers plowing corn (April 1, remember.) Why had those farmers not taken a sickle and sheared the words. Because they wished to sprout and destroy the weeds. This seemed so appealed to me who had left the State the week before and not a blade of grass had started, and where the corn will not be worked until June.

Another meeting gathered together when a preacher, his wife, two boys and a friend drove up in a dilapidated vehicle which had well earned the title of [illegible]. They took out an organ about the size of a [illegible] and put it on the back platform. Then the preacher uttered a few platitudes and the wife played the organ and they all sang. The crowd listened to the preacher respectfully, but were anxious to hear the singing and kept the choir at it until they got tired of singing and hitched up the old 75 cent gray flea-bitten horse and drove away. During the services an old tin can remained on the corner of the platform and men in the crowd stepped up and filled it up with small coin. The appearance of the whole family indicated the decent poverty we so often see in country preacher's families.

The people listened respectfully at all these meetings, and they must do good. People who will not take the trouble to go to church and hear the choir sing over their heads and the preacher preach over their heads will stop long enough opposite these street preachers to hear the news that they are going to die.

IN CONGRESS.

Congressmen have not afforded a very convenient way for their friends to see them in session when they come to Washington. There is no doubt that in any case a Congressman would oblige one of his constituents who penetrates the country as far as Washington with a seat in reserved gallery. All that the constituent would have to do being to send in his card to his Representative. But this is too much red tape for the average constituent, so he makes a break for the galleries. Before the desirable ones is stationed a watchdog who waves you on. The public be damned, is evidently a favorite Congressional maxim. Finally you find a gallery into which you may enter and sit uncomfortably crowded, and see the other galleries empty. The Washington people organize the Congressmen even into shutting the people from the country at large out of the galleries.

Having gained a view of the hall the gallery god is before a sea of upturned desks. We have heard that Congress is a disorderly body. It may be whenever they can muster enough men for a fight, but we have never seen either hall when it did not look like a Marlinton church during meeting. A Congressman only speaks that his words may be read.

The first day they were eulogizing Bland to about a hundred in the gallaries and two or three on the floor. We never saw anything equal these memorial services, for apathy. Champ Clark was the speaker.

The next time I ventured into the kennel where our Representatives wish you to sit, a member from Tennessee was giving President McKinley hail columbia for not giving the Porto Rico people free trade. The Representatives are not a distinguished looking lot. They are about as common in Washington as railroad hands in Marlinton.

On the other hand the United States Senators look like they had sense enough to teach school, Senator Elkins is one of the brightest looking men in the Senate. Senator Scott is a good looking man, but there is an indescribable difference in his appearance to the other members of that august body. Senator Jones of Arkansas is a sensible looking man, and Senator Danial, of Virginia, looks the rare genius that he is.

The Senate has been discussing for several days the advisability of giving the Roman Catholic schools for the education of Indian children an appropriation. The church does this as missionary work, and will continue to do so whether they receive the government money or not. Senators Lodge of Massachusetts and Gallinger of New Hampshire and others claimed that money should not be appropriated to sectarian schools. Senators Vest of Missouri, and Jones of Arkansas, and others were in favor of paying the church schools, because the church did it better and for less than the government schools themselves.

I listened to Congress in both houses for many hours, but heard nothing startling or new. You can hear just as good speaking any day at our circuit court when it is in session.

The public does not seem very welcome about the Capitol. The people about the nation's court-house seem to object to people putting country questions to them such as, "Where is the elevator?" or, "Where is the stairway?"

Those are things they should know, even as a college education should teach the graduate where the axe lies hid when he comes home.

The war with the Boers is stirring up the British poets to praiseworthy efforts. Swinburne, fired by Robert's victory on the anniversary of Majuba Hill, hails, in the London Times,

> ....the turning tide
> That sets once more our trust in freedom free,
> That leaves a ruthless and a truthless foe,
> And all base hopes that hailed his cause, laid low,
> And England's name a light on land and sea.

"Our trust in freedom!" That England tends nowadays to set up a freedom trust is what her critics complain of. His own words seem to smile at Mr Swinburne.

On the other side two little verses by William Watson published it does not appear where, are said to have provoked torrents of indignation. Relating how the winds of Heaven fought for England "when lofty Spain came towering up the seas," he says:

> Ah! not to-day is nature on our side;
> The mountains and the rivers are our foe;
> And nature with the heart of man allied
> Is hard to overthrow.

He is not very violent, and yet, judging from the reported indignation, he bites. Meanwhile Alfred Austin seems to be under restraint and the cable as yet brings nothing from Kipling, who, after all, does not pride himself on timeliness.—Harper's Weekly.

What is the American sentiment about the recent British successes in South Africa? We read that Continental Europe groans and gnashes its teeth over every Boer set-back. It is by no means so here. Our sympathy with the Boers has grown stronger if any thing as their best qualities have come more into view, but it has not reached the length of inspiring any general grief at British victories. The most it has accomplished has been to make the majority of us rather grimly and sarcastically neutral in a war which interests us profoundly, but for which we feel a powerful dislike. British victories are popular, rather than otherwise, because they hasten a conclusion which all along has seemed inevitable. We want the only end that can come as soon as possible, and then we want to see what next—whether England has laid the foundations of another Ireland in South Africa; what will happen to the South African colonials who joined the Boers; whether we shall see a Boer emigration—possibly to this country; whether the redoubtable Kruger family will turn its assets into cash and build a house in Fifth Avenue next to Mr Carnegie's! We shall also follow closely the political consequences of the war England. Somethings will happen of course. They will hang more gaudy chains on the neck of the gallant "Bobs," and doubtless make him a duke; all the other head soldier men will be duly advanced and decorated; but the government that gave them their opportunity—how will that fare? We shall see, and see the quicker the sooner Pretoria falls. The crop bids fair to be got in, but the quality and extent of it will still be matters that will deserve and receive our highly intelligent attention.—Harper's Weekly.

Delegate Convention, May 16: Dr J. W. Price, Jasper Auldridge, John Waugh.

Huntersville District:

State Convention, Brown Moore, Dr George M. Jordan, H. Lee White.

Congressional, D. A. Fisher, Howard Barlow, Price Moore.

Senatorial, George Ginger, J. A. Moore, G. M. Jordon.

Levels District:

Delegate Convention: R. W. Hill, Dr F. T. McClintic, J. W. Beard, E. I. Holt.

State Convention: Dr McNeel, Forest Hill, E. I. Holt, J. W. Beard, Dr McClintic, T. A. Bruffey.

Congressional: Preston Dunlap, S. J. Payne, R. M. Beard, C. M. Wallace, G. R. Curry, and C. B. Grimes.

Senatorial: S. W. Hill, James Haltz, M. J. McNeel, R. M. Beard, W. W. Ruckman, and N. J Brown.

Green Bank District:

State Convention: H. M. Moore, Dr C. L. Austin, W. J. Yeager, B. F. McElwee, S. B. Hannah, R. B. Kerr.

Congressional: S. B. Hannah, Samuel Sheets, C. A. Lightner, Dr C. L. Austin, J. S. Warwick, A. M. Oliver.

Senatorial: Same as Congressional Convention.

A new executive committee was elected as follows:

Green Bank: Dr C. L. Austin, B. F. McElwee, C. A. Lightner.

Huntersville: J. A. Moore, H. L. White, E. A. Friel.

Edray: H. A. Yeager, John Waugh, Andrew Price.

Levels: E. I. Holt, Dr F. T. McClintic, G. R. Curry.

On motion of L. M. McClintic, E I Holt was elected county chairman. On motion of Dr F. T. McClintic, Andrew Price was elected secretary of the committee.

Dr C. L. Austin introduced the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, the Democrats of Pocahontas County recognize in our Representative in Congress, Honorable David E. Johnston, an able and efficient Representative, and endorse him for a second term and renomination, provided he stands for the same.

And whereas, we with equal confidence endorse Honorable Jno. A. Preston of Greenbrier County, as a man of high integrity and ability, a sterling Democrat, and eminently fitted to represent this District in Congress.

Therefore be it resolved, that in the event the Honorable David E. Johnstone is not a candidate for renomination, we hereby instruct our delegates, this day appointed, to the Congressional Convention which meets at Montgomery on the 11th day of July, 1900, to cast the solid vote of this county in said Convention for Honorable John A. Preston, and use all honorable means to secure his nomination.

E. I. Holt introduced the following resolution which was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, the Democrats of this county recognize in the Honorable J. H. Miller an able and aggressive Democrat, it is hereby resolved that the delegates from this county to the State Convention be and are hereby instructed to cast the vote of said county solidly for, and use all honorable means to secure the nomination of the said J. H. Miller for Auditor at the next State Convention.

On motion of Dr J. P. Mooman, the convention adjourned.

The report death of Mr. D. A. A. Keyser, of Covington, Va., who left two years ago with two others for the Klondike gold-fields, has been corroborated by a letter recently received by J. D. Leighton, Secretary of the Covington Masonic Lodge, from F. G. Kimball, of St. Michaels, Alaska, evidently himself a Mason. The letter is dated Dec. 30, 1899, and is as follows:

Dear Sir and Bro.:—I am informed the body of a man supposed from papers on his person to be D. A. A. Keyser, of Covington, Va., was found by some prospectors about 60 miles up the Iglootulik river which flows into the head of Norton Bay, about 75 milet from head. The body was found in a cabin wrapped in a robe. A very small amount of provisions were found in the cabin.

I learned these facts from one of the party who had found the body and buried it. The papers among which was a diary were in the hands of another of the party whom I did not see. My informant states that Keyser had written in his diary that his partner (named Scott had quarrelled with him and was leaving him while he was sick.

My informant also said that Keyser was a Mason and was from Covington, Va.

This man also stoted that a man nomee Wm. W. Wright was laying dead on a sled farther down the river and he is supposed to have been murdered.

There is a deputy U. S. Marshal up there now investigating the matter and he will procure Keyser paper and take care of them.

Fraternally yours,
F. G. KIMBALL.

Biggle Berry Book, being No. 2 of The Biggle Books is all about berries. A whole encyclopaedia of berry lore, boiled down after the manner of the Farm Journal. Tells about varieties, about planting, growing, mulching, cultivating, picking and marketing. It gives practical pointers from the pens of scores of leading berry growers from all parts of the country who have contributed to its colums. It has colored representations of berries true to size and color, thirty-three portraits of practical berrymen, and thirty-five other illustrations, handsomely bound in cloth. The price is fifty cents by mail; address the publishers Wilmer Atkinson Co., Philadelphia.

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern which is not afraid to be generous. The proprietors of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption Coughs and Colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles and have the satisfaction of knowing it has cured thousands of hopeless cases Asthma Bronchitis, La Grippe and all Throat, Chest and Lung diseases are surely cured by it.

Trial bottles free at Harry R. Rohde Marlinton; N. J. Brown, Mill Point; E. L. Beard & Co., Academy; H. N. Hannah, Renick's Valley; S. F. Myles, Falling Springs, W. Va.

Among the illustrations in that excellent work, the Horse Book written by Judge Biggle, is General George Washington's stable at Mt. Vernon. The chapter on stables contains many helpful hints, and has the plans and elevations of an attractive village stable. The price is 50 cents, by mail; address publishers, Wilmer Atkinson Co., Philadelphia.

ANDREW PRICE, - - - EDITOR.

MARLINTON, THURS. APR. 12, 1900

A CARD FROM H. A. YEAGER.

Seeing that my name would be used at the coming primary election, and yielding to the solicitation of friends throughout the county, I have decided to become a candidate to represent Pocahontas County in the next House of Delegates of West Virginia.

In the limited time between this and the day of the primary election, I will not be able to make a personal canvass to see the voters of the county.

My position on the issues of the day is too well known to need discussion.

If the people honor me by election to this responsible position, I will try to discharge my duty faithfully.

I am not now, nor will I be, pledged to the support of any man or measure; but if elected will try to carry out the wishes of my constituents in all questions coming before the Legislature.

I have been interrogated as to my position on the settlement of the so called antebellum public debt of West Virginia.

I have always been and am now opposed to any agitation or opening up of that question by the Legislature; believing that this State now occupies a safe and honorable position on that question.

Respectfully, your obedient servant. H. A. YEAGER.

We are pleased to announce in this issue Honorable H. A. Yeager as a candidate for the House of Delegates. Mr Yeager has served the county before in this capacity, and is an acceptable man for another term with many; as is well proven by the pressure exerted at this date to bring him before the people so short a time before the primary election.

The "average" voter takes little interest in an election "contest" where a single candidate does the running and wins out, be he ever so safe. It looks too much like a "trust" to please some people. The more candidates the merrier the election!

The Marlinton Herald announces that for one week it will run the Herald as the [illegible] would run it. Communications [illegible] nature not [illegible] and it [illegible] to bring about an upheaval in county politics.

A Letter From Weston.

Editor Times:

I will send you a few more items from Weston and vicinity that may be of interest to some reader of the Pocahontas Times.

The weather has been gloomy for a few days, but this morning the sun is shining bright and warm again.

Precautionary flags signaling the presence of small-pox have been lowered and the quarantine conditionally raised.

No visitors were permitted to go into the hospital until recently.

Mrs Rader, who has been a patient in the Asylum, has gotten well and gone to her home in Weston. I hope she will continue well.

Doctor W. E. Stathers, Superintendent of the Hospital, has been away at Wheeling for a few days. He will return this evening.

Doctor Stathers sent 11 patients to their homes this week. I think Doctor Stathers a fine gentleman; he is so good and kind to all.

We wish the Epworth League at Mill Point much success. May the good work go on.

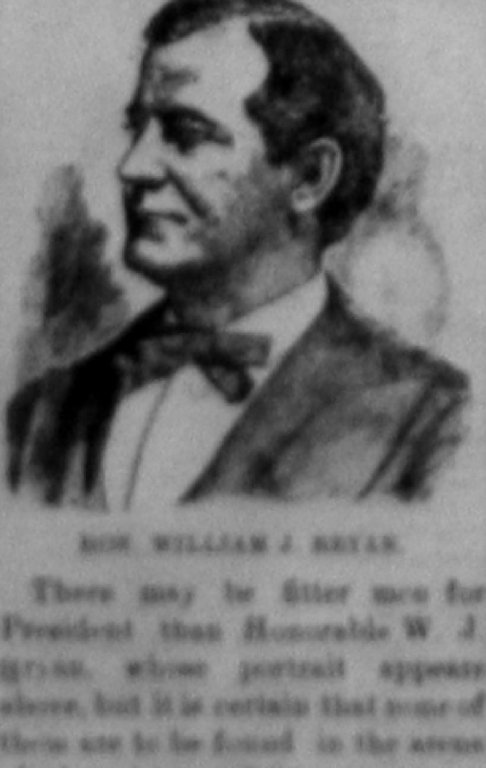
There will be a ball here some time after Easter.

A JOKE ON UNCLE SAM.

A cannon which was captured by the United States soldiers at Manilla was borrowed from the government, and was on exhibition at Clarksburg, not far from the depot. Some unknown party loaded it with paper and rammed it down with a cedar tree. At one o'clock Tuesday morning it was discharged. So loud was the report that the shock shivered the last window in a dwelling near by, and shattered several windows in the college building, a quarter of a mile distant. The running gear of the cannon was broken and the cannon itself swapped ends. $700 reward was offered for the party who played the joke.

I expect to return to my home in Pocahontas soon if nothing happens. I will be so glad to meet my loved ones once more at home.

Written by BESSIE SHAFFER.



HON. WILLIAM J. BRYAN.

There may be fitter men for President than Honorable W. J. Bryan, whose portrait appears above, but it is certain that none of them are to be found in the arena of American politics at present. We believe Mr Bryan to be sound in principle and motive and, above all, fearless in action, nor will he be dominated by any body of men [illegible] own interest [illegible] the Presidency. If Mr Bryan [illegible] the Democratic nomination, and [illegible] victory [illegible] will [illegible] be given him by the people. [illegible] brought about now!

Local Events.

Remember that the Peerless Art Gallary is just South of Golden's Store.

Otis Warwick was in Marlinton Saturday looking for a residence.

Mrs Caroline Price of Warm Springs was at her mother's near Edray last week.

Mrs Woods Gum and son Cecil Gum have returned from a visit to Highland county.

W. A. Bratton has the bad luck to be laid up with grip, right in the height of the race for the Prosecuting Attorney's office.

For fine uptodate clothing, hats, caps, shoes, and furnishing goods for men, boys, or children, telephone or write to the Greenbrier Clothing House, Lewisburg, W. Va.

Colonel Turk writes a long letter from Marlinton to the Spectator about the railroad and the wonderful resources of the region contiguous to it for minerals and timber.

B. F. Hamilton of Linwood is moving to the building recently occupied by W. W. Tyree, and soon will be ready for business. He will visit Baltimore this week to buy goods.

NOTICE—This may be your last chance to secure fine photographs at home; we can not remain always. An opportunity is extended for three weeks—a later date may be too late.

Respectfully,

The postal Department was certainly laboring under a misapprehension when it discontinued the mail route leading up Knapp's Creek from Driscol to Frost and thence to Highland, as was done last week, also discontinuing the offices at Frost and Sunset. The [illegible] of these offices are [illegible] on [illegible] eleven miles away for mail facilities, and [illegible] in this populous section are [illegible] than a post office. It is not known what induced the Department to make the [illegible] arrangement. Vigorous protest is being made and it is expected that the route and postoffices at these two points will be re-established without delay.

J. D. Pullin has so far convalesced as to be out of doors these pleasant days.

Mrs Flora Bester, a sister of S. L. Brown of this place, and son Odin B. Bester, are in Marlinton.

The first warm rains of the season fell on Tuesday, putting out great forest fires which had broken out, and giving the grass a start.

Tyree's was the first store in town to stock up with new goods this spring. He makes a specialty of fruits, vegetables, meats, and produce, and his present stock is choice and complete.

The last snow visible from Marlinton disappeared this week. A snow bank forms at the 'low place' on Buck's Mountain every winter, where the constant winds sweep over the divide. A large drift has been visible there for weeks.

E. I. Renick, an eminent New York lawyer and nephew of B. F. Renick of this county, died in Paris last week, whither he had gone to look after the complicated affairs of Bonny Castelaine, a titled son-in-law of the late Jay Gould.

Died, in Chicago April 10th, of an operation for appendicitis, T. C. Hannah, of the grain brokerage firm of Carrington, Hannah & Co. Mr Hannah was a brother of S. B. Hannah of Green Bank, and of Mrs Dr Barringer of Charlottesville, Va.

The farmers are busy in plowing, fence repairing, and burning rubbish. The late Dr Wallace said that he generally observed that whenever such spring work began the epidemics seemed to vanish like magic and it soon became distressingly healthy,—or words to that effect.

Teachers and pupils of the Lewisburg Female Institute making a party of thirty persons, went on an excursion last week. Misses Willie, Marjorie, and Wawa Rucker, Mary McLaughlin, and Anna Price were among the excursionists. Rev Telford had the party in charge. They started Wednesday and returned Saturday.

Notice to the Greenbrier Alumnae Association:

The committee on arrangements for the annual meeting and banquet of the Greenbrier Alumnæ Association, on May 25th, would like to know how many expect to attend from Pocahontas. Please send names to Miss Janie Stuart Price, Lewisburg, W. Va., before May 18th, so arrangements may be made for their entertainment.

Smallpox Again.

A slight smallpox sensation was raised in this place Sunday. That morning a pilgrim arrived direct from Clifton Forge, Va., and engaged board with E. F. McLaughlin. He complained of feeling ill and that evening an eruption broke out over his body. He cheerfully confessed to having been exposed to smallpox and said that he undoubtedly had the disease. Dr Cunningham was summoned and he had the man, who was a foreign looking individual, removed to the pest house on the outskirts of the town, on suspicion.

Sunday night he disappeared from the pest-house and has not been seen since.

GLADE HILL.

Fine weather, but the grass is not growing much.

C. W. Dilley made a flying trip to Highland last week.

Food is getting very scarce.

Crazy Bill passed here one day last week.

E. N. Moore has had a bad case of grippe. He was unable to be out among the people for some time, but we think he is still in the ring.

H. F. Arbogast took a trip to Wanless recently. He says it is a very fascinating place.

Several men passed here enroute for the railroad, last week.

Some candidate for Sheriff should have George Hoover for Deputy. They would be almost sure of election, as George's whiskers are very taking.

John A. Warwick, of Bath, was in this part last week.

Plowing is the order of the day. Most of the people have finished sowing oats and are getting ready for corn planting.

Most of the people in this community have the grip.

The election of county officers is causing more excitement than the Spanish American war.

Uncle Sam has been calling on a few people in this county lately. He merely wants to teach them a lesson.

SAN LAAN.

Breaks the Record.

Mr Isaac Hoover, of Lilly, Rockingham County, Va., writes us as follows, in regard to his season's product of maple sugar. The late season in this county was rather unfavorable for sugar making, and no single camp has been reported producing as much as a thousand pounds. If we remember correctly, a Mr McMillion of Lobelia, this county, produced sugar and syrup considerably in excess of this amount, during the season of 1898. However in the total amount of sugar produced, we think Pocahontas is entitled to the name of the "sugar county" of the State.

Following is the letter:

I saw in your last issue that sugar making is the order of the day. I returned home from my sugar camp in Skidmore's Fork, April 7th, with 1014 pounds of maple sugar and 50 gallons of syrup. You will please ask the question if any one camp in Pocahontas County has made more than that. There were only four of us engaged in making it, two men and two women. I broke the record on the sugar business in this locality.

Yours, ISAAC HOOVER.

A War Incident.

Mrs Anthony Kincaid, of Marlinton, received a clock from the estate of her father, George Brown of Brownstown, Greenbrier County, which has been running forty years, and is still in excellent order. A pistol bullet embedded in the base of the clock recalls the following incident of guerilla warfare in this section.

One night in May, 1862, a detachment of Federal troops, belonging to Averill's command stationed at Beverly, were quartered in the house and barn. That night a company of the Greenbrier Cavalry rode up to the house and demanded their surrender. Upon a refusal being given firing commenced through the windows and doors which were soon completely demolished.

When the Yankees retreated three dead and eight severely wounded were found in the one room, and it was then that the clock was struck by a pistol ball. Later the Yankees returned and taking nearly all the bedding in the house, loaded their dead and wounded on wagons and transported them to Beverly, passing this place enroute. Mrs Kincaid was then a young girl and remembers very well the terrible affair.

GREEN BANK.

And still it snows.

W. A. Bratton, of Marlinton, was in this vicinity last week, laying up his fences.

T. S. McNeel was around last Friday looking up his interests in this part of the county.

Earle Arbogast has rented and moved into the Patterson property.

The Arborvale correspondent will note that the word Lord is mentioned 31 times in the Bible and perhaps oftener.

Dr J. P. Modmau is on the sick-list.

Sandy Sutton is dangerously ill with typhoid fever at Horton.

R. L. Brown is doing some repairing on J. H. Curry's house.

John White passed through town last Saturday.

A. M. Oliver has moved to the Oliver farm. We are glad to see him back.

J. W. Yeager was in town Saturday.

Dr L. L. Little has moved to the H. A. Yeager property. His office is opposite the post office and the Curry shoe shop.

Cards are out for the marriage of G. L. Clark and Miss Bertie Beard and Irb Beard and Miss Cordie Wooddell, April 18, 1900, at 11 a. m.

Now you are married you must obey,
You must be true in all you say,
You must be kind, you must be good,
And help your wife to chop the wood.

Died, April 15, 1900, at her home two miles from town, Mrs Louisa Sheets, wife of W. R. Sheets, of heart trouble and pneumonia. A husband and eight children are left to mourn her loss. Peace to her ashes.

Give us J. W. Gillespie for Justice in this District, and Lanty Wooddell for Constable, and Ellis Curry Commissioner of the Board of Education, and Honorable H. A. Yeager for House of Delegates and M. J. McNeel Commissioner County Court, and, and, and—

There is a great deal of sickness in this part of the county, and more deaths than I ever knew in the same length of time. The suffering has been very severe among our people with ... measles, and pneumonia.

There will be (D. V.) preaching at this place on April 22 at 11 a. m. If no preaching, there will be prayer meeting. Sunday school every Sunday morning at 9 a. m. We hope to see every body out.

BUCKEYE.

The railroad is still being pushed. The blasting has for a few days been unusually heavy. T. M. A. and Lewis F. have flew to the thickets and will not return until the blasting is over. Their nerve was shattered during the Civil War.

The Sabbath school has been organized at Bethel and the prospect is the school will be interesting. We hope it will result in much good being accomplished. Prof Auldridge is Superintendant and Theology Expounder.

M. Dormon has sold his farm to N. C. Rodgers, of Jacox. Mr Dorman will move soon and in him we loose an honest, useful citizen, and my! but the boys look sorrowful! We welcome Mr Rodgers and hope he will be pleased with his new home.

Mr Cleek, Jr., of Mill Point, was in this part Sunday. The story is going that he went home Monday or late Sunday.

Mrs J. G. McNeill is very sick. We hope she may soon be blessed with good health.

Among the glad faces infesting the town, there is none more full and fair than that of Buckeye's "Silly Sam." He is a genial lighthearted youngster and takes his turn with the best of them.

Quite a congregation came out to hear Brother Price Sunday evening but he did not appear. We have come to regard a sermon from him as being a literary luxury, and are always glad to have him preach for us.

W'ats the matter wif Doctor Dave? Oh, he's all right, and so is REDDY.

WANLESS.

A little colder and some snow.

Every body out of hay.

Lots of grip, but no measles.

Dr Hunter Moomau passed our town enroute for John Cassel's. Mr and Mrs Cassel are both sick.

W. A. Bratton passed by here going to the sale on the 14th. Mr Bratton will get there this time, and E. N. Moore will be our Sheriff.

We want Hon. H. A. Yeager for Representative.

There is no doubt about Joe Buzzard and his mule getting there.

Give us men—sound men, who will not allow whiskey shops along the public road—to fill our county offices. Mr Prosecuting Attorney, send the Sheriff and arrest and send them to jail if they can't give bail. We want this violation broken up.

Singing at Wanless by A. M. Oliver was largely attended Sunday, but some rowdies came from the saloon and set the thing afire.

J. H. Madagan & Co., contractors, are making good headway with the grade. They will finish their section soon.

J. H. Galford, who has recently recovered from his sixth attack of pneumonia, rolled three acres of new ground Tuesday.

W. L. Kesler is farming C. U. Wanless's land.

A. S. Gillespie and wife are visiting Mrs Margaret Cassell, who is sick. NOAH.

BUCKEYE.

Farmers are busy plowing and preparing to put out big crops.

The sick of this vicinity are getting well.

Aaron Kellison and family have moved to Elkins.

N. Rodgers, of Jacox, has bought the Dorman farm. We are sorry to see Mr Dorman's leave this part as they were good neighbors.

James I. Beverage, who has been dangerously sick at Allan Kennison's, was able to come home last week.

Rev Callison will preach at the upper Church on the 5th Sunday in this month.

Owen Kellison went to camp this week.

Walter Cleek was in part last Sunday.

MRS WILLIAM B. HANNAH.

Died, on the morning of April 7 Mrs William B. Hannah, after an illness of a few weeks, aged about 80 years. Her remains were buried in the Cloonan graveyard; funeral services conducted by Rev Atkinson.

Her maiden name was Rhinehart. She leaves a husband and four children: James, near Marlinton; Jenis, near Clover Lick; Burley, at Locust; Mrs Kenny Kennison, of Buckeye. She has been a member of the M. E. Church for a number of years and was ready for the summons.

DUNMORE.

A fine shower on grass, grain and and candidates.

Sunday school will be organized at Baxter church Sunday April 22. Let all come out.

The sick are not improving much. Jacob K. Taylor is quite ill at this time. His sons, George, Dan, Ed, and Jacob and his daughter Mrs Zin, are all with him.

Mrs William R. Sheets died at her home Sunday morning. Mrs Sheets was a good woman and will be missed.

Bratton and McNeel are in the Green Bank district.

Prof J. B. White went to the upper end of the county Sathrday to fish.

Dr Jordan was called Saturday night to see Mrs Kelley at the head of the county, 34 miles from Frost.

Fifty Italians came in Sunday.

The people of the Green Bank district do not want any redistricting in our district. It is as good as Edray, and will be better when we get a railroad.

Still they move. William Siple, William Gragg, Charles Bush all moved last week.

Mrs Andrew Cleek is out on a visit.

A Mr Lowe of the State of Virginia and County of Bath, and Miss Lou Carpenter of the State of West Virginia and County of Pocahontas, were married on the 11th inst.

Mr Lanty Herold and lady were in town Monday.

Attorney Yeager was in town Sunday.

If in need of monuments, tombstones, coffins, large or small, plain or covered, call on Swecker, Dunmore. All furnished on short notice.

There will be a big Auction at Arbovale Saturday, April 21; also some big law suits. If you are looking for bargains, come in.

Maj. Mason is back from the drive.

The McClure sale went off in good shape.

R. L. Nottingham and C. D. Buzzard made a flying trip to Marlinton Tuesday.

Post office matters have gotten badly mixed about Frost. Mark Hannah will have to be sent for.

Boys, if you all want an early spring, just sit down on the business end of a tack and you'll have it. MR POOH.

BROWNSBURG,

(In Colored Circles.)

The weather is fine at this writing and grass is growing fine.

The sick are improving. Mrs Amy Wheeler is quite unwell at this writing.

G. W. Wheeler is on the sick-list.

The people of this place spent a happy Easter. Bev J. M. Boggs delivered a good and Interesting sermon on Sunday last.

There will be preaching here on the 22d by Rev William Williamson. Let everybody attend.

Conaway Wilson has returned from a visit among his friends in Bath County.

Miss Kimbrough Hill spent Easter at home.

Miss Susie Truss of Virginia is visiting her friends and relatives in this part.

Moffet Wheeler of the Hot Springs is here looking after a job.

Uncle Harry McDowell is off to Ronceverte.

Frank Jackson of Academy was at home Easter.

GOOD LUCK.

The latest advices from the South African war represent the English armies much embarrassed for want of horses for cavalry and mounted infantry, and the lack of suitable clothing for the troops. It is to be remembered it is now winter in that country, its climate just the reverse of ours. Baden-Powell is reported dead and Mafeking in serious straits.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

is a food medicine for the baby that is thin and not well nourished and for the mother whose milk does not nourish the baby.

It is equally good for the boy or girl who is thin and pale and not well nourished by their food; also for the anæmic or consumptive adult that is losing flesh and strength.

In fact, for all conditions of wasting, it is the food medicine that will nourish and build up the body and give new life and energy when all other means fail.

Should be taken in summer as well as winter.

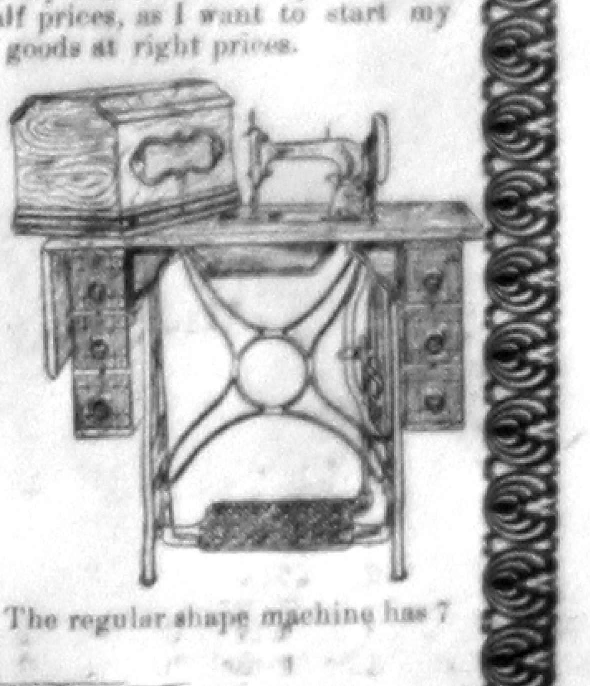
IT IS LIKE BUILDING A HOUSE WITH BLOCKS.

To try to establish a business by selling poor goods at low prices.

I am not going to build my business that way, but will sell you good goods at half prices, as I want to start my spring business with new goods at right prices.



I will offer you for the next ten days, or until I come back from market, High Arm Singer Sewing Machines—they are perfect, light running—just as good as the machine your neighbor has paid 65 dollars; you can have your choice—the drop head or regulr kind $22.90.

Every machine is warranted for ten years. All attachments free. The regular price is $30 00. The regular shape machine has 7 drawers nicely finished.

WANTED—50 Boys, between 3 and 18 years of age, to fill good positions in my wear-proof boys suits. Wil make you following low prices:

Boys Suits, gray Cassimer, blue flannel, blach cheviot, &c, worth from $1.50 to $3.00, you can have them from 68c to one dollar and 68c.

All my last season's Men's fancy negligee shirts that were 50c, 75c, and one dollar each, will close out from 30c to 47c each.

These good are just as good styles as I will have later, but I wish to start the spring season with a clean stock.

One dollar will have the purchasing power of two dollars to buy my wrappers. The prices run from 75c to $1.25. You can have them from 37 1-2c to 73c.

Thanking you for past favors, I hope you will continue your patronage in the future. Yours for bargains now and a nice clean spring stock soon,

SEVEN RUNNING SORES CURED
—BY—
Johnston's Sarsaparilla
QUART BOTTLES.
THE GREAT SPRING MEDICINE.

JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA as a Blood Food and Nerve Energizer, is the greatest SPRING MEDICINE ever discovered. It comes as a rich blessing from heaven to the "worn out," the run down, the overworked and debilitated. That "tired feeling," those "sinking spells," the languor and despondency which arise from badly nourished nerves, from thin, vitiated blood and an underfed body, vanish as if by a magic spell. The weariness, lassitude and nervous prostration which accompany the spring-time and the heat of summer, are conquered and banished at once. For every form of neurasthenia, and all ailments of the brain and nerve, insomnia hysteria and nervousness generally, it is almost a specific. It furnishes the very elements to rebuild worn-out nerve tissues. It feeds brain, nerve centers and nerves, calming and equalizing their action; it makes rich, red, honest blood. Newness of life, new hope, new strength follow its faithful use. It makes the weak strong, and the old young again.

It was the antiquated (but now happily exploded) method in the good old times, to treat Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Cancer and other troublesome disorders arising from BLOOD TAINT with powerful alteratives, such as mercury, arsenic and other mineral agents. It was expected by this treatment that the poison could be killed while the blood was left to course through its channels holding in its circulation the specific germs of the disease. But in this way, every part of the body became more or less diseased. Nothing can be more terrible than a horribly destructive blood taint. It not only attacks virulently the different structures of the body, but many times the bones are honey-combed and destroyed. It often seeks out the nerves and spinal cord, and again it will bring decay and death to some vital organ, as the kidneys, liver or stomach. There is only one scientific method for the cure of blood taint. That is, PURIFICATION! Every particle of the blood must be removed through the excretory channels, the lungs, kidneys, bowels, liver and skin. "First pure, then peaceable." The great restorative, reconstructive and vitalizer of the blood, JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA, not only radically and exhaustively removes the taint, but also removes all mercury, calomel and other minerals, and fills the veins and arteries with the ruby, glowing current of vitality. "The blood is the life." Good health means pure blood. The old and reliable remedy, JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA, is universally regarded as the greatest Blood Purifier ever discovered. This fact is now established beyond question or cavil.

BLOOD POISON CURED BY JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA.

Williams, Davis, Brooks & Co., Detroit:

Gentlemen:—In April last I began using JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA for Blood Poison, caused by an amputation of one of my arms. I had SEVEN RUNNING SORES on my legs. I used two bottles and was entirely cured. I know it is what cured me. Yours truly, G. W. LUTHER.

THROUGH A WOMAN'S EYES

Mrs. Jewell's Opinion of the South African Situation.

NURSED JAMESON'S MEN

She Was for Several Years a Resident of the Transvaal, Although an American—Personality of the Boers—The Jameson Expedition.

In considering the present South African War, says Mrs. Fletcher Webster Jewell, in the New York Herald, I involuntarily look at the situation through a woman's eyes, and, passing the causes, think first of the consequences. The first picture that comes to me, therefore, instead of being one of glory and fame as the result of the different battles, is of carnage and death, of widows and of orphans. This comes home all the more keenly because I happened to be a spectator of some of the exciting scenes in and about Johannesburg during the latter part of 1895 and the early part of 1896, when Dr. Jameson made his celebrated raid, and also, to a slight degree, an actor in the epilogue of that drama, while assisting in nursing the wounded in that memorable fight, after they had been taken to the little hospital at Krugersdorp.

(Mrs. Fletcher Webster Jewell).

Without presuming to account myself either a civic politician or a military tactician, I have always felt that that wild ride of Jameson and his men was simply a sort of a preliminary skirmish of a greater battle.

Had he succeeded in reaching Johannesburg, instead of being captured within eighteen miles of that place, I believe that the history which is being written now would have been recorded then. With Jamerson as the leader, and his little band of troopers as the nucleus around which the Outlanders might rally, I cannot help thinking that, in the then comparatively unprepared state of the Boers, the contest would have been short and decisive, and that long before this time the South African Republic would have been added to the dominion of Great Britain. But he failed, as all the world now knows, on the very threshold of success, and in the intervening years the Boers, evidently feeling that a great contest was inevitable, have been steadily preparing themselves.

Knowing the country in which the war is being waged, and knowing personally many engaged on either side, I have followed the reports of the fight with an intense interest. I need not expatiate on the discipline and courage of the English soldiers. These are matters of common knowledge. But knowing also the obstinate determination of the Boers and their undying hatred of the English, I do not regard the proclamations of Kruger and Joubert as mere idle words. I know that these are shrewd men, obstinate men and brave men, and to me every word they have uttered rings with a literal meaning.

Knowing the Boer character and the British character, I do not think that any one country is large enough to hold these two types in amicable relationship, especially with the English as the dominant governing race. The ancestors of these Boers, as well as some of those at present engaged on the Boer side, deliberately "trekked" to the north in order to establish a government of their own.

They are fighting now in the last ditch, so to speak. There is no possibility of further retreat. The English surround them on the north, west and south. To the eastward of the Transvaal the Portuguese hold all the territory.

I have always resented the extreme criticism, particularly in this country, of Jameson and his men. Whatever may have been the political purpose of that expedition, the fact that they were responding to an urgent appeal of the committee in Johannesburg, asking their assistance in behalf of the women and children of that place, places them in my eyes as gallant men who were willing to risk their lives in a desperate effort in what must have seemed to them a great cause.

It is impossible for me to regard the thirty-four wounded Englishmen whom I came to know intimately in that improvised hospital in the dry goods store in Krugersdorp as "murderers," "land pirates" and "robbers." Such epithets do not befit men who so bravely faced death in the fight and in the hospital, and the possibilities of death as filibusters even after passing through these other ordeals.

And, in the same breath, speaking as an American woman, and, therefore, to a certain extent, as a neutral, I feel that in common justice I ought to say a word for the bravery of the four Boers in that same hospital, and for the unremitting care by their countrymen, of their wounded opponents.

As I recall some of my experiences during my brief stay in that hospital I find myself wondering how the Boer wounded are being treated during the present fight. The Boer hatred of the English was so intense that they would not let an English doctor treat any of their sufferers. And as I recollect my dismay at seeing a Boer woman insisting on feeding her son, who had been shot through the lungs, with a thick, heavy soup and hard boiled eggs, I involuntarily speculate as to whether the same system of diet is being maintained in their hospitals now. Such diet would have killed almost any other class of wounded men, but they seemed to flourish on it.

THESE photogravures represent paintings that have been sold for thousands of dollars, and others that are fresh from the artists' brush. They would sell rapidly at any art store at $5 each, but they can be purchased only from us, as we absolutely control the copyrights.

The Masterpieces of twenty-five of our Greatest American Artists now for the first time available in a single collection

Beautify Your Home

This collection of paintings, varied in style and color-tone, will superbly adorn any home. They are 18 x 24 inches in size, are placed in a beautiful portfolio, and so arranged that they can be conveniently removed for framing.

An Art Educator

This magnificent collection will at once stimulate and cultivate a desire for the artistic. A complete description accompanies each painting, also a portrait and biographical sketch of the artist, an interesting account of his early studies, how he was led to take up art as a profession, in what schools and under what masters he received his instruction. It describes his trips and sojourns abroad, where and when his paintings were first exhibited, and the honors they received both in Europe and America. The titles of the artist's most notable paintings are also given, and where they are now. All this information is not only interesting, but exzeedingly instructive.

SPECIAL PROPOSITION

To those who write at once we will send one of our original specimen sets by express, being the first sharp, clear impressions from the fresh, new plates. The price will be less than one-third their real value, and the payments easy, with the privilege of return if not satisfactory. Clip this special proposition and send with your letter.

Rich and Poor.

Do those who denounce the rich merely for the possession of riches wish us to assume that ability should be given other reward? Shall the capable rise to the top or the incapable? Should the strong govern us or the weak? How shall we distinguish the fit except by the success achieved along the lines of effort that most commend themselves to the majority of our fellow citizens? The failures spend their time in attacking the successful—shall we accept the failures as our leaders? To us it seems that the failures can only leave us in the predicament they have reached—they are the trapped foxes who ask us to give up our tails that we may be like them. Let us remember that, in the fable, the wise foxes refused to sacrifice their caudal appendages to gratify the self esteem of the minority.—Florida Times-Union.

A Peculiar Bond.

The attention of authories has been called to a peculiar looking indemnity bond which has been sent out by a New York firm. The bond is supposed to be signed in behalf of a woman who want to secure employment at sewing, and is intended to secure the company giving such work against loss.

The Bond it is alleged is realy a good one. It may cut in two, and the "condition" part taken away leaves a promise of the man whose name is appended to the bond to pay the company a certain sum of money. While there is no direct evidence that the bond is intended to be a fraudulent one it is admitted to be rather peculiarly drawn.—Dominion.

WARREN'S ADDRESS.

Joseph Warren was born at Roxbury, Mass., June 11, 1741, graduated at Harvard College in 1759, and began the practice of medicine in 1764. He was one of the patriots who stood out against the first British aggressions. In 1774 he was President of the Massachusetts Provincial Congress, and the following year was made a major general. At the battle of Bunker Hill he served as a volunteer, musket in hand, altho the chief command was offered to him. He was killed in this action. Before the battle he said to a friend, "I know that I may fall, but where's the man who does not think it glorious and delightful to die for his country?"

Stand! the ground's your own, my braves,
Will ye give it up to slaves?
Will ye look for greener graves?
  Hope ye mercy still?
What's the mercy despots feel?
Hear it in that battle peal,
Read it on yon bristling steel,
  Ask it, ye who will!

Fear ye foes who kill for hire?
Will ye to your homes retire?
Look behind you! they're afire!
  And before you, see
Who have done it! From the vale
On they come! and will ye quail?—
Leaden rain and iron hail
  Let their welcome be!

In the God of battles trust,
Die we may—and die we must:
But, oh, where can dust to dust
  Be consigned so well,
As where heaven its dews shall shed
On the martyred patriot's bed,
And the rocks shall raise their head,
  Of his deeds to tell!
    —Rev John Pierpont.

BRIDES AND GROOMS.

One of the amusements at Washington is spotting the brides and grooms. This is the time-honored place for two loving hearts to begin their married life, and all Washington loves the lovers. They may be told by the haughty distant air of the bride who looks as if she was walking with a gentleman who she knows slightly and who she wishes to keep at a distance. This is accomplished by walking about three feet away, and the groom looks as if he was keeping away under compulsion. They are to be found around the public places and they go up the monument, something wise people never, never do. Getting married and going to Washington is cheaper than divorce but the ill-conditioned bachelor says it is worth it.

Why should the bride be so particular about people knowing that she has landed her fish. There are some brides who, when they raise an umbrella which had been filled with rice in a crowded station, confess to almost dying of mortification. It always seemed to me that by getting married is the only way a woman can show her good faith.

When my unwilling feet were dragged to the foot of the monument last week by two student girls, in the hey-day of youth and beauty, who were bent on going to the top of the monument. I shuddered at the trip in the grave-like dampness of that marble shaft. My feet dragged so that the chamber of horrors was closed before we arrived. There was also a bride and groom left disconsolate. It was a clear case of the bride keeping so far away from the man.

For no reason on earth we began to tell the school girls what a beautiful place to spend a honeymoon Washington was and how they should have a trip to Washington in the contract. That when the fateful moment came that the fates are propitious instead of two passages there should be four. The groom should say: "Be mine?" The bride should say: "Will you take me to Washington?" The groom should say, "I will." The bride should say, "I will."

The bride's face flushed and the couple looked guilty and left.

While I was in Washing a bride and groom stood over a memorial tablet of some great man who was sincerely cussed while living and for whom the people mourned when dead, because they had lost good cussing material. The marble tablet was [illegible] by some beautifully sculptured heads of [illegible]. One of these the groom broke off and tenderly presented to his bride. He was arrested and hauled before the police justice who fined him one dollar and let the bride keep the souvenir. The judge had been young himself once and [illegible] would not listen to the superintendent of public buildings who wanted him to serve a term. Here's a health to the brides and grooms who have drawn the prize of prizes of life.

Not a Sacred Song.

The following true story relates to an old minister who believed every word there was in the Bible and everything that appeared in print with the church. Especially did he tie to "Gospel Hyms, Selected, No. 2." The choir would have liked to get something a bit more up to date, but the aged minister would n't have it. He said that those songs had been good enough for the brothers and the sisters of the church before that day, and he guessed they were good enough for the present generation.

So he continued to sing "Gospel Songs, No. 2."

One day some young scapegrace in the church pasted into that copy of the hymns devoted to the pulpit desk a printed slip of a very secular song. But so deftly was the pasting done that it would have taken a keener eye than the dim vision of the old parson to have detected the fraud.

On Sunday he opened the singing book to read the first hymn. He always opened by chance and took the first one to come to hand. He set his specs on his nose and began to read in a sonorous voice:

"I'm a double-jointed huckleberry aching for a fight."

But there was snickering from the back pews—and he stopped! He looked at the line more closely. He shut the book on his finger and scrutinized the cover. 'Twas all right. The cover bore the words, "Gospel Songs, No. 2." It was surely his book. There were marks of his usage. He opened again, and, setting his glasses more firmly, read the second line:

"I can eat a pound of liver, raw or fried."

The old parson stopped again. Judging from the laughter, muffled but none the less distinct, there was something wrong with the hymn. He looked at the line again. "Brethern," said he, in a puzzled way, "that does not read just right for the sacred songs of a holy day. I don't seem ever to have seen that hymn in this book before, though I thought I knew every word of it. It is strange—very strange. But—" and here his voice grew firmer and his tone louder—"there is no doubt about this being 'Gospel Songs, No. 2'—this book that I hold in my hand. This book has been tried and tested in the church. I will therefore read the other two lines of this first stanza:

"'I can lick a brace of catamounts and eat 'em when I'm tight.
I'm a ripper-snorter-tearer, blast my hide!'

"Now, brethren and sisters, all sing. Hymn number thirty-five, page twenty-three.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

What Napoleon thought of English Soldiers and American Seamen.

The Napoleonic craze, that was such a feature but a few years past has not entirely closed. The presentation of two Napoleonic plays in a single week in New York indicates rather a revival of interest in Napoleon.

Dr Barry O'Meara was Bonaparte's physician at St. Helena, and they became intimate confidential friends. The Doctor kept a diary, and from it can be derived the man's own estimate of himself and his opinions of others.

About English soldiers and American sailors, Napoleon expressed himself in this manner: English soldiers are not equal in address, activity, or intelligence to the French. When they get from under the lash of the lash they obey nobody. In a retreat they can not be managed, and if they meet with wine they are so many devils, and adieu to subordination. I saw the retreat of Moore, and never witnessed anything like it. It was impossible to collect them or to make them do anything. Nearly all were drunk. Your officers depend for promotion upon interest or money.

Your soldiers are brave—nobody can deny that,—but it was bad policy to encourage the military mania, instead of sticking to your marine, which, is the real force of your country, and one which, while you preserve it, will always render you powerful. In order to have good soldiers a nation must always be at war.

When questioned about seamen, Napoleon said, "The English seamen were as much superior to the French as the latter were to the Spaniards."

Dr O'Meara observed that he thought the French would never make good seamen on account of their impatience and volatility of temper. 'I do not agree with you there my dear doctor; but I do not think the French will ever make as good seamen as the English. The sea is yours—your seamen are as much superior to the French, as the the Dutch were to the English, I think, however, the Americans are better seamen than the English, because they are less numerous."

Dr O'Meara then remarked that the Americans had a great many English sailors that passed for Americans, and that the discipline in the American navy was more severe than the English. At this Napoleon smiled and observed, "That is not easy to believe."

Dr O'Meara then told Napoleon of a report having just come to St. Helena that war had been declared between Spain and American and Russia and America. "Russia and America," said he, "impossible! If this takes place I shall never be astonished again at any circumstance that happens. The Spaniards will be beaten."

But when Dr O'Meara said that an American frigate could take a Spanish seventy-four, Napoleon said he could not believe that, but nevertheless the Spaniards would be drubbed should there be war.

Fishing and Literature.

Surprise has been expressed that Mr Choate, the American ambassador to the Court of St. James, should have mentioned Walton's "Complete Angler" as one of the best books to be read. Probably one American in every hundred thousand has read the "Complete Angler." Probably one American in every hundred thousand has experienced to a greater or less extent the feelings which inspired the author of that wonderful bit of philosophy and humor without knowing that anybody else had ever given expression to them. Readers after Walton who belong to the brotherhood of which he was pioneer will endorse Mr Choate's estimate of the "Complete Angler." They have good reason.

At first thought fishing does not betray the slightest kinship to literature. If, however, the full meaning of fishing is considered in connection with the qualities which make for enduring literature, their close relation is demonstrated. Literature, to live, must be the result of observation, contemplation or imagination, or a combination of two or all of them. The genuine fisherman cannot fail to develop the three qualities. Indeed he would not be a fisherman at all if he did not already possess them. Angling is attractive to him largely because it enables him to exercise them.

No man has power of observation more strongly developed than his. He comes under the charms of the varying moods of nature in all seasons, in many weathers and at all hours. He notes more minutely than anybody else the habits of the fowls of the air, the beasts of the field and the fishes of the streams. No barometer is as sensitive to fluctuations of the atmosphere as he. He knows intimately the movements of the tides, the elements of good fishing water, and can predict almost to a minute the changes in the weather. He sees more in the graceful drooping of fronds of ferns, the motion of ripples, the tossing of tree tops and the waving of field crops than any other human being. He is trained to observe closely, without losing the sense of appreciation of breadth and distance.

Alone on the shady bank of a river, dangling his legs over the edge of a dam, basking in his boat in the broad sunlight, he is removed for the time from the many petty details of human action which interfere with the proper exercise of the mind, conducive to reason and judgment. Most of us talk too much and think too little. Even when we read the impressions of the type before us extend hardly beyond the retina. They find no permanent lodgment in the brain, for which, perhaps, the majority of brains ought to be thankful. The man on the river bank, by the dam or in the boat is free from human intercourse, gossip and other like ills. He is intent only upon landing now and then a fish, and in the meantime has opportunity and inspiration to weigh carefully the problems of world and to reach conclusions which, if permitted to become effective, would add to the happiness of the whole creation.

If he happens not to catch a fish during his whole day's sport he is still profited. He has reached the point where imagination comes in to full play. On this point, perhaps, the less said the better. There is not a fisherman in the world does not realize the value of the gift of imagination, however derisive his friends may be.

Of course, there are, fishermen and fishermen. These observations do not apply to the man who feels obliged to play at fishing because it is the thing to do at the seaside or summer resort, the man who will cast his line listlessly for an hour or so and then will withdraw in disgust and with a string of fish caught with the familiar silver bait or even the man who fishes because he wants a fish for food. The real fisherman eats to fish. The bogus variety, who fishes to eat, would, if he were an author, write a book for the purpose of selling it. He would have no right to enjoy the "Complete Angler." He would never gain fame as a writer or as a fisherman.—Southern Farm Magazine.

NEW HOPE, VA.

A beautiful Easter, but the health of the dear people of Augusta County is no better.

There are sixteen hundred patients under the care of physicians in Staunton, and so many deaths in one week that it is perfectly appalling. Eleven reported one day.

In our quiet neighborhood and near us there has been a burial every day this week.

We are glad to read in the Times that the health of the people of Pocahontas is better. Hope it may continue to get better till all are well.

Farmers are sowing oats and millet and preparing ground for a large crop of corn. Lots of potatoes have been planted. Easter Monday will be our day to set early cabbage plants.

Many kind wishes to Charlie Curtis from his old friends in this community.

We hope E. H. Moore may be successful in the sheriff election.

We are glad to hear that Frost has been on such a boom as to be incorporated, it was so very small in November.

We wish the Frost correspondent would give us the exact number and street address of the Gwin Hotel.

We are sorry to read of the death of Mrs W. I. Campbell.

We are sorry that Holmes Sharp has been on the sicklist.

Peach and pear trees are in bloom and we hope to have a fine crop this season.

Trailing arbutis is blooming on our sunny hill side.

We wish Hannah & Harper great success in their line of business.

We hope Mrs Ed Spitzer, of Frost, is convalescent ere this time.

People are earnestly praying that the Angel of Death may cease her terrible work in our land and county, but the will of the Lord must be done. We do not know who will be next. We are warned on every hand to set our house in order, and be ready [illegible]

Plenty of news, but to the people of Pocahontas is foreign. We will close, wishing our friends a prosperous season. LITTLE ME.

Writing the other day of the Biggle Swine Book, the latest addition to The Biggle Books, he says: "Without exaggeration or fulsome praise it is the best book which has come to my notice. I have carried it in my pocket two weeks, reading it in leisure moments, and following its advice has already saved me, as I believe, fifty dollars." This is big returns on an investment of 50 cents, which the publishers, Wilmer Atkinson Co., Philadelphia, ask for the book.

The New England small boy generally shows business capabilities at a tender age, if he is ever going to have them. I have heard of a certain small Boston boy who got into the habit of teasing his mother for pennies, until at last she said to him: "Now, Willie, I don't like to give you pennies; if you want money you should go to work and earn it." The boy remained thoughtful for some time. Then within a few days his mother perceived that Willie had plenty of pennies. She wondered a bit where he got them, but did not question him. But one summer day she that some sort of hullabaloo was going on in the back yard. Looking out she saw Willie surrounded by a mob of boys who were yelling with delight. She went down into the yard to see what was going on, and, as she passed out, she saw stuck up on the back wall of the house, this notice, quite neatly "printed" out with a pencil:

WILLIE JONES WILL EAT

1 small green worm, for......1 cent.
1 large green worm, for......2 cents
1 small fuzzy worm, for......3 cents
1 large fuzzy worm, for......5 cents
1 small green toad, for......25 cents

Willie was apparently doing a thriving business. His mother interrupted it—at any rate in her own back yard. I don't suppose she had any assurance that he was not still carry it on somewhere else.—Boston Transcript.

—Winifred (reading from novel of the period): "O Love! Supreme passion of the human heart! Mainspring of every worthy motive, conservator of society, link that binds angels in heaven and mortals upon earth! How oft doth selfishness masquerade in thy shining garments and unhallowed lips breathe thy pure name with malevolent intent into trusting ears!" "Don't you think that's fine?"

Claribel: "I think it sounds very punk."—Chicago Tribune.

—The professional humorist was dying. He lay in his white bed in the empty room, thinking of the unknown Future. Then he took a pencil and began writing on the wall: "When I am dead"—he paused, his face pallid—"cremate me—in the fireplace in the dining-room," he shuddered and went on, "so that my bones may mingle"—his hand failed for a moment—"with the ashes of the grate." When they found him there was a satisfied smile on his white face.—Princeton Tiger.

MARLINTON, THURS. APR. 26, 1900

Entered at the post-office at Marlinton, W. Va., as second class matter.

TO THE VOTERS OF POCAHONTAS COUNTY.

I understand that in certain parts of the county the report is being circulated that I am in favor of paying what is known as the Virginia Debt. This matter has long since been settled, so far as any legislative action is concerned, and if there is anything more to be done in reference thereto it will be through the medium of the courts; and I do not believe there is a man, woman, or child in the county gullible enough to believe that I would be in favor of paying any part of said so-called debt. But in the event there should be a doubting "Thomas," I hereby pledge myself, if elected to do everything in my power to prevent not only the payment of any part of said debt, but even the consideration of the subject by the Legislature.

I am also accused of being attorney for the Greenbrier Railway Company. I have never been employed by said Company, and do not represent said company or any other railroad company, in any capacity; and, if elected, will represent the interests of the people of Pocahontas against railroads and all other outside interests.

Owing to the lateness of the announcement of Mr H. A. Yeager for the House of Delegates against me, it will be impossible for me, between this time and the 12th of May, to make a personal canvass of the county, and here I would like to explain to the people attending Court that I would have consulted them on the subject of my candidacy had not my personal opponent Mr H. A. Yeager on the first day of court assured me that he was not a candidate for the place.

Pledging myself if elected to the best of my ability to represent the interests of the people of this county, and soliciting your support, I remain yours truly,

L. M. McClintic.

Half Sick Half Well

Many persons have their good day and their bad day. Others are about half sick all the time. They have headache, backache, and are restless and nervous. Food does not taste good, and the digestion is poor; the skin is dry and sallow and disfigured with pimples or eruptions; sleep brings no rest and work is a burden.

What is the cause of all this? Impure blood.

And the remedy?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

It clears out the channels through which poisons are carried from the body. When all impurities are removed from the blood nature takes right hold and completes the cure.

If there is constipation, take Ayer's Pills. They awaken the drowsy action of the liver; they cure biliousness.

Local Events.

Mrs Hubert Echols has returned from her visit to Roanoke.

A number of realestate men have been in the county recently.

D. W. Sharp has lime to sell in large or small quantities.

There is quite a lot of painting to be done in town this spring.

R. C. McCandlish, cashier of the Pocahontas Bank, started to the Johns Hopkins Hospital last Sunday to undergo a surgical operation.

The past spring has been a most remarkable one and its backwardness has been felt everywhere. The vegetation in the Valley of Virginia has not been more advanced than in Pocahontas County.

It is high time the district tickets were being brought out. In the event that the lines of some of the districts are changed it may be necessary to change the time of nominating district tickets.

The timber standing along the line of the railroad development between Marlinton and Elkins is to be estimated by experts this spring. One party will go up the east side of the Greenbrier and another will take the west side.

Wm. Mann has broken ground for a dwelling house in West Marlinton. W. A. Bratton has purchased four lots and will build a [illegible]. J. [illegible] Fisher's house is raised. F. H. [illegible] is building a large storehouse with dwelling rooms attached.

Knapp's Creek Bridge.

Col. Turk, with the caustic humor for which he is noted, has the following to say concerning the bridge at this point, in the Staunton Spectator and Vindicator:

"As stated in our last letter this railroad undertaking is assuming shape with considerable rapidity. At this point the railway crosses Knapp's Creek, the largest tributary of Greenbrier river. The bridge spanning this stream will be 250 long and a fill of considerable size and length is necessary at the northern end of the bridge. This has already been completed with the exception of a little dressing up before the rails are laid. Work on this bridge may prove one of the causes of delay in the opening of this road. The northern abutment is finished and work is being pushed on the southern, but a pier is to be built in the centre which has not yet been begun. Last fall the water in this quarter were lower than had ever been known before, and a little common sense would have dictated the building of the pier first but with studied indifference to the fact, or with inexplicable stupidity, nothing was done on the pier until winter set in, then they went at it, and as might have been expected the coffer dams were washed out and work on it is abandoned for the present. It is said that the attention of the railroad engineers was called to the danger of putting off work on the pier till winter set in, but if so here was a mistake. It is a historical fact that no one must suggest anything to the average civil engineer who is entrusted with the building of the railroad. If he does, he usually is insulted for his pains, and to show him how stupid he really is, the very opposite of his suggestion is the course pursued."

Writing as a layman we would call attention to the fact that the northern abutment was built first to protect the big, expensive fill made north of the Creek. If this had not been done, the floods and Smith & Whiting's immense drive might have demolished it. As for gratutitous advice the civil engineers could quote the Eastern proverb: "Advice unsought is cursed of God," as mark the story of Wali Dod.

Col. Turk is a physical giant and comes of a race of giants. For a hundred years it has been the Lex non scripta of Augusta County that a fine of $50 be imposed if a Turk hit a man, so we would not advise the civil engineers to pursue the matter.

Another Railroad.

There are rumors to the effect that about the time the C. & O. passed under new management in February last the question of the railroad development of this section came up, and that among other questions considered was the advisability of abandoning the river route of the Greenbrier Railway. It is said that the work had advanced to such a [illegible] that it was decided to finish the road, and since then [illegible] [illegible]

The [illegible] build a railroad [illegible] the Alleghany by way of the Rider Gap, shortening the distance from Pittsburg to Newport News by about fifty miles and giving a minimum grade going south over which freight could be hauled.

It is said that this line will be built immediately upon the completion of the Greenbrier Railway. In that case there will be two practical routes converging at Driscol. One would be to leave the line of the Greenbrier Railway at the mouth of Sitlington's creek, and cross over the divide between Dunmore and Frost and reach Driscol in about 20 miles. The other would be to branch off at Marlinton and build the road up Knapp's creek reaching Driscol in 9 miles. The first would shorten the haul 10 miles, but would be over a divide and consequently make the haul heavier. The other would require eleven miles less track, but would be farther around.

For the sake of the county we would rather see the former route taken; for the sake of Marlinton the latter. The natural line for a railroad to cross the county east and west is down Knapps Creek to Marlinton and up Stony Creek. To the west and southwest of Marlinton the richest coal and timber fields of the county are situated and this speaks in favor of the latter route.

Death of Wm. A. Bussard.

Wm. A. Bussard, of Frost, died at the Pocahontas House in Marlinton last Monday night after a week's sickness of [illegible]. He had been operating a sawmill near the town. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] He was [illegible] a week before he died. He came to this county from Highland a few years ago and engaged in the [illegible]. [illegible] He married Miss [illegible] of Frost, who with three children survive him.

A Leaf from My Note Book.

I pick up my Note-Book again to tell you more about my trip from Slaty Fork to Edray.

Here we are with what seems the garden spot of the Old Field Fork of Elk in full view. Just to the right of us on a little elevation is John B. Hannah's residence. He is, in a large sense, alone in this world, as his faithful companion left him last summer and went on to Heaven before him. He, doubtless, is ready for an exchange of worlds whenever the message comes for him to go. I suppose none will dispute it when I say that this is, probably, the best Christian in this section of country. J. E. Hannah with his interesting little family lives with his father.

But yonder is George L. Hannah's home. Though this man also has seen something of the troubles of life, yet he is contented and happy. He is opening up afresh a dry goods and grocery store. The prospect is fair for a good business here. Nearer the public road however would be better, if it could be made convenient. Mr Hannah keeps the Yelk post office. The mail carriers from Marlinton to Mingo dinner here. Not long since George's parents "shuffled off this mortal coil," and left behind them good evidence, we are told, that they went to the Father's house on high.

Their family is scattered some; like the most of families, especially those so advanced in life. We hope, however, when the general roll call takes place they will answer all right and meet their parents in Heaven.

This family is scattered we say, and so it is, and yet we have already noted something of Andrew and Sheldon down this creek, and here lives William just above George, but a little to the right of him. We take in William's situation and surroundings. We are pleased with the retired and quiet spot where William lives. The scenery here in summer is grand. Mr H. has a nice family and a pleasant place to live. As time will not permit us to delay here we will delay our talk till some more favorable time.

Here we go "winding up the hill," where we see the first butterfly of the season "go glancing to and fro in the sunlight. Gazing upon the fertile vale below, but glancing occasionally at the rugged and abrupt front the edge of Gibson's Knob presents to view to the left until we reach Uncle Billy and Aunt Polly Gibson's very comfortable home. This aged couple are well known in this section of country and uncle and aunt to nearly everybody. They are very hospitable and kind and have many visitors. One daughter of theirs Mrs Varner lives with them. Mr and Mrs Varner have some very interesting children, and especially interesting to this aged couple. It will be well if these grandparents are not children spoilers, as most of grand parents are. These little folks, however, are a great comfort and pleasure to them.

One of their sons, George, sleeps the sleep of death in Colonel Levi Gay's graveyard. Uncle Billy and Aunt Polly are growing old. They [illegible] themselves. [illegible] will all be ready for the boatman when he comes to take us to Father's House, where we all hope to meet—reach home sweet home in heaven at last.

TOP OF ALLEGHANY.

Bad Weather.

The mumps have died out.

Plowing is in order.

The boys are back from O'Connell's drive.

Mr McThany was in this part last week selling the life of D. L. Moody.

We are glad to see Charlie Rexroad back on the mail route.

I wonder what attracts Charles Spencer attention down on Buffalo.

The snow will not be gone on top of the Alleghany before August.

Jess Shears was up Sunday.

The Top of Alleghany school, taught by G. W. Sharp, will soon close.

Andy Hughes has decided not to run for President, but will likely run for constable.

W. B. Freeman is thinking of putting up a livery stable at Durbin.

Give us T. S. McNeel for Prosecuting Attorney.

We can hear a blast on the railroad once in a while.

Ed Wolfe, the supposed [illegible], talks of going to war.

WALLED.

Notice to the Ladies.

I have just returned from the city with a nice, new and up-to-date line of millinery goods. I will also have a first class milliner from the city by May 1. [illegible] all and examine [illegible] before buying elsewhere. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] whether you buy or not.

ARBOVALE.

And the sun came out again.

News are scarce, but candidates are thick enough.

W. B. Wooddell has fenced in his fine farm and is as happy as a coon in a corn field.

Pearl Arbogast is no better.

The prayer meeting at Arbovale has started again. Let every one turn out and make it a success.

Dr Taylor, of Huttonsville, was in town Thursday healing the sick and the afflicted.

The people of this neighborhood are anxious to have the Frost correspondent give particulars in reference to P. D. Moore's going to mill every Sunday. We fear he is not out of bread every time he goes to mill.

Died, April 19, Mrs Virginia Kerr, age about 80 years. She has gone to rest in the arms of Jesus.

French Sutton's little child, who has been very sick, is no better.

John Gum is on the sicklist, threatened with pneumonia.

Feed is scarce in this community and old cows are looking very poor.

Most of our people have just commenced sowing oats. The spring has been so backward that little corn ground has been plowed but if it stays pretty and warm they will soon be done plowing.

On Sunday, April 15, when the family of Benjamin Arbogast were sitting in the house enjoying themselves, a strange noise was heard. On investigation a fire was found on the roof near the flue. If it had not been found out when it was, the house would have been burned up, but a few bucketfulls of water soon quenched the flames.

The candidates have been around asking the people for their votes. We hope W. A. Bratton will be elected as there could not be a better man for the place.

Reese Pritchard seems to have a Beard in his eye.

Oh Yes. Give us J. W. Gillespie for Justice, Lanty Wooddell for Constable, and George Hoover for Commissioner of the County Court. His whiskers would get there all right.

We agree with your Wanless correspondent as to the whiskey shops. Will this county allow such things to be here. Are not we a law abiding citizens and ought not we break such things up? We might as well not have any law at all, for we will not execute them.

Brown M. Arbogast is not very well at this writing.

Morgan Rader is contemplating building a new house this coming summer.

Rev McNeill, who came here from Crabbottom to preach at Green Bank, moved in last week.

H. J. Cowger has got in his spring and summer goods. You should make him a call for he has the best goods in the county for the least money.

MY SWEETHEART.

Lovely weather at present; the grass can't help but grow.

Jess Shears is in from Huttonsville.

The sick are improving.

The measles, which were as bad as could be, are getting worse.

George [illegible] is improving [illegible]

[illegible] is very poorly at present.

Miss Grace Riley is very low with pneumonia.

E. M. Brown is suffering with a blood boil on his wrist.

Joseph Sutton is working for J. D. Wilmoth.

E. M. Conrad is working for Sol W. Phares.

And still they move: C. B. Swecker moved from Arbovale Saturday evening.

Okey Dey, of Pendleton, is canvassing this part for a New York nursery company. He has sold $800 worth in the Upper End. The farmers are getting their eyes open and are planting more fruit trees.

Jake Rider has sold out all except his grindstone and bath rock.

Benjamin Arbogast is building a fine road into his dwelling.

Rev Pullin preached an interesting sermon at Arbovale church Sunday evening. He will preach at Travelers Repose the 4th Sunday of April at 11 a. m.; on Brush Run at 3 p. m. and will lecture on Temperance at Arbovale at 7 p. m.

Rev S. G. Cameron will preach at Arbovale church May 6 at 7 p. m. Also May 6 at the same hour. Let everybody come out.

E. B. Bouse, alias Francis Truth, famous as the "Divine Healer," was arrested in Boston. The police say Bouse has been making a net profit of $[illegible] a week. His instructions to the sick taking his absent treatment was to go into a closed room, lock the door and sit quietly in a rocking chair, with folded hands and closed eyes, and [illegible] the divine power of healing [illegible] through [illegible]. We are glad to hear of such swindlers being arrested [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

GREEN BANK.

And it rained again.

Attorney McNeel was in town Saturday. Also Attorney J. W. Yeager.

Married, April 18, 1900, at 11 o'clock, G. Lynn Clark and Miss Bertie Beard, Rev J. M. Eavy officiating. Also Irb Beard and Miss C. M. Wooddell, on the same day, Rev. Barnes, of Virginia, officiating.

Mrs Caroline Nottingham is the guest of her daughter, Mrs J. H. Curry.

Lawrence Nottingham says just let it rain. He don't care a fig—it's a boy!

Rev J. W. McNeel preached a good sermon at this place Sunday night. His next appointment here will be May 13, at 11 a. m. (D. V.)

Mrs J. H. Curry is on the sick list at this time.

Died, April 18, 1900, infant child of James Moomau and wife, of pneumonia.

J. H. Buzzard has been in this neighborhood assessing the personalty of the people and shaking hands.

MRS POOH.

LOBELIA.

Very fine weather.

Mr Woods is still on the sick-list.

Miss Malinda Griffin will spend the summer with her sister, Mrs Eliza Pritt.

Mr Woods has a cow three years old that has had three calves.

J. B. Dean has the measles.

J. M. Snedagar has the Oak Grove school for the next term.

We know of one boy who hasn't eat much sugar this year for he is sour.

Simon Hill is the prize scholar.

Peter Hill caught three foxes in one trap.

Mr Young has gotten his hen-house completed.

Dick Sdedegar has set his saw-mill on end. Its a girl.

William Pritt says he don't care if it never rains. Its a boy.

Dock Cutlip says its a boy toy!

BURDOCK.

Greenbrier Presbytery meets at Salem Church, a few miles south of Caldwell, on Tuesday, May 2d. Delegates from Huntersville church, Elders J. H. Doyle or P. L. Cleek; Dr S. P. Patterson delegate for Synod at New Port News, in the fall. Marlinton church, delegates G. M. Lee or Allan Levisay; delegate to Synod, George Baxter. Frost, L. W. Herold.

Ed Prior was taken to the penetentiary last week by Sheriff Hill and Deputy-Sheriff Sharp. Trout Shue, who was serving a life sentence in the penetentiary, died two weeks ago.

Do you want a bargain in a suit of clothes? Go to the Pocahontas Bargain House. They have all styles and qualities at rock bottom prices.

J. S. McWhorter, a Lewisburg attorney, is in Marlinton.

HAD CONSUMPTION

and I am afraid I have inherited it. I do not feel well; I have a cough; my lungs are sore; am losing flesh. What shall I do?

Your doctor says take care of yourself and take plain cod-liver oil, but you can't take it. Only the strong, healthy person can take it, and they can't take it long. It is so rich it upsets the stomach. But you can take

SCOTT'S EMULSION

It is very palatable and easily digested. If you will take plenty of fresh air, and exercise, and SCOTT'S EMULSION steadily, there is very little doubt about your recovery.

There are hypophosphites in it; they give strength and tone up the nervous system while the cod-liver oil feeds and nourishes.

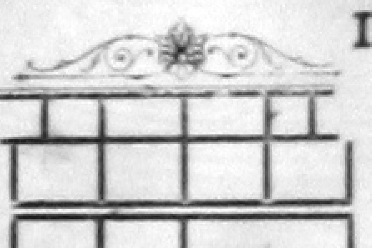
of the country. Bring us everything you have for sale in the way of grain and produce and be convinced that we can sell you

MORE GOODS FOR LESS MONEY

than any place in Marlinton.

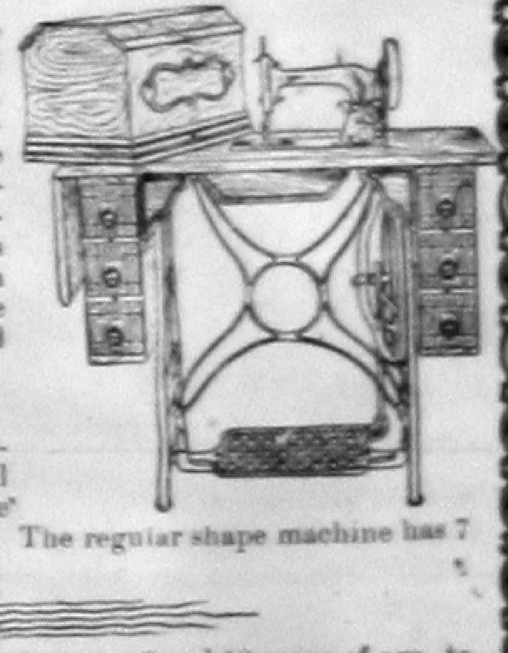
Very Respectfully,
W. W. TYREE,



IT IS LIKE BUILDING A HOUSE WITH BLOCKS,

To try to establish a business by selling poor goods at low prices.

I am not going to build my business that way, but will sell you good goods at half prices, as I want to start my spring business with new goods at right prices.



I will offer you for the next ten days or until I come back from market, High Arm Singer Sewing Machines—they are perfect, light running—just as good as the machine your neighbor has paid 65 dollars; you can have your choice—the drop head or regular kind $22.90.

Every machine is warranted for ten years. All attachments free. The regular price is $30 00. The regular shape machine has 7 drawers nicely finished.

WANTED—50 Boys, between 3 and 18 years of age, to fill good positions in my wear-proof boys suits. Wil make you following low prices:

Boys Suits, gray Cassimer, blue flannel, blach cheviot, &c, worth from $1.50 to $3.00, you can have them from 68c to one dollar and 68c,

All my last season's Men's fancy negligee shirts that were 50c, 75c, and one dollar each, will close out from 30c to 47c each.

These good are just as good styles as I will have later, but I wish to start the spring season with a clean stock.

One dollar will have the purchasing power of two dollars to buy my wrappers. The prices run from 75c to $1.25. You can have them from 37 1-2c to 73c.

Thanking you for past favors, I hope you will continue your patronage in the future. Yours for bargains now and a nice clean spring stock soon,

PAUL GOLDEN.

Stop the Clock:
IF YOU HAVE NO MORE USE FOR TIME.

Stop Buying of Us:
IF YOU ARE TIRED OF SAVING MONEY.

We thank our many customers for their patronage during the past year, and we are glad to say that we have made a success of selling for cash. We are going to enlarge our building, increase our stock and diminish prices. Everybody claims to sell cheap, but we convince by actual demonstration. Its Values that create new business, and its Values like ours that bring to our store trade that we would not otherwise get. Unless you are proof against bargains our prices must command your attention. Spot cash gets more bargains and better bargains in a week than credit gets in a year. We buy for cash. There can be no misunderstanding when prices are named in black and white:

SEVEN RUNNING SORES CURED

—BY—

Johnston's Sarsaparilla

QUART BOTTLES.

THE GREAT SPRING MEDICINE.

JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA as a Blood Food and Nerve Energizer, is the greatest SPRING MEDICINE ever discovered. It comes as a rich blessing from heaven to the "worn out," the run down, the overworked and debilitated. That "tired feeling," those "sinking spells," the languor and despondency which arise from badly nourished nerves, from thin, vitiated blood and an underfed body, vanish as if by a magic spell. The weariness, lassitude and nervous prostration which accompany the spring-time and the heat of summer, are conquered and banished at once. For every form of neurasthenia, and all ailments of the brain and nerve, insomnia hysteria and nervousness generally, it is almost a specific. It furnishes the very elements to rebuild worn-out nerve tissues. It feeds brain, nerve centers and nerves, calming and equalizing their action; it makes rich, red, honest blood. Newness of life, new hope, new strength follow its faithful use. It makes the weak strong, and the old young again.

It was the antiquated (but now happily exploded) method in the good old times, to treat Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Cancer and other troublesome disorders arising from BLOOD TAINT with powerful alteratives, such as mercury, arsenic and other mineral agents. It was expected by this treatment that the poison could be killed while the blood was left to course through its channels holding in its circulation the specific germs of the disease. But in this way, every part of the body became more or less diseased. Nothing can be more terrible than a horribly destructive blood taint. It not only attacks virulently the different structures of the body, but many times the bones are honey-combed and destroyed. It often seeks out the nerves and spinal cord, and again it will bring decay and death to some vital organ, as the kidneys, liver or stomach. There is only one scientific method for the cure of blood taint. That is, PURIFICATION! Every particle of the blood must be removed through the excretory channels, the lungs, kidneys, bowels, liver and skin. "First pure, then peaceable." The great restorative, reconstructive and vitalizer of the blood, JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA, not only radically and exhaustively removes the taint, but also removes all mercury, calomel and other minerals, and fills the veins and arteries with the ruby, glowing current of vitality. "The blood is the life." Good health means pure blood. The old and reliable remedy, JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA, is universally regarded as the greatest Blood Purifier ever discovered. This fact is now established beyond question or cavil.

BLOOD POISON CURED BY JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA.

E,ron, Mich., October 31, 1894.

Williams, Davis, Brooks & Co., Detroit:

Gentlemen:—In April last I began using JOHNSTON'S SARSAPARILLA for Blood Poison, caused by an amputation of one of my arms. I had SEVEN RUNNING SORES on my legs. I used two bottles and was entirely cured. I know it is what cured me. Yours truly, C. W. LUTHER.

HARRY R. ECHOLS, MARLINTON, W. VA.

HARL MARVIN ARBOGAST.

This excellent young man, son of Mr and Mrs B. M. Arbogast, died at his home near Arbovale, March 15, 1900, aged 19 years, 9 months, 2 days. His friends had great hopes of his recovery, until the day before his death. He remarked to his father, "I will not be with you long; the Lord is calling for me."

All was done for him that skillful physicians and loving friends could do, and in the darkness of night came the messenger with the summons: Well done,' enter thou into the joy of thy Lord!

He departed this life, shouting: Glory to the Lamb that was slain! I'm going home to die no more! He then lay back in his father's arms, as peaceful as a babe,—the angels had wafted his spirit to him who gave it. "Asleep in Jesus!"—blessed thought; in that sleep so calm and peaceful, he will never know sorrow again.

"One less at home,
The charmed circle broken, a dear face,
Missed day by day from its usual place,
But cleansed, saved, perfected, by grace,
One more in Heaven!"

"One less on earth:
Its pain, its sorrow, and its toil to share;
One less the pilgrim's daily cross to bear,
One more the crown of the blessed to wear,
At home in Heaven!"

There are fifty million herd of cattle in the United States, of which number from fifteen to twenty million are dairy cows. If every one of our readers would get Biggle Cow Book, published at 50 cents by the Wilmer Atkinson Co., Philadelphia, they could greatly increase the product from every cow in their herd.

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern which is not afraid to be generous. The proprietors of Dr. King,s New Discovery for Consumption Coughs and Colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles and have the satisfaction of knowing it has cured thousands of hopeless cases Asthma Bronchitis, La Grippe and all Throat, Chest and Lung diseases are surely cured by it.

TALES OF A TRAVELLER.

THE POLICE COURT.

One day I went down to the wharfs at Washington to see the Potomac and the ships and was there when a big ferry boat came in from Alexandria. It is not one of the show places, by any means, but then some pepple "hanker after things which others idle by."

After a miscellaneous living freight, ranging from pretty girls to two horse teams, had been discharged, a policeman standing by me said, "There's my prisoner," and a evil looking youth walked down the gangway in company with a big, heavy [illegible] who was the detective who had arrested him in Alexandria for stealing a bicycle. If he had been in Pocahontas he would probably have stolen a horse. The detective was leading a cheap ten dollar machine which was the mount the youth had appropriated.

The three stopped at a street corner and about twenty small boys and myself gathered around to see what would happen. The prisoner was on the point of crying. The policeman talked to me very kindly and condescendingly and said that bicycles were being stolen right and left [illegible] and that it was a fine thing they had been able to arrest one of the thieves. He advised me to go to the police court of a morning if I wanted to hear something interesting and to see city court. While we talked the patrol wagon arrived. The horse thief was assisted to mount and the door slammed to which caught with a spring lock, and he was in a curtained cage in solitary confinement to be hauled to the station house. The detective rode away on the wheel and the policeman told the boys to go home. That was the last I saw of the trio, with the exception of the big detective, who came into a pawnbroker's shop where I was looking at the collection of articles to be sold. He brought a list of jewelry which had been stolen the night before, in case they turned up to be pawned.

The police court was in session when I arrived next morning About twenty white and two colored jurymen were in one corner. In the jury box sat about a dozen policemen. In the cage were a dozen or so negroes and one very respectable looking white farmer. The police justice was a very quiet intelligent looking man. There were four colored lawyers, a white attorney, and the city attorney in the bar. A case occupied something like five minutes.

Two negro men and two negro women were charged with having a big fight and swearing in a locked room. Two policemen went in through the window and some one blew the lamp out. One of the women said that she was visiting there and they were singing gospel hymns. She had a dollar and she sent out for five cents' worth of beer, and the man never brought back her change. She had the door locked and there might have been some loud talk about the change, but there was no fight or disturbance.

The judge said: "I have n't the least doubt that you all were in a fight, but you are all so friendly this morning, and seemed to have made it up, that I want to encourage this sort of thing. We hold you each in the sum of one hundred dollars to keep the peace for one year. Get out. Don't come back here."

This was a great victory for a young colored lawyer, who escorted his clients out of court. One peculiarity we noticed was that the policemen were sworn but the prisoners were not before they gave in their testimony.

"John Tascoe." A young negro walked to the end of the cage and stopped before a ticket window. "You are charged with disorderly conduct, guilty or not guilty? Not guilty, boss. Judge or jury? Judge." [illegible] took the stand.

Policeman: "I arrested this man on a [illegible] street. He was drunk and using bad language. I warned him and he sassed me and I arrested him. I had to have help before I conquered him."

City Attorney (to prisoner): "Want to say anything?"

Prisoner: "I wasn't doin' nothin', boss. Dis policemen come erlong and hit me wif his club. Dat 's de Gawd's truf."

Judge: "Ten days."

This is a fair sample of the ordinary cases. Finally the white man's turn came. He shambled forward and said he guessed he was guilty. The policeman testified that he was very drunk and said something about taking the town. Thought he was from the country. The judge asked the officer if he was a soldier. The reply was that he seemed to be a farmer. "Five dollars or fifteen days." The prisoner had the money and shuffled back into the prison to pay it.

Then came a case against an old colored woman who owned a house for keeping the water closet in an unsanitary condition. A health officer appeared against her and said that he had had her summoned before on the same charge. The old lady was very indignant. The judge asked her if she had had it cleaned out since she had received the last summons. She saw a thoroughfare and said she had. The judge turned to the officer and said: "Go and look! If she has its all right. If not bring her here tomorrow." The old woman began to cry at this and followed the health officer out. It was not hard to see the outcome of this.

There was one jury case. A young white man was charged with doing plumbing work without being a licensed plumber. A very young lawyer handled his case. It was shown that he took the contract and had a licensed plumber do everything except the excavating work. The young lawyer made a long speech, and the city attorney followed it with a very able and convincing one. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty, and the young lawyer was glad all over. Court was adjourned until tomorrow morning.

THE CAPTAIN OF VOLUNTEERS.

We sometimes have premonitions that evil is impending. We feel sure that some things are inimical to us. They say that you shiver if you walk over the spot you will be buried. At the hotel where I stopped there was a captain of volunteers, in all his glory. He was known by the uniform he wore. If he had been an officer of the regular army he would not have worn his uniform except when he was on duty, but of an officer of volunteers anything may be expected. He was in evidence in the lobby of the hotel at all times and we felt sure that we felt sure that we would mistake him for a porter of the hotel on account of the similarity of the uniforms, and ask him to do some menial task for a consideration, and that then we would die the death.

We went around treading on this kind of a mine for days and we had begun to feel comparatively safe, when one day we rushed on to destruction. Walking hurridly thro' a corridor and wishing to get rid of an overcoat as the day was warm we turned to the first uniform we saw and said: "Would you please check this overcoat?" It is impossible to describe that crushing look. Suffice it to say that we saw it and survived.

He turned on his heel and left instead of annihilating us as the honor of the Army demanded. We received no message from him, and he is still captain of volunteers and the writer the editor of a newspaper. If he had wanted to fight we would have been like the man in the play, having the choice of arms, we would have chosen [illegible] at a hundred yards.

KENTUCKY.

A very interesting scene occurred at a Renceverte hotel lately. A crowd of men were in the office when one of their number a rather seedy looking individual, pulled a patent medicine almanack and said: "Now I'm going to read you the latest on Kentucky."

He read a joke reflecting in some way on the State which might be called the mother of precedents. The audience was not especially interested for jokes on Kentucky are too plentiful to be noticed, until a man arose from the corner of the room, and, taking off his coat, announced he could lick the man who read that, whom he called every vile name conceivable.

The clerk ejected them both from the hotel and restored order.

A BLACK LIST.

The colored people of Staunton have a black list of ladies who can not be pleased by their help which is read out in church Sunday night. Every now and then a Stanton matronis horrified to hear that her name has been entered on this roll, for it means that she will have to do her own housework.

Two colored ladies were at a window in the city when a very beautiful girl in yellow passed along. One of them said, "Oh, ain't that a lovely dress!" The other said, "Yes, but yellah doan' suit mah complexion."

A very Remarkable Remedy.

It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, says Druggist A. W. Sawtelle, of Hartford, Conn. "A lady customer, seeing the remedy exposed for sale on my show case said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore,' and she became so enthusiastic over its merits that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he sank at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever.

No Twin Microbes for Him.

A clergyman walking on the out skirts of his parish one day found one of his parishioners whitewashing his cottage. Pleased at this novel manifestation of the virtue that is next to godliness he complimented the man on his desire for neatness. With a mysterious air the worker descended the ladder and approaching the fence, said: "That's not exactly the reason why I'm doin this ere job, your Worship. The last two couples as lived here had twins, so I says to my missus, 'I'll take and whitewash the place so's there mayn't be no infection.' You see, sir, as how we've got ten of 'em already."—Phonographic Record.

We were sorry to see that our old friend William H. Sawyers of Hinton was defeated for Justice of the Peace in a primary the other day. He ought to have come out for some less important office. Something like Congress. We do not elect a genius a justice of the peace.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by the inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars.

THE MURDERED TRAVELER.

When spring, to woods and wastes around,
Brought bloom and joy again,
The murdered traveler's bones were found,
Far down a narrow glen.

The fragrant birch, above him, hung
Her tassels in the sky,
And many a vernal blossom sprung,
And nodded careless by.

The red bird warbled as he wrought
His hanging nest o'erhead,
And fearless, near the fatal spot,
Her young the partridge led.

But there was weeping far away,
And gentle eyes, for him,
With watching many an anxious day,
Were sorrowful and dim.

They little knew, who loved him so,
The fearful death he met,
When shouting ov'er the desest snow,
Unarmed, and hard beset;—

Nor how, when round the frosty pole
The northern dawn was red,
The mountain wolf and wild cat stole
To banquet on the dead;—

Or how, when strangers found his bones,
They dressed the hasty bier,
And marked his grave with nameless stones,
Unmoistened by a tear.

But long they looked, and feared and wept,
Within his distant home:
And dreamed and startled as they slept
For joy that he was come.

So long they looked—but never spied
That welcome step again,
Nor knew the fearful death he died
Far down that narrow glen.

WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

Life in Kentucky.

Algernon Dangerfield, of Lexington, Ky., now in Washington, submits the following summing up of life in Kentucky without comment:

"Man born in the mountains of Kentucky is of feud days and full of virus. He fisheth, fiddleth, cusseth, fighteth all the days of his life.

"He shunneth water as a mad dog and drinkth much mean whiskey.

"When he desireth to raise h— planteth a neighbor, and lo! he reapeth twenty fold. He riseth even from the cradle to seek the scalp of his grandsire's enemy, and bringeth home in his carcass the ammunition of his neighbor's wife's cousin's uncle's father-in-law, avenged the deed.

"Yea, verily, his life is uncertain and he knows not the hour he may be jerked hence.

"He goeth forth on a journey half shot, and cometh back on a shutter, shot.

"He riseth in the night to let the cat out, and it takes nine doctors three days to pick the buckshot out of him.

"He goeth forth in joy and gladness and cometh back in scraps and fragments.

"A cyclone bloweth him into the bosom of his neighbors wife, and his neighbor's wife's husband bloweth him into Abraham's bosom before he hath time to explain.

"He emptieth a demijohn into himself and a shot gun into his enemy, and his enemy's son lieth in wait for him on election day, and, lo! the coroner ploweth up a forty acre field to bury that man.

"Woe, woe, is Kentucky, for her eyes are red with bad whiskey and her soil is stained with the blood of innocent moonshiners."—Ex.

A Sprained Ankle Quickly Cured

"At one time I suffered from a severe sprain of the ankle," says George E. Cary, editor of the Guide, Washington, Va. "After using several well recommended medicines without success, I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and am pleased to say that relief came as soon as I began its use and a complete cure speedily followed. This remedy has also been used in my family for frost bitten feet with the best results. I cheerfully recommend its use to all who may need a first-class liniment. Sold by Albert Sidney Johnson of Monroe County would go to the Kansas City convention as a delegate from this district. He has been scourging the Republican party for years, and it is time he was receiving due recognition.

Pendleton County instructed its seat delegate to the Legislature to vote for Colonel John T. McGraw for Congress.

The Republican party seems to be making a special onslaught on Greenbrier, whose normal Democratic majority it has reason to fear. Last Tuesday J. H. Gaines and Judge Smith, candidates for Congress, and Thomas G. Mann candidate for Attorney General, addressed the people in the court house during the noon recess of the court. Their speeches were well received, but the orators showed plainly that they were not sure what to say in regard to public questions. Judge Smith made a safe hit at John R. McLean's sister's husband. They were all vaguely opposed to trusts. The extraordinary high prices have forced this issue on every politician. Mr Gaines said that while he held an office (district attorneyship) which was a better office in many respects than that of a Representative, he wanted to go to Congress, and if he did he would leave the present office for some other good Republican.

A Woman's Awful Peril.

"There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation" were the startling words heard by Mrs I. B. Hunt of Lime Ridge, Wis., from her doctor after he had vainly tried to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. The indications are that a number of Republicans are going to vote in our May primary. We welcome everyone who will keep his pledge to support the ticket nominated at the fall elections. In the past there have been some who did not do this, but on the other hand many Democrats who vote in the primary scratch the ticket at the general election. We like to see our Republican friends, of whom we have many, rubbing shoulders with their Democratic brothers in a party convention. It makes us think that some day they may come over entirely to the party.

If a Rip Van Winkle had waked from a sleep of about four years and walked into the court-house at Lewisburg the strangest thing he would have seen would have been the sight of Alex McVeigh Miller and L. J. Williams presiding at a Republican mass-meeting. The Democrats regard these gentlemen as political apostates, but there is a fine chance of these gentlemen reaping their reward, one being slated for State Senator and the other for Judge of the Supreme Court of Appeals.

Beware of a Cough.

A cough is not a disease, but a symptom. Consumption and bronchitis, which are the most dangerous and fatal diseases, have for their first indication a persistent cough, and if properly treated as soon as this cough appears are easily cured. Chamberlain's cough remedy has proven wonderfully successful, and gained its wide reputation and extensive sale by its success in curing diseases which cause coughing. To the Voting Public:

I have decided to withdraw from the race for Prosecuting Attorney of Pocahontas County, my reasons for taking this step are manifold, among the most prominent of which is the fact of my inability to push my campaign as vigorously as I would have wished in the beginning.

To my many friends who have expressed their good wishes for my success in the fight from which I am retiring, I extend my heartfelt thanks.

Had I continued in the race and been elected, it would have been the one pleasure of my life to enforce the law against its violators in this county but I willingly leave that duty in the hands of my opponents, of which there are two, and I feel safe in assuring the public that the successful one will make a capable attorney for the people. Respectfully,

Pettus Discusses the Scott Case.

In the Senate on Thursday Mr Pettus (Dem., Ala.) moved that the resolution declaring Senator Scott of West Virginia entitled to retain his seat, be recommitted to the Committee on Privileges and Elections with instructions to investigate it fully. Mr Pettus asserted that the case had never been fully or fairly investigated by the committee.

While analyzing the doings of the West Virginia Legislature, Mr Pettus exclaimed in tones of horror: "Oh, Mr President, the debauchery of such infernal proceedings cannot be too strongly characterized. It is a horrible state of affairs. Here are the vouchers, about as dirty a set as you ever saw in your life; and we are told that the Senate of the United States cannot examine into a fraud like that. That may be so. It may be that Mr Scott is not either a Gold Republican nor a Silver Republican, and, therefore, you have no ground to vote against him, on the standard set up by the Senator from New Hampshire (Mr Chandler). I do not know whether that is so or not. Oh, I do not believe that Senators can do such things as the Senator from New Hampshire charges them with."

Coming to the connection of the Governor of West Virginia with the question, he read a letter from the Governor, with these words: "Party interest demands contest in your case. Will pay all expenses." "Oh," Mr Pettus exclaimed, "it makes me sick to see that the Governor of a great State should get down in the mud and dirt politics."

Mr Elkins (Rep. W. Va.), who was listening good humoredly to the Senator from Alabama, made a pleasant reply, to which Mr Pettus replied,

"The Senator's picture is on this thing [illegible] I will get to you after a while." [Laughter.]

After further discussion the Scott resolution went over till tomorrow. — New York Sun.

I can't take plain cod-liver oil. Doctor says, try it. He might as well tell me to melt lard or butter and try to take them. It is too rich and will upset the stomach. But you can take milk or cream, so you can take

Scott's Emulsion

It is like cream; but will feed and nourish when cream will not. Babies and children will thrive and grow fat on it when their ordinary food does not nourish them.

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day when taking an ounce of Scott's Emulsion. It gets the digestive machinery in working order so that the ordinary food is properly digested and assimilated.

DIED.

W. A. BUSSARD.

Died, at the Pocahontas House, April 22, 1900, William A. Bussard of Frost, aged 30 years, 2 months, 12 days. His ailment was brain trouble, superinduced, it is believed, by the severe injuries he received several months since, when his traction engine was wrecked in crossing the Alleghany at Rider's Notch.

He was a native of Highland County, son of A. W. Bussard, near Bolar Springs, and was born February 10, 1870. He was a person of remarkable energy, and did with all his might whatever he undertook. For some years he merchandised at Frost, had charge of the post office, reared a beautiful house doing most of the work with his own hands.

He was a good singer, useful in Sunday school work and a lively adherent of the Southern Methodist Church and has been a member since 1895.

His wife was Susan, daughter of Wilson Rider, at Mt. Vernon who survives with three little children.

His remains were taken to the Moore graveyard on Knapps Creek. The pall bearers were Wm. Gibson, Price Moore, Letcher Herold, John Jackson, Peyton Moore, and John Andrew Moore; his attached friends or business associates.

J. A. M.

REV GEORGE P. HANNAH.

Rev Geo. P. Hannah, a zealous minister of the M. E. Church, died of a virulent attack of pneumonia April 26, at his home in Virginia, aged about forty years. He was a native of this county, a son of the late David Hannah, on Elk. He had attended to his usual duties on Sunday, April 22, and was seized Sunday night with the illness that terminated in his death on the 26th.

MRS BROWN MOORE.

Mrs Brown Moore died at her home on Knapps Creek Thursday, April 25, 1900 after a brief illness, aged about 31 years. She was Miss Ada Belle Watts, of Greenbrier. Mrs R. W. Hill, of Hillsboro, is her sister. An infant daughter survives... [illegible] Miss Lena Watts. Mrs Moore was an ... [illegible] the M. E. Church South.

Bath county can boast of many freaks. Not least among them is a young lady who has just proven her ability to devour a pie of the usual size in twelve bites.—Millboro Correspondence of the News.

There is a great dearth of sawmills in this county. Every one who has tried to build has been hampered by scarcity of lumber. Ordinary lumber has been marketed here at from twelve to thirteen dollars per thousand.

Rev J. M. Anderson, lately in charge of Huntersville circuit, was transferred to Slanesville circuit east of Romney, Hampshire county. He left Huntersville Tuesday for his new charge, going by way of Monterey, Franklin, and Petersburg.

G. W. Ginger the Huntersville village blacksmith, has procured a portable forge, which is a great improvement over the old style hearth and bellows. He has also a wagon tire compressor by which tires can be tightened and replaced without cutting.

Over two weeks ago a negro was accidentally shot in the stomach at [illegible] camp near Academy. An Italian was handling the pistol carelessly when it was discharged. The man has been lying in a precarious condition ever since. He has had the hiccoughs constantly. He started to the hospital Saturday. It is thought he can not live. The Italian who did the shooting left.—Later: He died Saturday morning.

Concert by Jim Young.

Jim Young, the colored restaurant keeper, gave a concert Saturday for the benefit of himself, and we went and mixed with the elements. There was a magic lantern, good music, clog dancing, singing and speeches. The fact was impressed on our minds that social conditions here were changing. We stayed to the speaking and left early.

Jim Young announced that he was president of the house, had the floor and would speak thirty minutes on the subject: "What shall we do? What are we doing? What are the nation doing? Rule and ruin." He regretted that this yere railroad was being built on the transpostation plan. Contractors went way down in North Carolina for fool niggers who come up here and work about four months and den ask how do dey stan'. De cawntractor say, "you owe me 'bout five dollars yet." Den dey would git discouraged and leave.

He had no education and he was baldheaded, and baldheaded men never did have no luck. But he tried to do right. His mother had left tracks de sand saying, "Jim do right!" De matter with de country was that dere was too many white tramps and too many black people afiring off deir pistols and looking around to commit some misdemeanors.

He did not think much of politicians. Dey come round fore de election and say, "Howdy do, Mr Young?" After election they say, "Hi, you, old Jim!" He did not take much stock in politics bettering the condition of poor people, it looked to him that there were as many poor people now as there was when Cleveland was president.

After concluding his remarks which were somewhat disconnected by the speaker rebuking members of his audience for wearing their hats and smoking, he concluded by introducing the next speaker. "Ladies and gentlemen lemme interduce yer the nex' speaker, Mr ——(Wha' you say yoah name was?") "George Stepp Bryan," said the speaker, and the introduction was complete. George Stepp Bryan favored the audience with a very neat address on the advancement of the negro race since their emancipation, which has been indeed wonderful. There was a ripple of laughter when after enumerating in a general way that the negro race had members who had accumulated wealth and had representatives in every profession, he added, "and we have dry goods clerks, grocery clerks and travelling salesmen."

The next performer was a colored man in the United States Cavalry uniform, who had been at San Juan Hill, who promised the audience to break a 27lb rock with a 650lb blow of the naked fist, and then to catch a 38 cal. pistol ball fired at his hand. We did not wait to see these miracles performed. The entertainment broke up about midnight with a yell that startled the peaceful burghers in their beds.

Rev William T. Price Resigns.

Rev William T. Price, who has been pastor of the Marlin's Bottom and Huntersville Presbyterian churches for fifteen years, has resigned his charge and the congregations of the two churches unite in a request to Presbytery to dissolve the pastoral relationship.

For more than forty years he has been in active service, but early in the winter his health was such that he was unable to preach during the cold weather. His health seems to be fully restored now, but owing to the natural infirmaties of age he thought it best to resign the charge. He will continue to preach as occasion demands, but will not have a regular charge. We hope to have more than ever the benefit of his assistance in the editing of this paper.

Patrick Henry Hurt.

Pat Henry, who runs a lumber camp on Williams River, was struck in the face by a log and seriously injured. He was standing near a timber slide early one morning, and he warned two of his men not to stand too near for fear the logs would jump the slide and hit them. He had hardly spoken when a log coming swiftly down the slide jumped and grazed his head, knocking him senseless. He was severely bruised but will recover.

Mr Critcher, a Washington attorney, is in Pocahontas county.

Died, near Falling Springs, W. Va., April 22, Annie, beloved child of F. P. and Mary F. Vanderwort, aged four years, eleven months and eleven days.

Some of the candidates in this county thought their assessments for the expenses of the primary election right high, but they are not as high as in Webster County. There the sheriffs pay $25 and prosecuting attorneys $15 and other candidates in proportion. Surely it must be as much pleasure to run for office in this county as in Webster.

Railroad Notes.

The tunnel at Bird's mill is completed.

There is still a good deal of work to be done on the Cat Hole cliffs, but this is not enough to delay the completion of the work.

Track laying has been going on steadily. Last week the twelfth mile was reached. At present about half a mile of track is being laid per day. Every other tie is put down and the rail spiked on. The construction train then brings up the other ties and ballasts the ties with pounded in stones. Laying track requires skilled labor. On a curve the outside rail is the higher. On a reverse curve it is very hard to get the rails just right.

A great many men are at work getting out ties. Thirty cents is paid for first class and twenty-five for second class ties delivered. From five to eight cents is paid for the timber in the tree. The men work in pairs. They saw the tree down and hew it and then cut the ties off. Two good tie men can complete fifty ties in a day. The ties are delivered at the right of way and the inspector daubs paint on them when he acccepts them, one dot for first and two for second class.

The greatest curve on the whole line is said to be at the big bend in the river at the upper end of the Kinnison place. It is a 11.30 curve, whatever that may mean. We have heard it was 11 30 feet to the hundred feet. This work is pretty well completed. The cliff was blown away and many tons of stone dumped in the river.

Now that the time of completion is nearing, the C. & O. are said to be sending their own men to help on certain contracts. The contractor is charged with the labor, but the laborers themselves are on the pay roll of the railroad company. After a vast amount of money has been expended on a new road, it is to the interest of the company to have the road making money as soon as possible, otherwise the amount invested lies dead.

When the road will be completed is still an absorbing topic. It seems certain that it will be completed along its whole length before another winter. The road is expected to reach Marlinton by about September 1. This in the judgment of men who know the condition the work is in.

The question of depot sites is raging in some sections. Opposite the Levels there are two sites either of which may be chosen. One is at the Kinnison farm and the other at the mouth of Stamping Creek. Ground has been condemned at the mouth of Locust Creek. There has been more siding by far provided at Marlinton than at any other place on the line. Every indication points to Marlinton as the most important town of this whole section.

ACADEMY.

Spring has come at last. This has been a hard winter but grass is about as early as usual.

Farmers have finished sowing oats, and a great deal of corn will be planted this week. Some was planted last week.

Rev W. J. Whitesell, the new Methodist minister, arrived last week with his family. He has made a very favorable impression.

Patrick Henry was hurt at his camp on Williams River last week by a log jumping from a slide and hitting him. He was getting along very well at last report.

Sheriff Hill has been indisposed for several days, and was no better Sunday.

Measles are plentiful in this part.

People of Pocahontas, let us support our county men in the coming Primary. Give us T. S. McNeel for Prosecuting Attorney. He was born and reared in the county, and is well qualified for the position. If we do not support our boys now, it certainly will be discouraging to the rising generation.

DUNMORE.

The hot weather is bringing out the toads and snakes.

Judge Moore is here with a new lot of railroad men and engineers.

Drummers are coming in thick.

Some of the road overseers have picked out some rocks and filled up some mud holes. A good thing; let the work go on.

Jacob K. Taylor, Mrs C. B. Swecker, Reece Pritchard, J. B. White, Mrs Belle Kerr, Mrs Dave Smith, are still on the sick list.

Rev J. W. McNeel preached at Dunmore and Green Bank Sunday.

John A. Taylor the Evangelist was at home a few days.

The first case in court that we know of tried before a jury of ladies was tried at Arbovale Saturday. It was ladies of the jury, instead of gentlemen of the jury.

Some seem to think that Yeager, Beard and Underwood will run ahead of the ticket.

We believe we will soon have telephone communication with Highland county.

We understand that E. L. Nottingham has bought the Cackley property at Dunmore.

HAVE YOU HEARD OF
The New Insurance and Annuity Policy of The Northwestern Mutual?

What is it? Look here:—

Say age 35 at issue. Amount say $10,000. Annual premium $340.70, less the large, unequaled DIVIDENDS of THE NORTHWESTERN MUTUAL.

SOME GUARANTEES AND PRIVILEGES:

1. Beneficiary to receive $400 annually (upon anniversary of insured's death), during a period of 30 years, a total of $12,000.

2. To receive, at end of 30th year, in addition to above 30 payments of $400 each, $10,000 in cash in one sum, a grand total of $22,000.

3. Should the Beneficiary die during said 30 years, the Contingent Beneficiary, whom the insured has the right to name at any time, will receive both the unpaid Annuities and said single sum of $10,000 in cash.

4. Should both Beneficiaries die, or should insured not have named a Beneficiary, such $10,000 will be paid to his estate at death.

5. Such policy may provide for 20 annuities instead of 30. So also insured may empower the Beneficiary to surrender the policy, at any date when an annuity is due, and receive said $10,000 in cash.

6. Insured is guaranteed Loan and Cash Values, paid-up or extended Insurance, also privilege to change Beneficiary and name a Contingent Beneficiary to succeed the Beneficiary, should death occur.

The above are half a dozen leading Guarantees in the contract of a great Corporation providing your widow the sum of $10,000, agreeing to pay thereon 4 per cent., free of taxes, for a term of 30 years, to guarantee, collect and pay over the interest, to become security for the principal, to return in addition, all the profits accruing in the transaction, and "back its bonds" for performance of contract by pledge of Assets securely invested, exceeding ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIVE MILLIONS OF DOLLARS.

Above contract may be paid for by one, five, ten, fifteen or twenty premiums, as insured may elect, or by annual premiums for life.

YOUNG ROCKEFELLER.

Personal Sketch of the Son of the Standard Oil Magnet.

While many in Wall street were chuckling over the accepted report that John D. Rockefeller, jr., had lost heavily in his initiative investments on the "Street" through the medium of Leather common, the reported "lamb" was jotting down on his own private books the results of a calculation which showed that he had gained a cool million.

Whichever way the Leather dealing went, the fact that he has entered the "Street" marks the beginning in the career of a man whom the veterans from now on will watch, with due regard for his millions and the way they will influence the market.

Mr. Rockefeller was elected a director of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Feb. 21, 1899. The fact was chronicled as his launching into business.

Rockefeller was prepared for college by private tutors. He entered Brown University when seventeen years old, and graduated with honors and without a single escapade during his course. His habits are extremely simple, and he uses neither tobacco nor alcoholic liquors.

At college he joined Alpha Delta Phi, one of the most exclusive of Greek letter fraternities. In athletic sports he was a mild enthusiast, playing with the "scrub" at football and acting as treasurer of the 'varsity team.

He entered his father's office immediately after his graduation two years ago. Here he served the apprenticeship for the work before him. He applied himself assiduously and gained the confidence of his father. With his election as a railroad director came a secretary and a clerk. He now has a private office with his father on the fourteenth floor of the Standard Oil Company building, on lower Broadway.

Punctually at 10 o'clock he appears at the office. Shortly before 1 o'clock he lunches at a Broadway cafe and returns to his desk and works until 3 or 4 o'clock. He is easily accessible to any one with legitimate reason for taking up his time. But he dislikes to be annoyed for trivial reasons, as he is a hard worker.

He has never been on the floor of the "Change," because he is not a member, although his father and Uncle William are the possessors of seats. He confines his business to the private transaction of his father and himself and is not personally interested in Standard Oil, it is said.

Few are the hours that he spends away from business or his home, No. 4 West Fifty-fourth street. He plays moderately well on the violin. Society has never claimed him simply because he refuses to be drawn into social life. He is somewhat of an equestrian, prefering morning rides in the Park.

His religious training was most careful, and, as his father did formerly, so he now teaches a class of boys in the Sunday-school of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, of which the Rev. William H. P. Faunce is pastor. His circle of friends is large, but intimates are few. He is of medium height, rather stockily built, with steel-blue eyes and brown hair. His face is long, with compressed lips and a firm chin, denoting tenacity.

(John D. Rockefeller, Jr.)

He inherits to a degree the energy, foresight and sagacity that have brought his father millions.

A WONDERFUL TOP.

It is Capable of Spinning More Than Forty-three Minutes.

A marvelious top, capable of spinning forty-three and one-half minutes and then remaining erect and still, has been constructed by Prof. Charles Jacobus, for many years superintendent of the New Brunswick, N. J., public schools, but now of Springfield, Mass. The inventor of this top guards it carefully and never allows it to pass out of his hands. He has spun it scores of times before scientists in New York, Philadelphia and many other cities. He spun it a short time ago before the Boston Society of Civil Engineers, who devoted one hour to watching it. The inventor calls it a scientific top, and when it is not in use he locks it up in a case and carries the key with him.

The wonderful top is made of bronze and looks like the small sized humming top the boys buy in the stores for five cents. It was constructed under the direction of Prof. Jacobus, who had the pieces made by several different mechanics. The top is spun by a string, and the inventor always spins it on a plate. He has a small piece of bronze, which he places over the upper end of the rod while he winds the cord around the same, as is done in a humming top; then he places it on the plate, holds it firmly by the little bronze attachment at the head and pulls the string. As the string leaves the top he removes the attachment suddenly and the top spins on.

The point of the top, upon which it spins, is about as large as the head of a small needle, and it is so true and delicate that the resistance is kept at a minimum. The inside of the top is so balanced that when the top ceases to revolve it will remain erect, unless it is jarred. The rod that runs through the centre is about an eighth of an inch in diameter and five inches from the sharp point on the bottom to the small cap on the head. The top body is three inches in diameter.

The whole secret of the top is believed to be in the perfect balance and the weights inside of the bronze body. The entire top weighs about four ounces, and is wound with about ten inches of string.

When Prof. Jacobus lectures before schools or educational institutions he has a habit of spinning the top and using it to illustrate the beauty of a [illegible] developed life.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

The School of Music

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Premedical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

CATARRH CAN BE CURED BY

Johnston's Sarsaparilla

QUART BOTTLES.

"DANGER IN THE EARTH AND AIR; DANGER EVERYWHERE."

A Wise and Venerable Doctor Talks about Advanced Science.

In a leading hotel, in a great city, a famous and aged physician was conversing. Listening to his wise and sententious discourse, were a group of well dressed men, evidently lawyers, business men and commercial travelers.

My firm belief, is "that medical science is certain yet to show that all diseases without exception are caused by invisible germs which are living organisms. Here is the germ of that terrible disease diphtheria. Here is the bacillus of typhoid fever; and here is the still more dreadful bacillus of tubercle which causes that most destructive of all diseases, consumption. This of that very common and supposed incurable disease, catarrh."

"I wish, Doctor," said the traveling man, "that you would tell us about catarrh. I have had it for years, and I am thoroughly discouraged."

The Doctor answered. "Catarrh, like diphtheria, consumption, typhoid fever, and a host of other diseases, is the result of a microbe invading the blood and attacking specially the mucous membrane. This foul and most disgusting disease is especially prevalent in the United States and it is rare to meet one who is not, or has not been troubled more or less with it. How often is he or she obliged to remain at home from pleasant entertainments, deprive themselves of many intellectual treats, from fear of the disagreeable odor arising from catarrhal affections. In its worst phase, the patient becomes loathsome both to himself and his friends.

"I believe," continued this great physician, "that the true way to heal catarrh is to medicate the blood. This can be done only by powerful alteratives which act as blood purifiers."

Betsy A. Marejt, of Manistee, Manistee Co., Mich., writes:

Dear Sirs:—For ten years I was a sufferer from general debility and chronic catarrh. My face was pale as death. I was weak and short of breath. I could hardly walk, I was so dizzy and had a ringing in my head all the time. My hands and feet were always cold. My appetite was very poor. On getting up in the morning, my head swam so I was often obliged to lie down again. I had awful pains in the small of my back. I had a continual feeling of tiredness. My muscular power was almost entirely gone, and I couldn't go half a dozen steps without stopping to rest, and often that much exercise caused me to have a pain in my side. It seemed as though the blood had left my veins. The doctors said my blood had all turned to water. I had given up all hope of ever getting well. I tried the best physicians in the state, but failed to get any relief. My husband got me a bottle of Johnston's Sarsaparilla. I took it, and then I bought another. When these had been used, I was somewhat improved in health. I continued its use, and felt I was growing stronger; my sleep was refreshing, and it seemed as if I could feel new blood moving through my veins. I kept on taking it, and now consider myself a well and rugged woman. I work all the time, and am happy. I am positive that the Sarsaparilla saved my life. The sick headaches I have had since childhood, have disappeared, and my catarrh has almost entirely left me. I cannot be too thankful for what Johnston's Sarsaparilla has done for me. I recommend all women who have sick headaches to use your Sarsaparilla.

This collection of paintings, varied in style and color-tone, will superbly adorn any home. They are 18 x 24 inches in size, are placed in a beautiful portfolio, and so arranged that they can be conveniently removed for framing.

An Art Educator

This magnificent collection will at once stimulate and cultivate a desire for the artistic. A complete description accompanies each painting, also a portrait and biographical sketch of the artist, an interesting account of his early studies, how he was led to take up art as a profession, in what schools and under what masters he received his instruction. It describes his trips and sojourns abroad, where and when his paintings were first exhibited, and the honors they received both in Europe and America. The titles of the artist's most notable paintings are also given, and where they are now. All this information is not only interesting, but exceedingly instructive.

SPECIAL PROPOSITION

To those who write at once we will send one of our original specimen sets by express, being the first sharp, clear impressions from the fresh, new plates. The price will be less than one-third their real value, and the payments easy, with the privilege of return if not satisfactory. Clip this special proposition and send with your letter.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

The School of Music

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Premedical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

SPRING.

Spring, with that nameless pathos in the air
That dwells with all things fair—
Spring, with her golden suns and silver rains,
Is with us once again.

But many gleams and shadows need must pass
Along the budding grass,
And weeks go by, before the enamoured south
Shall kiss the rose's mouth.

Still, there's a sense of blossoms yet unborn
In the sweet airs of morn:
One almost looks to find the very street
Grow purple at his feet.

At times a fragrant beeeze comes floating by,
And brings—you know not why—
A feeling as when eager crowds await
Before a palace gate

Some wondrous pageant; and you scarce would start
If from a beech's heart
A blue-eyed dryad, stepping forth, should say:
"Behold me, I am May!"

County Sketches

A Mountain Bear.

The timber lands of Wauchope County were coming in demand. For about one hundred and fifty years they had been owned by Wauchope families who had paid taxes on them with great regularity. As far as the enjoyment of these forest shades were concerned the sportsmen and sang-digger got all the good and let the land-poor farmer pay the taxes. Man after man carried these lands along, until each "abode his destined hour and went his way," and, beyond the consciousness of owning so many acres, it was a burden to him. Occasionally a field was cleared—the timber felled and burned—but this was too laborious to be very extensively practiced by the mountaineers, most of whom we were willing to leave less when they went their way, and have time to idle by the pleasant paths in which their lives were laid. They fostered their little herds, paying great attention to the care and comfort of the brute beasts, and the increase brought a small income each year, sufficient to pay the taxes, and buy coffee and tobacco and other necessaries of life.

A century ago there were no railroads anywhere and timber was valuable. The land did not sell for much money an acre, but money was so scarce that it commanded a good price. Then railroads were invented and by and by it became evident that the railroad was to be the important factor in marketing timber.

The timber that would be used was the timber growing along the line of some railway, and when the men of the mountain realized this, the timber lands dropped lower than they were in pioneer days. Then came restless spirits with surveying corps running lines for imaginary railroads until every hollow of any importance could boast of a road of three pollysyllables. The people got used to civil engineers and the last generation scornfully pulled up the stakes in their meadow planted by the engineers which their forefathers had held sacred.

With every new railroad timber would rise a little, and between times would be a drug on the market. Finally the unexpected happened, and some men with money came along, and after them the darkey and the mule, and a railroad was coming to the county within a year. The county saw strange things and were made acquainted with strange customs. In the old time if two men [illegible] together in [illegible] language, the whole county stopped work and discussed it. The courts took the matter up and considered it ponderously. Lengthy indictments were drawn and much law [illegible] was held.

Now in the railroad camps there was shooting, cutting, knocking down and dragging out, men dying from gunshot wounds, and the walking boss would come along: "Well, the law ought to know about this but I can't stop building railroad to fool with the courts. This railroad has got to be built."

A foreman and an Italian fell out at a speakeasy near a camp. The Italian plunged his knife through the skull of the foreman, and the foreman shattered six beer bottles over the head of the Italian. Result, both men came near dying. The people all said, "It's just railroad people," and did not trouble themselves to report it to the authorities, anp some say the authorities were glad of it.

And timber went up by leaps and bounds. Men ceased going to their neighbors and asking for a board tree, as a city man would ask another for a match. The spring the first shovel full of earth was thrown on the new railroad there was not a log-rolling or a log heap burned in the whole county, and the oldest inhabitant would tell how the site of the county seat was covered with waldnut trees and how they had been cut down and burned.

Strangers with money and strangers without money came to buy timber, and a citizen with a desirable piece of timber was pestered half to death by real estate men. There was a great setting of prices and giving of options, and occasionally a real estate man was able to act as the missing link between the man with the timber and the man with the money, and his rake-off was considerable.

Old man Hiram Powers had held his 4000 acres througn thick and thin at ten dollars an acre. He had gone security for a neighbor and had to pay the debt of $2500, and all the return he got was the neighbor's 4000 acres of land. His friends had pitied him, and it had taught old man Hiram a lesson. From that day forth he refused to sign his name to anything.

When asked for an option the old gentleman would very emphatically decline. "No, sir. I put my signature to a paper once and it cost me $2500, and I don't sign nothing. There's the land. You can have it for ten dollars an acre when you bring me the cash. No checks mind you." The real estate men found it impossible to move him, and all but one left him to find some one who would obligate himself to make a deed if they succeeded in handling it.

The one who considered the old man's word as good as his bond was Dr Smith, a young physician, who wanted to get rich faster than he could by taking live stock for his fees. After combining with a city real estate man, he had sold the land to a capitalist for twelve dollars per acre. He was out some hundreds of dollars and stood to make $8000 if Hiram Powers would meet them in the city and turn over a deed and receive the money.

When the doctor informed him that the money was waiting for him, old Hiram began to hesitate, and the signs indicated that he would not take the decisive step. The doctor knew such men, and he was in an unenviable position. He had builded upon making the deal and he wrote to his partner in the enterprise that they were about to fail.

The real estate man quietly cursed himself for putting anything in a deal where he was at the mercy of the land owner, but went to work with his head. The result was two letters to his correspondent. One was to the effect that the railroad company had made a deal with the Pennsylvania system and that the outcome was that the road would be abandoned. The doctor was given instructions to sell certain lands at once for the construction work on the railroad was now being maintained at the expense of A. K. VanAster, the millionaire landowner of Wauchope County in order that he could dispose of all his holdings. When this was done the grass would grow over the right of way, the tunnels fall in and the cross ties along the route be used for fuel.

The doctor let his mail [illegible] and [illegible] the letter and [illegible] a night [illegible] that the [illegible] would not get the railroad after all. No one had definite information. It was a case of "They snatched at a rumor and caught at a breath, of this one knoweth and that one saith." The county had been filled with skeptics who always averred that the county would never get a railroad. These had been silenced for a few months, but now they taiked and said, "I told you so," with redoubled vigor.

Powers heard it and came to Dr Smith. The two laid their heads together and got up the deed and started to the citw in the hope that the capitalist had not heard the news. They were bent on swindling now and that suited old Hiram. The deed was delivered, and he held the forty-thousand dollars in his hands for a few minutes before he put the money back in the bank.

The railroad mer worked on and completed the road, but Powers still retains the impression that he swindled the capitalist who bought his land.

And this how the real estate men became bears and put down the price of mountain lands.

A very Remarkable Remedy.

It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, says Druggist A. W. Sawtelle, of Hartford, Conn "A lady customer, seeing the remedy exposed for sale on my show case said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore,' and she became so euthusiastic over its merits that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he sank at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever.

THE HUMOROUS SIDE OF POLLTICS.

John J. Ingalls, in the Evening Post.

Chorles Sumner had no more sense of humor than a hippopotamus, but there was something excessively humorous about his colossal self-consciousness, of which it is no paradox to say he was apparently unconscious.

His egotism was inordinately vast, tho innocent in its simplicity. It was far from conceit and led to no disparagement of his associates. Indeed, I doubt if he ever instituted comparisons.

Probably Grant, whom he hated and abused, came the nearest to sizing him up when he said: "The reason Sumner doesn't believe in the Bible is because he didn't write it himself!"

He had large intellectual powers but not so large as he imagined. He had no influence on legislation. He was unable to endure opposition. If he could not have his own will he would do nothing. But this is not intended as an analysis of his work or his character. I started out to say that soon after I entered the Senate we were riding up the Avenue in a street car, and by way of conversation he asked me about my predecessor, Senator Pomeroy, who had met with an accident politically. He spoke of his early fidelity to the cause of freedom and the unusual degree to which he held the confidence of his associates till the impeachment of Andrew Johnson.

"Indeed," he continued with great gravity, "had he died before that time Kansas would have owed him a monument, and I should myself have pronounced his eulogy."

Roscoe Conkling in the Meridian of His Power.

The self-consciousness of Roscoe Conkling was quite as egregious as that of Mr Sumner, but his egotism was tinged with vanity and compounded with scorn, contempt, and disdain. He was a past master in the gentle art of making enemies and well versed in the vocabulary of derision and hatred. Hamlet might have had him in mind when, in his soliloquy, he mentioned, among other things that make life not worth living, "the proud man's contumely." The hinges of his knees were not pregnant and he had none of the thrift that follows fawning. When I first knew him he was in the meridian of his great powers. He possessed an extraordinary assemblage of physical and intellectual attributes that made him by far the most prominent, picturesque, and impressive figure in public life.

His presence was noble and commanding; his voice and elocution were superb; his bearing and address somewhat too formal, but marked by dignity and grace. His vocabulary was rich and ornamental, sometimes almost to the borders of the grotesque, but fertilized with apposite quotations and allusions that showed wide reading especially in poetry, romance, and the drama. Some hostile critic described one of his speeches as a "purple earthquake of oratory." But he was always heard with delight on any theme.

Had he possessed greater flexibility of temper, been less inexorable in his animosities, and learned how to forget where he could not forgive, there was no height he might not have reached, even the highest in the people's gift. But he would not flatter Neptune for his trident, nor Jove for his power to thunder.

In that state of moral typhoid which always follows great wars, an era of prodigacy, of sudden wealth at the price of honor, of Credit Mobilier and Star Route scandals, he was not contaminated. He walked through the furnace with no smell of fire upon his garments.

Toward the end of his career in the Senate he fell out with the newspapers and sometimes, when he arose to speak, every reporter in the press gallery, closing his [illegible] book, the whole squad would rush noisily out into the lobby, leaving story and without an [illegible].

He flushed at the insult, but speaking of journalism afterward, he was moved to remark in his propiatory way that the only people in the world authorized to use the first person plural, "we," in speaking of themselves, were "editors and men with tapeworms!"

His allusion to Governor Cornell as "that lizard on the hill," and to President Arthur, after his refusal to abdicate in favor of Mr Conkling, as the prize ox in American politics, and his refusal to speak for Blaine in the campaign of 1884 on the ground that he was "not engaged in criminal practice,' are well known illustrations of his methods of compelling his political associates to be either his vassals or his enemies.

But Jove did not always sit on Olympus. Sometimes he descended to the plain, tho never quite on terms of absolute equality with mankind. He was inclined to "jolly" those whom he did not feel disposed to bully.

When Thurman once asked him in a debate on some legal proposition why he kept looking at him all the time, Conkling replied with elaborate raillery that he turned to him as the source and fountain of the common law as, at the call of the Muezzin, the Musselman turned to Mecca.

The Genial Urbanity of Senator Evarts

William Maxwell Evarts came to the Senate in 1885, at the age of sixty-seven. He was a candidate in 1861, and waited twenty-four years for the realization of his ambition. The interval was oppulent in noble achievements at the bar, in statesmanship, in oratory, and the highest civic and social activities.

The Story of Washington and the Silver Dollar.

Probably the mot of Mr Evarts most widely flown concerns the apochryphal feat told of George Washington "jerking" a silver dollar across the Rappahanock.

The story goes that a party of tourists, visiting the haunts of Washington in Virginia, came to the spot, where the anecdote was related by some local antiquary, to illustrate the prodigious strengh of the man whom Providence made childless that he might become the Father of His Country.

Aside from the unlikelihood that the thrifty George would throw a silver dollar over the river when a pebble would have done as well, the distance was so great that the skeptics were incredulous, and another legend seemed on the point of being destroyed, when Mr Evarts came to its rescue with the suggestion that "a dollar went much farther in those days than now!"

The explanation is so simple and so satisfactory that the wonder is it occurred to no one before.

Among the guests at a dinner to Daniel Webster in New York was Dr Benjamin Brandreth, the inventor of a celebrated pill known by his name. Mr Evarts united these two men in a volunteer toast to "Daniel Webster and Benjamin Brandreth: the pillars of the Constitution!"

Objections had been filed with the Judiciary Committee to the confirmation of of a nomination on account of the dissolute habits of the appointee.

When the case came up for consideration the chairman called for the affidavits. The clerk produced a number from the files. Consulting his docket, Mr Edmunds thought there were more, and others were found. A search disclosed another batch that had been overlooked or mislaid.

"The papers in this case," said Mr Evarts, "appear to be more dissipated, if possible, than the candidate!"

Senator Evarts' Reply to his Critics.

Mr Evarts was a bon vivant, an inveterate diner out, and giver of most elaborate and artistic diners himself. To a lady who expressed surprise that one of such slender frame and fragile physique could endure so many feasts with their varying viands and different wines he replied that it was not so much the different wines that gave him trouble as the indifferent ones.

President Hayes was a total abstainer at home. Scoffers said he only drank the 'O. P. brands.' His State dinners, otherwise very elegant and costly, were served without wines. The only concession to conviviality was the Roman punch, flavored with Jamaica rum. Evarts was accustomed to allude to this course as "the life-saving station!"

Rising to address informally the guests at a Thanksgiving dinner, he began: "You have been giving your attention to a turkey stuffed with sage. You are now about to consider a sage stuffed with turkey."

When he was Secretary of State in the Cabinet of President Hayes the struggle for places in the diplomatic service was very active. As he was leaving the elevator at the close of a very busy day, he said the conductor since noon had "taken up a very large collection for foreign missions"; and when asked what had been done, he replied, "Many called, but few chosen."

As an orator Mr Evarts was not limpid. But he confounded the critics who condemned his long sentences by saying that, so far as his observation went, the people who objected to long sentences belonged to the criminal classes.

General Grant was popularly supposed to be habitually grave, reserved and taciturn, but on occasion was very vivacious in conversation with a keen sense of dry, quiet humor.

One evening, after a stag dinner at the White House, the company assembled in the library to smoke. Talk fell upon the happiest period of life—childhood, youth, manhood age.

Grant listened but said nothing till asked for his opinion.

"Well," he said after a pause, "I believe I would like to be born again," which indicated that he had found existance enjoyable all the way through.

Mr Edmund's Quotation of St. Paul.

One of Grant's Secretaries of the Navy was George M. Robeson, of New Jersey, for whom Senator Carpenter, of Wisconsin, a great jurist and advocate, conceived a violent dislike. His mildest definition of Robeson was that he was "a great lawyer among sailors, and a great sailor among lawyers.

Some one took Thurman to task for having referred rather contemptuously to the beneficiaries of a certain measure as "things."

"Things," replied Thurman testily, "why we are all things—" "To all men," interrupted Mr Edmunds before he could finish his sentence and the discussion ended.

Holman, of Indiana, for many years waged vigilant and unremitting war on amendments to appropriation bills, which gave him the name of the "Watchdog of the Treasury." He was very strong in his district and had an unusually long service, which gave him great power and influence in the House by his knowledge of the rules and practice.

Toward the end of his term an amendment was offered in which a near relative was very much interested. The familiar "I object" was not heard and the amendment went through with his support, whereupon a member sitting near exclaimed:

"'Tis sweet to hear the honest watch-dog's bark Bay deep-mouthed welcome as we draw near home.'"

Nothing brighter and more apt has been said in either House of Congress since the inauguration of Washington.

Good Blood!

Your heart beats over one hundred thousand times each day. One hundred thousand supplies of good or bad blood to your brain.

Which is it?

If bad, impure blood, then your brain aches. You are troubled with drowsiness yet cannot sleep. You are as tired in the morning as at night. You have no nerve power. Your food does you but little good.

Stimulants, tonics, headache powders, cannot cure you; but will. It makes the liver, kidneys, skin and bowels perform their proper work. It removes all impurities from the blood. And it makes the blood rich in its life-giving properties.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

To Hasten Recovery.

You will be more rapidly cured if you will take a laxative dose of Ayer's pills each night. They arouse the sluggish liver and thus cure biliousness.

A LEAF FROM MY NOTE-BOOK.

Here we are at Robert Gibson's. The beautiful garden spot referred to above narrows somewhat right here, but widens out just above here, and with its fertility and beauty presents to the eye of the onlooker much to attract his attention and incline him to pitch his tent in this vicinity. Robert is a clever man, and has, like many of his neighbors, heaven's second best gift to man—a good wife.

We pass the school house where during five months of the year the training of the "young idea how to shoot" goes on. Here is a large and commodious church stands inviting every one within its reach to bow down and worship the Lord his Maker.

Away to the left of us nestled in against the foot of a grand old mountain is Uncle Jim Gibson's residence. Mr Gibson has seen much of the cares and trials of this life. Two of his daughters live with him, his wife having gone on before him to the spirit world. He is kind and hospitable, and both able and willing to use you well. He feels sure that his visitors can make an occasional meal on what he lives on all the time. He is right about this. We wish we knew just what to say to Uncle Jim to induce him to be sure and make no mistake about being fully ready to "cross over Jordan into the sweet fields of Eden" when the time comes for him to go.

We also have a word of good cheer and pleasantry for his son John Gibson, who lives near by his father. We think as we pass of that bright-eyed little boy of his, who like some of the other little folks of Elk gave us some money for the preacher not long since. We want John also to do well for both worlds.

Away up the mountain side lives James Jackson. He has grown large and fat from laughing or otherwise. We will not be obliged to wrestle with him as he will outweigh us, if were both put on the scales. We hope however that he will not mind our foolishness, as—

"A little nonsense now and then
Is relished by the best of men."

We get in earnest in reference to our "present peace and eternal welfare."

We wish those well whom we pass as in gloom up this ravine towards the heights of the gigantic Knob, without mentioning names. Here we hasten by John Jackson's. He has built an addition to his house. We certainly wish him well in his hard struggle to live. We often think of many a poor fellow who has such a hard time in this world, and then after all this if he were to miss heaven at last, how very sad it would be. Our prayer is that John with the rest of us get to heaven—that he will be rich in the heavenly world.

Still to the left we keep looking. Now J. H. Shelton's residence attracts our attention. He and his are from Bath County, Va. They show very plainly the commendable politeness of Virginia. We pass them in haste as we fall in with some others going to Marlinton to Court. We still keep prominent in our mind the religious wellfare of all, and breathe a prayer to Heaven for them as we go b.

"Little" Jim Gibson lives up a hollow hollow here still to the left. He is not so little either in body or mind, but we presume he is like the man who said he was little when they named him. You can get honey here at Mr Gibson's nearly any time, and it will be good. We scarcely know how we came so far up this creek without making mention of the delightful honey so plentiful in this section. This is a clever man and makes things that he takes hold of come to pass. He is doing well; we also wish him well, and hope that he and his large and interesting family will shine with the rest of us by and by, "brighter than the sun in the kingdom of our Father."

We look up this run farther still past Rendolph Mandrew's and Mr Rider's. Mr Rider is badly crippled; we hope he is making the proper preparation to walk when people will never be lame.

Up near an elevation is a house [illegible] Little Jake [illegible] right, Jake. We wish you much happiness in this life and pure unalloyed happiness in the world to come.

WHO TO VOTE.

The Democratic Executive Committee adopted the following qualifying clause:

"All Democrats and all others who wish to affiliate with the Democratic party in the nomination and election of county officers are invited to vote in this primary and their voting will be construed to be a promise and a pledge to support the nominees of this primary at the general election; but every one voting must be a legal voter of this county, entitled to cast a vote at the general election.

This leaves room for prohibitionists, Populists and Independent Republicans to have a chance in selecting county officials. We are glad to see our Republican friends at our primary, but we have seen some who have been active in our primaries and then take a hand in their own county conventions, trying to be both flesh and fowl.

At the request of the chairman of the County Executive Committee we warn all men who are here by reason of their being a work on the railroad in this county. The section referred to reads: "Nor shall any person in the employ of any incorporated company, or of this State, be deemed a resident of any county or of any district, by reason of being employed in said county or district."

Waitman T. Willey died at Morgantown May 2[illegible], aged [illegible] years. Born in 1811. Previous to the war he was a prominent Whig orator and was a member of the Virginia Convention, spoke and voted against secession and refused to sign the ordinance. He was the author of the West Virginia State Constitution; served several terms as U. S. Senator and then spent many years as clerk of the courts of Monongalia County. For his great ability and firm adherence to whatever he deemed to be the right, his fellow citizens of all parties regarded him with high esteem and easily as honoring him as the foremost man of his day in the history of our State.

One of the canards that moved the people most deeply last Saturday in the town election was that one of the leading candidates had [illegible] surreptitiously, maliciously, feloniously, unlawfully milked another man's cow. It was hard to down and kept cropping up in the most unexpected places.

There seems to be no doubt but that the West Virginia Paper and Pulp Company will establish a sawmill at the mouth of Leather bark with a capacity of 100,000 feet daily. This is built to cut into lumber that timber on their lands which can not be used for pulp. This means much for the county, as a town of several thousand people will soon be built about such an industry.

Col R. S. Turk, as Editor of the Staunton Spectator and Vindicator has had a series of articles on the wealth of Pocahontas County, calling attention to the timber, iron ore, coal and limestone. The people of this section appreciate this work on the part of Col. Turk. No one knows the country better than he, having once been the leading lawyer of the county. He was largely instrumental in attracting the attention of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company to the vast quantities of spruce in this county, and acted as attorney in the purchases which made the additional inducement needed to bring the railroad.

Rev James Hayes Dead.

Rev James Hayes, a minister well and widely known in Monroe, Greenbrier and Pocahontas, died April 26 at St Clare, Tenn., aged about 66 years.

His entire ministerial life of 38 years was devoted to the service of home evangelization, among the mountains of West Virginia and East Tennessee, and he seems never to have become weary of his obscure but important and successful service. The story of his life suitably told, would be more interesting than a romance and far more edifying. He was a nephew of the late Mrs Mary Dunlap and received his preparation for college at the Hillsboro Academy while conducted by the Rev M. D. Dunlap.

Town Election.

The town officers were elected last Saturday. There were two tickets for Mayor and Recorder. The successful one was:

For Mayor:
Andrew Price,
For Recorder:
F. H. Kincaid,

There was no contest over the councilmen. They were elected as follows:

L. M. McClintic,
W. A. Bratton,
Uriah Bird,
H. A. Yeager,
Dr J. M. Cunningham.

Beware of a Cough

A cough is not a disease, but a symptom. Consumption and bronchitis, which are the most dangerous and fatal diseases, have for their first indication a persistent cough, and if properly treated as soon as this cough appears are easily cured. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has proven wonderfully successful, and gained its wide reputation and extensive sale by its success in curing diseases which cause coughing. If it is not beneficial it will not cost you a cent. For sale by—

NEGRO SHOT AND KILLED.

John Robinson Kills Frank Reed at Pitts' Camp No 2.

Thursday Frank Reed was instantly killed on the grade of the railroad two miles above Marlinton by John Robinson. Both were negro laborers in the employ of John L. Pitts, the well known railroad contractor. After the killing Robinson came to Marlinton and gave himself up, where he is now waiting a preliminary hearing.

The particulars of the case as gathered at the inquest and from eye witnesses are as follows. Both left the camp together to go to work on the grade up the river. Reed was in a bad [illegible] mood, and he picked up a round rock weighing a pound or more and ordered Robinson to walk in front of him. Robinson was not willing to do this, as there was an old feud between them of several months standing. They progressed about a mile in this manner, quarreling, Robinson walking with his eye on Reed the whole time.

They reached a gang of men who were at work where Robinson says Reed belonged. He followed Robinson through this group of men, carrying the rock in his hand. He said, "John, I'm going to cut your guts out this morning or breakfast in hell."

Robinson told him not to follow him farther. That if he was going on up the work to pass on and leave him alone. He repeated the expression above, and as he was advancing Robinson pulled a pistol from his pocket and shot him, killing him instantly. Robinson fired three shots in quick succession, two of which took effect, inflicting two wounds either of which would have been fatal. The first shot entered the right arm and ranged across the body, cutting off the large artery at the heart. The other shot was in the other arm at exactly the same place and ranged downward. The weapon used was a 44 calibre revolver.

In point of character Robinson has greatly the advantage. Robinson being said to be the best negro in camp, and Reed the worst. Reed has been in trouble ever since he came here and has the reputation of being a bad negro. He has been in jail twice at this place and some of his companions say that he claims to have shot a negro woman and a white man in the South. Some weeks ago the walking boss S. S. Butler disarmed him. At another time he knocked a man senseless with a pick handle. He is the same man who fired at a man in a crap game and ran away from the camp to hide, and was discovered by the glint of the moonlight on the barrel of his pistol. Squire Bird sent him to jail, and he was released on condition that he leave the county. Instead of doing so he went back to camp where he got work. He was considered a very fine hand.

On the other hand Robinson has been accorded more privileges than any negro in the employ of Mr L. H. Hankins, who runs the camp. He has entrusted him with considerable sums of money and sent him to North Carolina to bring on hands to work on the railroad. Owing to the trust imposed on him in this and other ways it was reported that he was a foreman, but that was a mistake. He has been about Marlinton a great deal where some disliked him, but the only fault we have ever heard specified was that he was a little "stuck up." Robinson is 27 years old, is from Charlotte, N. C., and claims to have never been in a scrape in his life. Reed was 22 years old and came from Salisbury, N. C.

W. H. Grose, J. P., came down from Huntersville to hold the inquest. He summoned the jury as follows: S. J. Boggs, A. B. Kincaid, J. W. Yeager, J. M. Yeager, F. P. Anderson, Ashby Slaven. The body was found where it had had fallen, with gangs of men working near it. Drs. Price, Brown and Cunningham were present and made post-mortem examination and traced the course of the balls.

A large crowd of people attended from Marlinton. The jury returned a verdict to the effect that the deceased had come to his death from two wounds from a pistol unlawfully inflicted by the prisoner. The prisoner was remanded to jail. The body was buried at the expense of the county.

DILLEY'S MILL.

Warm and dry.

Miss Carrie Moore returned to Dr Lockridge's last week.

The concert at Cove Hill, given by A. L. Dilley, was largely attended.

Rev Pullen preached at Mt Zion Sunday. His text was Luke vii. 47.

Don't forget to come to the auction at Huntersville Saturday, May 12.

Willie Dilley is hauling supplies for Dan O'Connell.

Corn planting is the order of the day.

ARBOVALE.

Joe Bussard and his mule were around assessing the people last week.

Those on the sick list are Mrs French Sutton, Pearl Arbogast, a child of Jess Orndorff, a child of Bud Arbogast, Will Arbogast, Paul Hevener, and Brown Arbogast.

The people are busy planting corn and potatoes. W. B. Freeman is going to plant about four acres of potatoes this year. We believe it would be a good thing if every body would plant more potatoes.

The woods have been afire for several days.

Drummers have been unusually thick lately.

Dr Joe Hannah is at home from the railroad.

The measles have about died down again in this part.

Arbovale is situated just one mile from Possom Hollow and fourteen miles from that sink hole they call Frost.

Died, April 23, Grace, daughter of Mr and Mrs Joseph Riley, aged 9 years. She is resting in the arms of Jesus, where we will meet in the sweet by and by.

Died, at Top of Allegheny, May 3, 1900, Mr Jessie Rexroad, aged 80 years.

James Hively was in this part last week selling washing machines hog ringers, harness riveters, etc.

W. W. Sutton has returned from the Horton lumber camps.

Emery Conrad is laid up with rheumatism, but we hope to see him out in a few days.

Rev Callison delivered a fine sermon to a large congregation at Arbovale church Friday night.

A nice crowd of boys and girls went over to the grade Sunday to see if the railroad was done.

The people of this community are praying that the hand of the Angel of Death may be removed from this neighborhood.

Willie E. Arbogast is very sick at this time with la grippe.

BUCKEYE.

Corn planting and sheep shearing in full blast.

Prof A. is mixing paste and chopping beef for J. J. Strang.

Any persons knowing the whereabouts of our Doctor D. will please make it known to the Bureau of Information.

Say girls, where is Grimes the sweetheart specialist?

We are glad to hear that Mr and Mrs O. H. Kee will be home this week.

The Hefner school closed the 4th of this month. Owing to the condition of public health in that community the school was suspended for a number of weeks, consequently interest was abated, but through zeal on the part of the teacher interest was reclaimed, the school taught and closed, with entire satisfaction to all.

Rev J. S. Stump of Parkersburg will preach in the M. E. church on Swago May 16 at 7 p. m.; also the following night in the M. P. church at Buckeye the same hour. Mr Stump is a noble worker for God and humanity, stands on the uppermost round in the shining ladder of Christianity, and of pleasing taste in pulpit address. Thus we desire the people to give ear to his exalted opinions on the Bible truths.

Miss Lena Duncan will start for the Johns Hopkins Hospital today hoping to get relief from the terrible burns she received a year ago. She has our profound sympathy. We indeed are very sorry to hear her condition is such as will require a trip to the city hospital.

SILLY SAM.

List of Democratic Conventions.

Convention to select delegates to National Convention, Charleston May 16.

Senatorial Convention, Eighth District, Montgomery, Fayette County, July 16.

EDRAY.

We had a very cold snap a few few days since, and we fear the fruit is greatly damaged.

Singing at the church every Thursday night. Come one and all and let us make it a grand success.

Misses Lena Moore and Leva Gay are taking music lessons at Marlinton, under the instruction of Miss Glenna Hill.

E. H. Moore, the enterprising drummer for Armstrong, Cater & Co., was in town last week.

Cutlip Geiger's little girls have the measles.

Mrs E. B. Vaughn and two little sons are visiting friends and relatives in this part. Mrs Vaughn will soon join her husband in their Ronceverte home.

Willie and Emery Miller, of Rocky Point, spent Saturday and Sunday in this part.

William Wooddell and wife were visiting at Mr Geiger's last week. They moved to Elk Saturday.

Harlow Waugh is expected home from Baltimore this week.

If that young man from Marlinton, who makes his appearance here so often, could be bought for what he is worth and sold for what he thinks he is worth, how the money would jingle in somebody's pocket.

Mrs Lura Price is very sick at this writing. Also Reed Moore.

We are sorry Rev W. T. Price has resigned his usual work. In him we lose a good preacher, but we hope he will be able to be with us occasionally.
OLIVET.

GREEN BANK.

The frost last week killed about all the fruit, and it is too late for another crop.

Mrs W. J. Yeager was in town for a week and returned Sunday to Travelers Repose.

Dr and Mrs C. L. Austin are off to Lewisburg.

Mrs James Streach has the measles at this time.

J. H. Curry says, if elected Justice, he will serve, but he is not a candidate.

Mr Bennett, of Pendleton, has moved into J. H. Patterson's shop.

We want all the young men and old men in reach to attend Sunday school so that we can have a large male class.

Forest Warwick is building a house on his farm and he will soon be ready to move into it.

Candidates Moore, Bird, Bratton and McClintic were in town last week.

Col Dan O'Connel's teams and camp outfit went to the camp at the head of Greenbrier last week to commence operations again.

Oh Yes! Could not some one fix the bridges between Green Bank and Dunmore? It is not safe to travel the road after night.

Mrs P. D. Yeager is very low at this time, and is not expected to recover.

Measles and grippe are raging.
MRS POOR.

CIRCULAR OF INFORMATION.

CHESAPEAKE AND OHIO RAILWAY CO.
TRAFFIC DEPARTMENT.

RICHMOND, VA., April 20, 1900.

We are receiving, from various sources, complaints that parties can not make progress in locating Lumber Mills, Tanneries, Wood Working Factories, &c., in the section of the Greenbrier River Valley, because of lack of information as to freight rates, facilities, &c.

This is to advis, therefore, that the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Company is interested in the construction of a STANDARD GUAGE LINE following the Greenbrier River from Whitcomb to a point at or near the headwaters of the Greenbrier in Pocahontas County, W. Va., a distance of one hundred miles, more or less, which will make accessible a large area of timber lands, covered with oak, pine, spruce, hemlock, and other woods, also large quantities of bark.

The question of the rates upon products of the forest has not yet been fully determined, but it is the desire of the Company to secure the location of mills, tanneries, &c. &c. and to this end communications addressed to Mr E. D. Hotchkiss, General Freight Agent, Richmond, Va., applying for rates, &c., and other information, will receive prompt attention.

CATARRH CAN BE CURED BY

Johnston's Sarsaparilla

QUART BOTTLES.

"DANGER IN THE EARTH AND AIR; DANGER EVERYWHERE."

A Wise and Venerable Doctor Talks about Advanced Science.

In a leading hotel, in a great city, a famous and aged physician was conversing. Listening to his wise and sententious discourse, were a group of well dressed men, evidently lawyers, business men and commercial travelers.

My firm belief, is "that medical science is certain yet to show that all diseases without exception are caused by invisible germs which are living organisms. Here is the germ of that terrible disease diphtheria. Here is the bacillus of typhoid fever; and here is the still more dreadful bacillus of tubercle which causes that most destructive of all diseases, consumption. This of that very common and supposed incurable disease, catarrh."

"I wish, Doctor," said the traveling man, "that you would tell us about catarrh. I have had it for years, and I am thoroughly discouraged."

The Doctor answered. "Catarrh, like diphtheria, consumption, typhoid fever, and a host of other diseases, is the result of a microbe invading the blood and attacking specially the mucous membrane. This foul and most disgusting disease is especially prevalent in the United States and it is rare to meet one who is not, or has not been troubled more or less with it. How often is he or she obliged to remain at home from pleasant entertainments, deprive themselves of many intellectual treats, from fear of the disagreeable odor arising from catarrhal affections. In its worst phase, the patient becomes loathsome both to himself and his friends.

"I believe," continued this great physician, "that the true way to heal catarrh is through the blood. This can be done only by powerful alteratives which act as blood purifiers."

Betsy A. Marcjt, of Manistee, Manistee Co., Mich., writes:

Dear Sirs:—For ten years I was a sufferer from general debility and chronic catarrh. My face was pale as death. I was weak and short of breath. I could hardly walk, I was so dizzy and had a ringing in my head all the time. My hands and feet were always cold. My appetite was very poor. On getting up in the morning, my head swam so I was often obliged to lie down again. I had awful pains in the small of my back. I had a continual feeling of tiredness. My muscular power was almost entirely gone, and I couldn't go half a dozen steps without stopping to rest, and often that much exercise caused me to have a pain in my side. It seemed as though the blood had left my veins. The doctors said my blood had all turned to water. I had given up all hope of ever getting well. I tried the best physicians in the state, but failed to get any relief. My husband got me a bottle of Johnston's Sarsaparilla. I took it, and then I bought another. When these had been used, I was somewhat improved in health. I continued its use, and felt I was growing stronger; my sleep was refreshing, and it seemed as if I could feel new blood moving through my veins. I kept on taking it, and now consider myself a well and rugged woman. I work all the time, and am happy. I am positive that the Sarsaparilla saved my life. The sick headaches I have had since childhood, have disappeared, and my catarrh has almost entirely left me. I cannot be too thankful for what Johnston's Sarsaparilla has done for me. I recommend all women who have sick headaches to use your Sarsaparilla.

THE "CONFEDERATE VETERAN."

Low Club Rates Given With the Pocahontas Times.

The growth of the Confederate Veteran, published by S. A. Cunningham at Nashville, Tenn., is remarkable. Its circulation of eighty-four issues, monthly, aggregated to January, 1900, 1,195,452 copies. Average for 1893, 7683; 1894, 10,148; 1895, 12,916; 1896, 13,444; 1897, 16,175; 1898, 19,100; 1899, 20,166.

Subscriptions for the Veteran will be received at this office. It and the Times will be sent for one year at the club rate of $1.50. By application to the Pocahontas Times copies of the Veteran will be sent to our veteran friends who are unable to subscribe.

The editor of the Farm Journal asks: 'Why have a mortgage on the farm, poor crops, rheumatism, sour bread, grip, leak in the roof, hole in the pocket, skeleton in the closet, or any other pain or trouble when you can get the Farm Journal for 1900, 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904, nearly five years, by paying all arrearages and a year in advance for the Pocahontas Times?' This you can do if you speak quick. But only a limited number of Farm Journals can be had, so pay up before the last one is gone.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by the inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars.

THESE photogravures represent paintings that have been sold for thousands of dollars, and others that are fresh from the artists' brush. They would sell rapidly at any art store at $5 each, but they can be purchased only from us, as we absolutely control the copyrights.

The Masterpieces of twenty-five of our Greatest American Artists now for the first time available in a single collection

Beautify Your Home

This collection of paintings, varied in style and color-tone, will superbly adorn any home. They are 18 x 24 inches in size, are placed in a beautiful portfolio, and so arranged that they can be conveniently removed for framing.

An Art Educator

This magnificent collection will at once stimulate and cultivate a desire for the artistic. A complete description accompanies each painting, also a portrait and biographical sketch of the artist, an interesting account of his early studies, how he was led to take up art as a profession, in what schools and under what masters he received his instruction. It describes his trips and sojourns abroad, where and when his paintings were first exhibited, and the honors they received both in Europe and America. The titles of the artist's most notable paintings are also given, and where they are now. All this information is not only interesting, but exceedingly instructive.

SPECIAL PROPOSITION

To those who write at once we will send one of our original specimen sets by express, being the first sharp, clear impressions from the fresh, new plates. The price will be less than one-third their real value, and the payments easy, with the privilege of return if not satisfactory. Clip this special proposition and send with your letter.

Say age 35 at issue. Amount say $10,000. Annual premium $340.70, less the large, unequaled DIVIDENDS of THE NORTHWESTERN MUTUAL.

SOME GUARANTEES AND PRIVILEGES:

1. Beneficiary to receive $400 annually (upon anniversary of insured's death), during a period of 30 years, a total of $12,000.

2. To receive, at end of 30th year, in addition to above 30 payments of $400 each, $10,000 in cash in one sum, a grand total of $22,000.

3. Should the Beneficiary die during said 30 years, the Contingent Beneficiary, whom the insured has the right to name at any time, will receive both the unpaid Annuities and said single sum of $10,000 in cash.

4. Should both Beneficiaries die, or should insured not have named a Beneficiary, such $10,000 will be paid to his estate at death.

5. Such policy may provide for 20 annuities instead of 30. So also insured may empower the Beneficiary to surrender the policy, at any date when an annuity is due, and receive said $10,000 in cash.

6. Insured is guaranteed Loan and Cash Values, paid-up or extended Insurance, also privilege to change Beneficiary and name a Contingent Beneficiary to succeed the Beneficiary, should death occur.

The above are half a dozen leading Guarantees in the contract of a great Corporation providing your widow the sum of $10,000, agreeing to pay thereon 4 per cent., free of taxes, for a term of 30 years, to guarantee, collect and pay over the interest, to become security for the principal, to return in addition, all the profits accrueing in the transaction, and "back its bonds" for performance of contract by pledge of Assets, securely invested, exceeding ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIVE MILLIONS OF DOLLARS.

Above contract may be paid for by one, five, ten, fifteen or twenty premiums, as insured may elect, or by annual premiums for life.

VOL. 18, NO. 43 MARLINTON, WEST VIRGINIA, MAY 17, 1900. $1.00 PER Y

West Virginia University,

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

The School of Music

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Pre-medical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

"WHITE SUPREMACY."

Senator Tillmann's Amazingly Frank Story of the Surpression of the Negro Vote, in Leslie's Weekly.

The overwhelming majority of the white people of South Carolina, grown desperate at the misrule and robbery to which they had been subjected, and with their angry passions aroused by the threatened destruction of our civilization set to work in January, 1876, to redeem the State at any and all hazards. The Democratic party was reorganized, and its one battle cry was "white supremacy." The work of reorganization was soon rapidly under way in all the upper portion of the State. In many of the lower counties the whites were so down-hearted and depressed at the hopelessness of the struggle that they made little or no movement; but in the Piedmont, where the Hampton canvass had its beginning, there was inaugurated one of the most remarkable campaigns in history.

The whites were organized rapidly into military companies and armed, for the negro militiamen, armed and well equipped, numbered upward of 8,000 and were frequently on the move to and fro from the places of regimental rendezvous. There were not lacking threats and actions by them to terrorize white women and children and enrage the white men. The whites were in a minority of 30,000 voters in the State, but this had no effect on the leaders. The Democrats adopted the red shirt as a uniform and followed Hampton as he went from county to county, marching in procession as his escort. As many as 3,000 red-shirted horsemen were seen in different counties riding across country from Court House to Court House. When Chamberlain began his canvass his first meeting at Edgefield, where the negroes were two to one was captured by 1,500 in red shirts under Mart Gary, a Confederate Brigadier, and the boldest leader of the whites in the State. A division of time was demanded and the negroes were addressed by the Democratic speakers, who told Chamberlain, who was running for reelection, of the villainies which he and his associates had perpetrated.

This was the first fruits of the new policy, and the effect over the State was electrical. Cowed and crestfallen at being thus branded in the presence of his black dupes, the Governor left Edgefield never to return, and after a similar experience at Midway, in Barnwell County, a week later, he quit the canvass and began to lay plans for the use of the United States troops as the only hope left. The Hamburg riot which occurred the 7th of July gave the excuse, and a regiment of troops was sent into the State under Gen. Ruger. The Ellenton riot followed in September and more troops were sent. I was in both riots, but space forbids any details. Hampton in his campaign urged persuasion and peaceful methods. Gary and Butler, on the contrary, advocated the "shotgun policy," and favorite maxims of the former were: "Fight the devil with fire." "An ounce of fear is worth a ton of persuasion." The respect for the State Constitution and the laws which had been thrust upon the people at the point of the bayonet by the carpet-bag government was overthrown at once. Oat's became idle words without force or meaning. The purpose was to carry the election at any and all hazards, and in any and all way necessary. As the election approached, the sky at night was lit up by the light of blazing gin houses, the work of incendiaries.

Having such a large majority to overcome and knowing that in only about two-thirds of the State the whites were outbased, there was no scruples on election day as to how the votes got into the boxes and how many times a man voted, or whether the negroes were allowed to vote—as they were not in many instances. The people were wrought up to such a pitch of desperation that life was not worth having under conditions which existed. It was openly declared to be purpose to have a white man's government or a military government, and in those counties where troops were stationed the Democratic majorities were greatest. At the election Hampton had more votes and was declared elected but Grant sustained Chamberlain's claim, and the troops held the State House from the first week in December until Hayes was inaugurated, in March following.

There was a dual government and a dual Legisture, but Hampton's government alone received any money from the taxpayers and the settlement of Hayse's title to the Presidency by the Electorial Commission carried with it the agreement to with draw the troops. Then the carpet-bag government collapsed in a night, and each thief who could get away hurriedly left the State. The work of rehabilitation and restoration was slow. The State's credit was for the time ruined, but with labor and patience order came out of chaos, the debt was refunded, and all legal obligations met; honest Judges took the place of bribe takers who had disgracee the bench. There were so many indictments in the State courts against the county officers, legislators and other Republicans that by arrests and resignations nearly all the offices were soon in the hands of decent white men. There were hundreds of indictments against white men in the United States courts for riot, murder, intimidation, &c., and finally an understanding was reached that the whites would make an exchange of prisoners so to speak, and all prosecutions on both sides were dropped.

In the campaign of 1878 there was a more or less determined effort on the part of the negroes to regain their lost power, but the whites swept everything by the same methods used in 1876, in a modified degree. It did not require as drastic measures to hold the State as it had to capture it. In 1880 the negroes made a feeble spasmodic attempt, and then, with the enactment of the "Eight-Box law," which was a modified form of educational qualification, all organized effort to overthrow the white or Democratic party ceased; and from that time until 1895 when the new Constitution requiring an educational qualification for suffrage was adopted, the negro vote ceased to be a factor in South Carolina politics. Very many of them never took the trouble to go the polls at all, and when they did go it made no difference. In 1876 the whites had voted along with the negroes for a Constitutional two-mill school tax. In 1895 the convention, composed of 154 whites and 6 negroes, increased this to three mills. South Carolina now leads the South in education and manufactures. Its credit is such that its 4½ per cent bonds are at 120. Its negro population is as happy and contented and as prosperous as any other State in the Union.

The suppression of the negro vote, first by force and fraud and later by Constitutional methods, has been the subject of much adverse criticism by those who knew nothing of the horrors of carpet-bag rule; but those who participated the struggle to wrest the State from the band of robbers who had used the ignorant and debased negro vote to waste our substance and destroy our civilization have no apologies to make, and will leave to the impartial historian of the future the question as to whether the end justified the means. The people of South Carolina do not doubt what the verdict will be, neither do they care.

COCAINE DID IT.

Doctor Suicides by Use of Chloral Habit—Second Attempt Succeeded.

Charleston Gazette.

Addison, W. Va., May 7.—Dr Lyman Eugene Wycoff, who a year ago tried to commit suicide at Benwood, where he was located for the practice of medicine, killed himself here a few nights ago by the use of cocaine, morphine, chloral, and amyl nitrate. He had practiced medicine in Benwood, Mannington, Grafton, and at various places in Randolph, Tucker, and Pendleton counties, and came here two weeks ago from Romulus, N. Y., where his mother and little son resides. His wife, from whom he has been separated several years, lives at Franklin, W. Va.

Several years ago he was in partnership with Dr Judy, at Harman, W. Va., and accusing Judy with intimacy with his wife, shot and badly wounded him. He claims Judy did him up in business and taught him to use cocaine In his will, in which he left several thousand dollars' worth of property to his wife in trust for their son, he consigned Dr Judy to "the hottest portion of hell, to be punched up with Roman javalines and forever haunted by my sad and heart-broken spirit." He consigned to purgatory others in Randolph County, who, he said, had conspired to bring about his ruin and disgrace.

He left a scrap of paper near him when he died, on which was written:

April 29, 1900—I swear before God that this is the first cocaine I have used since November 22, 1899, and only a small amount of morphine—two drachms of morphine a month. Long ago, two years, I used one ounce every one or two days.

DR L. E. WYCHOFF.

In his hip was found a hypodermic needle, with evidences that it had been used a great deal. He seemed broken-hearted because his wife refused to return and live with him.

SOME MORE AUCTION TALK.

Uncle Abraham while the crowd was in waiting for the auctioneer to take the block, continued his talk, as follows:

What does it matter tho as yet you have found no treasure, nor has any rich relation left you a legacy; be not out of heart, for diligence is the mother of good luck, and God gives all things to industry.

Then plough deep while sluggards sleep,
And you shall have corn to sell and keep.

Work while it is called to-day, for you know not how much you may be hindered to-morrow; which makes Poor Richard say, One today is worth two to-morrows; and, further, Have you somewhat to do to-morrow? Do it to-day.

If you were a servant would you not be ashamed that a good master should catch you idle. Are you then your own master? Be ashamed to catch yourself idle, as Poor Dick says. When there is so much to be done for yourself, your family, be up by peep of day! Let not the Sun look down and say, "Inglorious here he lies." Handle your tools without mittens! Remember that 'the cat in gloves catches no mice.'

'Tis true there is much work to be done, and perhaps you are weak handed; but stick to it steadily and you will see great effects; for constant dropping wears away stones; and by diligence and patience the mouse ate in two the cable; 'little strokes fell great oaks.

Methinks I hear some of you say, 'Must a man afford himself no leisure?' I will tell thee, my friend, what Poor Richard says. Employ thy time well if thou meanest to gain leisure; and since thou art not sure of a minute, throw not away an hour. Leisure is time for doing something useful; this leisure the diligent man will obtain, but the lazy man never; so that as Poor Richard says, A life of leisure and a life of laziness are two things. Do you imagine that sloth will afford you more comfort than labor? No! For as Poor Richard says, Troubles springs from idleness and grievous toil from needless ease. Many without labor would live by their wits, but they will break for want of capital,—not having wits enough; whereas industry gives comfort and plenty and respect. Fly pleasures and they'll follow you. The diligent spinner has a large shift; and—

Now I have a sheep and a cow
Everybody bids me good morrow,

All which is well said by Poor Richard. But with our industry we must likewise be steady, settled, and careful, oversee our own affairs with our own eyes, and not trust too much to others; for as Poor Richard says:

I never saw an oft removed tree
That throve so well as that that settled be.

And again, Three removes are as bad as a fire; and again, Keep thy shop and thy shop will keep thee; and again, If you would have your business done, go; if not send; and again:

He that by the plow would thrive
Himself must either hold or drive.

And again, The eye of the master, will do more work than both his hands; and again, Want of care does us more damage than want of knowledge; and again, Not to oversee workmen is to leave them your purse open.

An Indignant Poem on the Queen's Irish Soldiers.

J. A. Hobson agrees with Professor Goldwin Smith in his new work on "The War in South Africa." Dr Smith has declared:

None of my English friends and correspondents has ever doubted what would be the issue of a war in which the entire forces of the British empire were opposed to those of a population not half as large as the population of Liverpool. The Boers have put into the field decrepitude and childhood. They have no reserve. We shall win; and, having won, we shall too, probably, reap in the judgment of posterity a measure of the same glory which we reaped by the burning of Joan of Arc. We shall be fortunate if we escape the guilt of opening an era of unscrupulous rapacity and violence which might throw back for a century the progress of moral civilization.

The part of the shamrock decorated soldiers in this war against the Boers has inspired Ernest Crosby to exclaim in the current number of the Conservator:

Sword of the Irish, tempered by the sun
Of torrid Hindostan and by the snows
Of chill Quebec, who are the various foes,
Or north or south or east or west; undone
By your stern prowess? Do proud tyrants run
Before your bloody blade, or is it those Whom Britain longs to crush that you oppose,
Winning new lands of slaves as yours was won?

O ye, who never yet have fought so well
For your own freedom as ye do to fix
Your chains on fellow nations; hear your knell
In the deep-muttered blasphemies that mix
With the last gasp of slaughtered Boers who call
Vengeance from hell on thralls who would enthrall.

One Irishman Rejoiced in Queen's Visit.

Last week a friend of mine was sitting in Phœnix Park, when appeared to him a ragged old chap, most gloriously intoxicated. 'God save the Queen, Sor!' said he to my friend. 'Certainly,' was the reply. 'God save Queen Victoria!' reiterated the old fellow. 'By all means. Send her victorious, happy, and glorious!' 'That's right, Sor! I wish she came to Dublin every year, every month, every day, Sor! Think of what she's done for the country; think of all the good she done to people. Why, look at me, here am I, as drunk as hell, and never paid a penny for it!'—London Daily News.

Wooed a truly rural maiden all the May;
Said the truly rural lover, "Truly rural is our lot,—

For naught not truly rural truly cared they in the least,—
Oh, truer truly rurals there are none!—Life.

A Woman's Perfect Gift.

"One crown of glory the elderly woman may proudly wear, and it is a distinction she could never have had in girlhood or early matronhood—she may be a grandmother," writes Margaret E. Sangster in The Ladies Home Journal. "I can think of nothing so perfectly satisfying and so thrilling with a subtle ecstasy as the holding in one's arms and looking into the face of the child of one's son or daughter. It is the second generation and you have lived to see it. That fact in itself is delightful. You compare the baby's face with those of your own children and trace the quaintest points of resemblance, and, oddly enough, you see what nobody else can see—flitting likenesses now and then to the child's remoter ancestors, to some great grandfather or grandmother long vanished from the earth. Your granddaughter and you will be chums, your grandson and you will be comrades, and good, and only good, will be the outcome of the beautiful association for all concerned. One of the most perfect gifts which come into the life of a woman is the joy which comes to her over the cradle of the grand child. It is without a single flaw."

Judge Biggle not only knows a lot about horses, but what is more important, he knows how to impart his information in a way that will be understood. One does not have to wade through a mass of undigested, unimportant matter. The Biggle Books are models of clearness and conciseness. The price is 50 cents, by mail; address the publishers, Wilmer Atkinson Co., Philadelphia.

Twenty dollars a month on a farm is very much better than $35 a month in a city store. As a general thing at the end of nine months the former has $150 in cash, three pairs of overalls, and a straw hat, while the latter has two or three suits of clothes, a pair of golf socks, and is $17 in the hole. Yet there are seventy-five applicants for the latter job to one for the former.—Record.

A very Remarkable Remedy.

It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, says Druggist A. W. Sawtelle, of Hartford, Conn "A lady customer, seeing the remedy exposed for sale on my show case said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore,' and she became so enthusiastic over its merits that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he sank at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever.

THE PRIMARY ELECTION.

The primary election passed off quietly last Saturday. A large vote was polled and every candidate received support, which tho not sufficient to elect in half the cases, must have broken the fall as nothing else could have done. The contestants without exception were good men, and the news of the result was awaited with the feeling on the part of the average citizen that while it would proclaim one friend elected it must necessarily announce the defeat of another for whom he had an equal regard.

The primary method of selecting nominees is the most satisfactory in the nomination of county officials, but that having been done it has a tendency to take the sap out of the party, as far as the state or national politics is concerned. The contest is heated and the near friends of some defeated candidate hear the news with feelings of disappointment, and are not such enthusiastic partisans the rest of the campaign. There was little of that this election, and we think we can safely say that the contest just ended carried with it the minimum of danger to the strength of the party in this county.

From two to three hundred Republicans joined with the Democrats in selecting county nominees. These were men of a liberal turn of mind who recognized the fact that a Democratic nomination is virtually an election in this county.

A Woman's Awful Peril.

"There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation" were the startling words heard by Mrs I. B. Hunt of Lime Ridge, Wis, from her doctor after he had vainly tried to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. Gall stones had formed and she constantly grew worse. Then she began to use Electric Bitters which wholly cured her. It is a wonderful Stomach, Liver and Kidney remedy. Cures dyspepsia, loss of appetite. Try it. Only 50c. Guaranteed.

IN RECONSTRUCTION DAYS.

There is a tale knocking about this county about two legislators who went to Wheeling, the State Capitol, to attend a session of the legislature in the days of the reconstruction. One of them thought the other too plain to represent his county and he undertook to coach him, so that he would make a better appearance in society

His friend said he would do as he pleased, and that he had as much sense as any of them.

"No you havn't," said the monitor. "You know you havn't. I'll bet you five dollars you can't say the Lord's Prayer without looking at the Book."

The bet was accepted, and the legislator to prove it, rattled off the verse: "Now I lay me down to sleep," etc.

His teacher heard him through and said resignedly: "Take the money. I didn't think you knowed it."

MT. TABOR.

Fine weather after a few cold days and heavy freezes which injured the wheat and fruit crops considerably.

LAWLESSNESS.

Occasionally it becomes necessary for the newspaper man to give the county represented by his newspaper a black eye. We think it proper to refer to the increasing amount of petty crimes committed in this county, and it is high time the people of the county were doing something to counteract the spread.

Beside the actual commission of the crime, the fact that a law, which ought to be held sacred, has been broken, calls up a fear that there may be coming a time when the disregard for law and order may be a real menace. It is outrageous that a man should break laws just for the mere bravado of the performance, or that a man who is a hibitual lawbreaker should not be regarded as a man apart. The people of this county will stand shoulder to shoulder if necessary to enforce the laws, but just at present there is an era of lawlessness which we must consider seriously.

The root of most of it is the illegal sale of whiskey. There is something debasing in the conducting of the "speak-easy," both for the seller and the buyer. Many persons have been aroused to the condition of the illegal traffic here, but so far we have lacked men who are willing to take the iniative necessary to enable the officers to close the places. We have been willing to employ the cumberous means of indicting a few semi-annually by the grand jury. What we want is a man who will make a complaint, have the liquor dealer arrested and make him give bond before a justice, conditioned on his not selling whiskey. There is also another means which could be employed, that of injunction against people who maintain such nuisances in a neighborhood. If we would catch several of the most notorious of the speak-easy people in this way, there would be such a blight on the whiskey trade that a wayfarer could not get poisoned the whole length and breadth of the land.

We consider this responsible for most of the rowdyism. Another evil is the carrying of concealed weapons. When you take a revolver away from a hasty youth it is like clipping the claws of a tiger. He is rendered harmless. We must frown down the fad of carrying a pistol. The condition of affairs is such that every endeavor to enforce a law must be fostered and encouraged by every good citizen. Pocahontas must not let her enviable repution for law and order slip from her at the very time when she needs it most.

Consumption

is robbed of its terrors by the fact that the best medical authorities state that it is a curable disease; and one of the happy things about it is, that its victims rarely ever lose hope.

You know there are all sorts of secret nostrums advertised to cure consumption. Some make absurd claims. We only say that if taken in time and the laws of health are properly observed, will heal the inflammation of the throat and lungs and nourish and strengthen the body so that it can throw off the disease.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

We have thousands of testimonials where people claim they have been permanently cured of this malady.

DIED.

MRS POLLY ERVINE.

Died, at her home near Arbovale, May 12, 1900, Mrs Polly Ervine, aged about 82 years. Her ailment was la grippe in virulent form.

Mrs Ervine was the daughter of Benjamin F. Ervine, who died during the war in the Confederate service, and was thus left in charge of little children whom she faithfully cared for. She was the daughter of Robert Kerr, and for sixty years has been a communicant in the pale of the Presbyterian church and was held in high esteem by everyone as a genuinely pius person, and one who had been rightly exercised by many sorrows and sadly afflictive events.

Doubtless she has been made glad according to the days she has been afflicted and the years wherein she has seen evil. Very mercifully was she spared to recover strength before she went hence to be no longer with us, her earthly kindred and friends.

Now in heaven we hope to meet her
When the day of life is fled,
And then with joy to greet her,
Where no farewell tear is shed.

vs
G. W. Waid, alias G. W. Wade, Jennie Gum, Maggie Gum, Amos Gum, Thomas Gum, Mrs Morgan Wade, Gilbert Wade, Albert Wade and Maggie Wade, Defendants.

The object of this suit is to enforce the liens existing upon the real estate of the defendant G. W. Wade, by a sale thereof, for the benefit of the judgment creditors and any other lienors, according to their respective rights and priorities, and to direct a conveyance from the heirs of Otho Gum, deceased, for a tract of 60 acres of land, more or less, situated on the North Fork of Anthony's Creek in Pocahontas County, West Virginia, purchased by said G. W. Wade of Otho Gum, deceased. This day came the plaintiff by his attorney, and on his motion, and it appearing by affidavit filed that the defendants, Jennie Gum, Maggie Gum and Amos Gum are non-residents of the State of West Virginia, it is ordered that they do appear here within one month after the date of the first publication hereof and do what is necessary to protect their interests in this suit. ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

State of West Virginia, Pocahontas County; to wit:

At rules held in the clerk's office of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County on the first Monday in May, 1900.

Mary A. Baxter, - Plaintiff
vs.
Sarah E. McClure, A. L. McClure, John W. McClure, S. D. McClure, Sallie E. Shearer, Jacob S. McClure, Nancy L. Lindsay, Margaret C. Price, and A. L. McClure, Administrator of James B. McClure, dec'd. - Defendants.

The object of this suit is to partition the lands of which the late James B. McClure died seized; or, if any advantageous partition of said lands cannot be made, then to sell said lands and divide the proceeds arising from said sale, among the several parties entitled thereto; and to settle the accounts of A. L. McClure, Administrator of James B. McClure, deceased. This day came the plaintiff by her attorney, and on her motion, and it appearing by affidavit filed, that the defendants, Jacob S. McClure, Nancy L. Lindsay and Margaret C. Price are non-residents of the State of West Virginia, it is ordered that they do appear here within one month after the first publication hereof, and do what is necessary to protect their interest in this suit. COMMISSIONER'S NOTICE.

Marlinton, W. Va., April 24, 1900.

Wm H. Cleek's Amm'r., Plaintiff
vs.
Maggie F. Cleek and others, D'fts.

Pursuant to a decree rendered in the above cause at the April Term, 1900, of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County, West Virginia, the undersigned commissioner will proceed at his office in the town of Marlinton, W. Va., on the 6th day of June, 1900, to take, state, and report to the Court the following matters of account, to wit:

First—A settlement of the administration accounts of R. W. Hill, Administrator of Wm. H. Cleek, deceased.

Second—A statement of the just and subsisting debts and liens against the estate of the said William H. Cleek, deceased, with their date, dignities, and priorities.

Third—A statement of the lands of which the said Wm H. Cleek died seized, and which may be subjected to the payment of his debts, with the location of the same.

Fourth—Any other matter is to be stated by the commissioner, deemed pertinent by himself or required by any party in interest to be so stated.

At which time and place all parties who desire may attend.

T. S. McNEEL,
Commissioner.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

To the creditors of Wm. H. Cleek, deceased:

In pursuance of a decree of the Circuit Court of the County of Pocahontas made in a cause therein pending to subject the real estate of the said Wm. H. Cleek to the payment of his debts, you are required to present your claims against the estate of the said Wm. H. Cleek for adjudication to T. S. McNeel, commissioner, at his office in the said county, on or before the 6th day of June 1900.

Witness J. H. Patterson, Clerk of the said Court, this 24th day of April, 1900.

J. H. PATTERSON, Clerk.

Slaven, the Tinner, keeps the best line of tinware in town. Call in and he can prove it to you.

All stock except milk cows will have to be kept up in the corporation after Thursday.

Go to the Parlor Millinery for the pulley belt: the latest thing in belts.

Born to Mr and Mrs F. A. Chapman, of Academy, Saturday, May 12th, 1900, a boy.

Just received: A lot of fresh clash cook stoves at Slaven's, the reliable stove dealer.

The Parlor Millinery Co. have just received a fresh stock of summer goods goods; hats from 12½c up to $10.

Cream Freezers: the only freezer with 3 motions at once; it will freeze cream in 5 minutes; also water coolers, at Slaven's tin shop.

The Parlor Millinery Co. will have by the first of next week a first class dressmaker of ten years practical experience, from Armstrong Cater & Co., Baltimore Md.

Hon J. H. Holt of Huntington is an aspirant for the Democratic nomination for Governor. He is a lawyer and is conceded to be one of the most eloquent orators in the State.

Rev G. W. Bogle, the pastor of the Methodist church, preached his first sermon at this place last Sunday to a large congregation. The church has secured an able man. Mr Bogle is a Virginian, a graduate of Emory and Henry College.

Dr L. J. Marshall will locate at Marlinton for the practice of his profession. He will be here Saturday, and build an office near the postoffice. He is a son of the late Captain J. W. Marshall and has thoroughly prepared himself by a four years course at the Baltimore Medical College. He will be welcomed to this town where he has a host of friends.

Rev W. M. White of Lewisburg will preach at Marlinton next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, and declare the pastorate vacant, according to the rules of the Presbyterian church, in view of the resignation of the late pastor, Rev W. T. Price. A full attendance of the membership is desirable.

Forest fires in Webster county have been very destructive. The plants owned by T. A. Blankenship and the Stout Lumber Company on Gauley two miles north of Camden were burned May 7th. Blankenship lost about a million feet cut and uncut. Stout & Co. a million feet of stock along with the mills. The entire loss of the two firms over $30,000.

A number of timber men are engaged in making an estimate of the amount of timber which will be in reach of the new railroad in this county. One way of arriving at an estimate is to take the amount of white pine floated out by the St. Lawrence Boom and Manufacturing Company, which exceeds 100,000,000 feet. They have not taken one-tenth of the timber in the county. Every one here knows that. This bears out our late assertion that there is a billion and a half of timber now ready for the axe in this county.

John Moore, a colored North Carolina laborer in the employ of John L. Pitts, at Camp 3, had his thigh broken last Sunday. He and a comrade had decided to move their personal effects from the lower camp to a shanty near the head a mile or so above camp. They secured the services of a mule and hitched it to a heavy cart. On the way the mule ran away and upset it. The car went over the bank, catching Moore under it and crushing and breaking the left thigh. Dr Price set the limb, putting the whole limb in plaster of paris. He is liable to be laid up for six weeks or so. Foreman [illegible], under whom he worked, says he is one of the best hands on the work.

ALLAN COULTER MURDERED.

Waylaid and Shot in the Back—Grandson Under Arrest.

Allan Coulter, a well known citizen of the county, was shot by some one who had lain in wait for that purpose at his barn on his farm on Laurel Run, in the Levels District opposite the mouth of Locust Creek, Tuesday the 8th inst.

The deceased had been planting corn and had come to the barn, about three-quarters of a mile below his house, to put his horse up. It would seem from appearances that Coulter had put his horse in a stall and passed through a shed into the cutting room, fed his horse, and had probably reached up for his coat which was hanging on a nail when he was shot throught the heart from behind with a 38 repeater. It is thought the shooting was done about noon. The body was discovered at dusk.

An examination of the locality showed that the woods came down within thirty yards of the barn. Traces of where a man stood behind a tree were found and from there a trail as tho he had hurried down to a fence corner near the barn. This corner had been fitted up with bark to make it a sort of a "blind."

The deceased was about sixty years of age. He was well known here some years ago as a party to a long divorce proceedings in which the court finally entered a decree giving the parties six months to return to each other in order to ascertain some of the property rights in the case. There was a decree of divorce granted finally. Afterwards he married a Mrs Rider, who survives him. He was not a man who was generally liked.

Last Saturday William Coulter, his brother, had a warrant issued for Ed Coulter, a grandson of the murdered man. Young Coulter is about of age. The case against him is wholly circumstantial and is based on his refusal to give an account of his whereabouts on the day of the tragedy. He was brought to jail Saturday night.

The District Lines.

A very present cause of trouble in Edray district is the impending change in the lines of the Edray and Huntersville districts. One of the fairest and most intelligent gentlemen of the county said to us the other day: "Just say in your paper that if the county court changes the line, they should do it so that it will stand no matter how the court is made up. Otherwise it will become another issue to divide the people of the county." We think there is something in this, and everyone knows we have enough sectional bitterness to last us a generation.

As the question of railroad taxes is the only reason apparent for a change, we took the railroad maps and district lines recorded in the clerk's office and found that when the Greenbrier Railway is completed Pocahontas will have 61¾ miles. Of this mileage, the Levels will have 14, Huntersville 9¼, Edray 12¼, and Green Bank 25½ miles. When the Elkins road is completed Green Bank district will have nearly as much more. Therefore the Edray people are ready to suggest that Huntersville has the wrong pig by the ear, and that Green Bank could give Huntersville three miles of railroad and never miss it and make it equal to Edray.

Letter from Rev M. M. McNeil.

Smithville, W. Va.,
May 4, 1900.

Enclosed I send you one dollar to renew my subscription to the Times. On the 14th of last December my house was burned down and nearly everything in it destroyed, leaving us in great destitution, but I can not do without the Times. Among the highly-prized things I lost was a complete file of the Times containing the biographical sketches of the early settlers of Pocahontas County.

Respectfully,
M. McNeill.

A charter has been issued to the Cherry Valley Railroad Company, which proposes to build a railroad from Richwood, in Nicholas county, by the most practicable route, to Locust, in Pocahontas county. The principal office is to be at Richwood. The capital stock is $10,000, held by J. W. Oakwood, C. D. Simpson, Henry Betlin, F. L. Park and C. F. Davidson, of Lackawanna.

The Potomac pollution trouble has been compromised between the city of Cumberland and the West Virginia Paper Co. The acid process will go into use August 1st. What effect this will have on the extension of operations at Covington does not appear as yet.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

The undersigned will receive bids until May 26, 1900, for the erection of a bank building 36 x 52 feet three stories high. For further particulars apply to the undersigned at the Bank of Marlinton.

Marion Gum is about done sawing at Taylor's.

Several heavy frosts in this section last week, which killed about all the fruit.

W. T. Slavin, of Mill Point, was around last week selling tombstones. He is meeting with good success in this vicinity.

Rev Callison delivered a very entertaining sermon at New Hope church, Monday night.

And still they move: Jem Gum has moved to the Butterbaugh house; Henry Briscoe to Martin C. Dilley's; General Grant to near Huntersville; Sandy Patterson to the Harvey Nottingham place; Zack Nottingham to James Carr's; and Noah Hoover moves every time the moon changes.

The sick are all improving.

Wash Hoover is likely to be our next President.

Marvin Wenger passed here one day last week, enroute for Arbovale.

Corn planting is the order of the day.

Some of the farmers have had a great deal of damage done by forest fires in the past few weeks. Some sneak is running loose who ought to be hard at work in Moundsville.

Miss Maud Mason's school at Michel's Peak has closed, with the good wishes of all in the teacher's behalf.

Miss Bessie Patterson, who has been in Virginia for some time, is at home.

Rev Pullin delivered a sermon at New Hope Church last Sunday at 3 p. m. Our pastor life will be in danger if some one does not soon mend the steps of New Hope.

Several of the boys were out on their bicyles last Sunday.

Memorial of Captain J. W. Marshall.

We have been complimented with a copy of the memorial brochure prepared in memory of the late Captain J. W. Marshall of Mingo, W. Va., by his daughter, Mrs S. W. Holt.

The contents consist of the memorial sermon by Rev W. T. Price, personal reminiscences by his brother H. B. Marshall, a tribute in verse by Mrs Margaret E. Sangster, an extended appreciative sketch by Dr Plumer Bryan of Chicago; a tribute by his pastor, W. E. Hudson; letters of condolence from Rev J. B. Bittenger, of Washington County, Va.; Charles G. B. Bruce, North Devon, England; A. H. Winchester and Mrs Winchester, Buckhannon, W. Va.; G. W. Peterkin, Bishop of West Virginia; Judge R. C. Davis, of Louisville, Ky., and Rev F. J. Brooke, Alexandria, Va. There are also a memorial of his wife, Mrs Georgiana Marshall, prepared by a friend, and the obituary written by her pastor, Rev J. B. Bittenger.

STOCKHOLDERS MEETING.

Notice is hereby given that a general meeting of the stockholders of the Cherry Valley Railroad Company, a Corporation created under the laws of the State of West Virginia, will be held at the office of Campbell, Holt and Campbell, in the City of Huntington, County of Cabell, and State of West Virginia, on the 20th day of June, 1900, for the purpose of electing a Board of Directors, adopting by-laws, and transacting any other business which may be done by the said stockholders in general meeting.

Several of the boys attended the hop down on the mountain last week, and report a good time generally and ramps in full blast.

Sebert Kelley has a new boarder—he says he has come to stay.

Miss Alice McLaughlin is teaching a first class school at this place.

A good deal of moving is being done around here. Charles Slaven moved to Durbin and Adam Arbogast moved into the house vacated by him.

H. C. Dickinson's new goods came on last week. Cross-eyed darning needles a specialty.

A great deal of sickness in this part of the county and Drs Lambert and Judy are kept busy.

A large drove of cattle came in last week for O'Connel's lumber camp.

William Gragg's log rolling was largely attended.

Squire Gillespie says he is going to stay with us this summer.

Rev McNeil preached a splendid sermon at Traveller's Repose to a large crowd, last Sunday.

Joe Bussard and his mule passed through town last week.

Rev Benjamin Collins, one of our Dunkard brethren, started on a trip to Pennsylvania last week. He got as far as Beverly, where he was taken suddenly ill and had to abandon his trip.

EDRAY.

Harlow Waugh has returned from Baltimore.

Miss J. Ann Smith is at home again, after an extended visit to her sister, Mrs Samuel Moore on Back Alleghany.

Rev M. W. Atkinson made a flying trip to Mill Point last week.

We noticed a mistake in our last week's items. Instead of Miss Leva Gay, it is Miss Lora Gray who is taking music lessons at Marlinton.

Mrs Samuel Moore spent Sunday with her mother, Mrs Betty Sharp.

A gay party of young people spent Sunday evening at A. J. Smith's, and had some music and a good time. We all enjoy going to Mr Smith's, as he is a jolly fellow and treats the young people in a way that pleases them.

Edward Rutledge was in this part Sunday to see his girl.

Olivet.

Personal—I am shocked to think that my lady friend from Edray should express herself in such a way about the "young man from Marlinton," (in the Edray news of last week) as I thought a great deal of her—as I do of all the good Edray people. I guess when her young man gets able to come around again, she wont need care how highly I value myself.

Good-bye. F.

DUNMORE.

Mrs Lizzie Carpenter died at her home April 23 aged 44. Mrs Carpenter leaves 9 children and husband and a host of friends to mourn their loss. She was an excellent good woman.

George D. Houchin died at his home April 25, aged about fifty years. Mr Houchin was a good man.

Jossie Rexrode died at his home on Top of Alleghany mountain, May 5, aged 80 years. At one time Mr Rexrode was a prominent merchant at Stoney Bottom.

Jacob Jr is home from Texas.

A. W. Gwin and family left for their home last week.

Miss Laura McElwee has returned home.

Will Gragg has moved back to his farm and expects to raise a crop of crawfish.

General Grant Dilley has moved to Beaver Creek.

J. T. Watsod of Pittsburg is in town.

Jim Gum has moved to Dunmore.

Stonewall came in from the east, and left his girl behind him.

Lots of new goods are coming to town. Swecker is getting in the finest line of burial material in the county.

Somebody was not satisfied till they got the woods on fire and burned up a lot of fence.

Admiral Dan has gone to work in the woods again up the river.

It is thought a railroad will be built up Leatherbark this summer.

There will be a phone line run from Travelers Repose to Durbin's Town.

The next thing is to knock the hair off the the sheep.

Beware of a Cough.

A cough is not a disease, but a symptom. Consumption and bronchitis, which are the most dangerous and fatal diseases, have for their first indication a persistent cough, and if properly treated as soon as this cough appears are easily cured. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has proven wonderfully successful, and gained its wide reputation and extensive sale by its success in curing diseases which cause coughing. If it is not beneficial it will not cost you a cent. For sale by—

"DANGER IN THE EARTH AND AIR; DANGER EVERYWHERE."

A Wise and Venerable Doctor Talks about Advanced Science.

In a leading hotel, in a great city, a famous and aged physician was convers... Listening to his wise and sententious discourse, were a group of well ...med men, evidently lawyers, business men and commercial travelers.

My firm belief, is "that medical science is certain yet to show that all dis...es without exception are caused by invisible germs which are living organ...s. Here is the germ of that terrible disease diphtheria. Here is the bacillus ...yphoid fever; and here is the still more dreadful bacillus of tubercle which ...es that most destructive of all diseases, consumption. This of that very ...mon and supposed incurable disease, catarrh."

"I wish, Doctor," said the traveling man, "that you would tell us about ...arrh. I have had it for years, and I am thoroughly discouraged."

The Doctor answered. "Catarrh, like diphtheria, consumption, typhoid ...er, and a host of other diseases, is the result of a microbe invading the blood ... attacking specially the mucous membrane. This foul and most disgusting ...ease is especially prevalent in the United States and it is rare to meet one ...o is not, or has not been troubled more or less with it. How often is he or ... obliged to remain at home from pleasant entertainments, deprive themselves ...many intellectual treats, from fear of the disagreeable odor arising from ca...rhal affections. In its worst phase, the patient becomes loathsome both to ...self and his friends.

"I believe," continued this great physician, "that the true way to heal ca...rh is to medicate the blood. This can be done only by powerful alteratives ...ich act as blood purifiers."

THE "CONFEDERATE VETERAN."

Low Club Rates Given With the Pocahontas Times.

The growth of the Confederate Veteran, published by S. A. Cunningham at Nashville, Tenn., is remarkable. Its circulation of eighty-four issues, monthly, aggregated to January, 1900, 1,195,452 copies. Average for 1893, 7683: 1894, 10,138 1895, 12,916; 1896, 13,444; 1897, 16,175; 1898, 19,100; 1899, 20,166.

Subscriptions for the Veteran will be received at this office. It and the Times will be sent for one year at the club rate of $1.50. By application to the Pocahontas Times copies of the Veteran will be sent to our veteran friends who are unable to subscribe.

The editor of the Farm Journal asks: 'Why have a mortgage on the farm, poor crops, rheumatism, sour bread, grip, leak in the roof, hole in the pocket, skeleton in the closet, or any other pain or trouble when you can get the Farm Journal for 1900, 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904, nearly five years, by paying all arrearages and a year in advance for the Pocahontas Times?' This you can do if you speak quick. But only a limited number of Farm Journals can be had, so pay up before the last one is gone.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by the inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars.

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

The colored work in Biggle Berry Book is an immense aid to berry growers. It shows the leading berries true to size, shape and color. They were first carefully painted by an experienced artist, and then reproduced by lithography at a cost of over one thousand dollars. Aside from the color work there are scores of reproductions made directly from photographs of berries, so accurate that the reader may have an accurate idea of them. The price is 50 cents, by mail; address the publishers, Wilmer Atkinson Co., Philadelphia.

A Sprained Ankle Quickly Cured

"At one time I suffered from a severe sprain of the ankle," says George K. Cary, editor of the Guide, Washington. Va. "After using several well recommended medicines without success, I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and am pleased to say that relief came as soon as I began its use and a complete cure speedily followed. This remedy has also been used in my family for frost bitten feet with the best results. I cheerfully recommend its use to all who may need a first class liniment. Sold by—

Are to be Reproduced in the Finest Photogravure Process

THESE photogravures represent paintings that have been sold for thousands of dollars, and others that are fresh from the artists' brush. They would sell rapidly at any art store at $5 each, but they can be purchased only from us, as we absolutely control the copyrights.

The Masterpieces of twenty-five of our Greatest American Artists now for the first time available in a single collection

Beautify Your Home

This collection of paintings, varied in style and color-tone, will superbly adorn any home. They are 18 x 24 inches in size, are placed in a beautiful portfolio, and so arranged that they can be conveniently removed for framing.

An Art Educator

This magnificent collection will at once stimulate and cultivate a desire for the artistic. A complete description accompanies each painting, also a portrait and biographical sketch of the artist, an interesting account of his early studies, how he was led to take up art as a profession, in what schools and under what masters he received his instruction. It describes his trips and sojourns abroad, where and when his paintings were first exhibited, and the honors they received both in Europe and America. The titles of the artist's most notable paintings are also given, and where they are now. All this information is not only interesting, but exceedingly instructive.

SPECIAL PROPOSITION

To those who write at once we will send one of our original specimen sets by express, being the first sharp, clear impressions from the fresh, new plates. The price will be less than one-third their real value, and the payments easy, with the privilege of return if not satisfactory. Clip this special proposition and send with your letter.

West Virginia University,

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

The School of Music

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Pre-medical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

A QUAKER OF THE OLDEN TIME.

The Quaker of the olden time!
How calm and firm and true,
Unspotted by its wrong and crime,
He walked the dark earth through.
The lust of power, the love of gain,
The thousand lures of sin
Around him had no power to stain
The purity within.

With that deep insight which detects
All great things in the small,
And knows each man's life affects
The spiritual life of all,
He walked by faith and not by sight,
By love and not by law;
The presence of the wrong or right
He rather felt than saw.

He felt that wrong with wrong partakes,
That nothing stands alone,
That whoso gives the motive, makes
His brother's sin his own.
And pausing not for doubtful choice
Of evils great or small,
He listened to that inward voice
Which called away from all.

—Whittier.

MORE AUCTION TALK.

Uncle Abraham kept on talking, and though he did this talking in 1757, it reads as much to the purpose as if he had been at the last auction cried in Pocahontas, for Uncle Abraham went on to say.

Trusting too much to other's care truly is the ruin of many; for in the affairs of this world men are saved not by faith, but by the want of it. A man's own care is what that profits or saves in worldly matters, for Learning is to the studious, and Riches to the careful, as well as Power to the bold, and Heaven to the virtuous. And further, if you would have a faithful servant and one that you like, serve yourself.

Uncle Abraham advised circumspection and care, even in the smallest matters, because sometimes a little may breed great mischief; adding For want of a nail the shoe was lost; for want of a shoe the horse was lost; and for want of a horse the rider was lost, being overtaken and slain by the enemy, all for want of a little care about a horse shoe nail!

So much for industry, my friends, and attention to ones own business, but to these we must add frugality, if we would make our industry more certainly successful.

A man may, if he knows not how to save as he gets, keep his nose all his life to the grindstone, and die not worth a nickel at last. A fat kitchen makes a lean will, and—

Many estates are spent in the getting,
Since women for tea forsook spinning and knitting,
And men for punch forsook hewing and splitting.

Now if you would be wealthy think of saving as well as of getting. The Indies have not made Spain rich, because her outgoes are greater than her incomes.

Away then with your expensive bottles, and you will not have so much cause to complain of hard times, heavy taxes, and chargeable families, for—

Women and wine, game and deceit,
Make the wealth small and the wants great.

And furthermore, What maintains one vice would bring up two children. You may think perhaps that a little tea, or a little punch or toddy now and then; a diet more costly, clothes a little finer, and a little more entertainment now and then can be no great matter, but remember what Poor Richard says, Many a little makes a muckle. Beware of little expenses. A small leak will sink a great ship; and again: Who dainties love shall beggars prove; and moreover, Fools make feasts and wise men eat them.

Here are you all got together at this vendue of fineries and knick-knacks. You call them goods; but if you do not take care they will prove evils to some of you. You expect they will be sold cheap, and perhaps they may for less than cost; but if you have no occasion for them they must be dear to you. Remember what Poor Richard says: Buy what thou hast no need of, and ere long thou shalt sell thy necessaries. And again, At a great pennyworth pause awhile. He means that perhaps the cheapness is apparent only; or the bargain, by straitening thee in thy business, may do thee more harm than good. For in another place he says, Many have been ruined by buying good pennyworths. Again Poor Richard says, 'Tis foolish to lay out money in a purchase for repentance, and yet this folly is practiced every day for lack of proper consideration.

Wise men learn by others; fools scarcely by their own; but felix quem faciunt aliena pericula cautum, which means "he is lucky who is made cautious by other men's perils." So here is the secret of being lucky.

Then again Uncle Abraham says, Many a one for the sake of finery on the back has gone with a hungry belly and half starved their families. Silks and satins, scarlets and velvets, Poor Richard says, put out the kitchen fires. These are not the necessaries of life; they can be scarcely called the conveniences, and yet because they look pretty how many want to have them. The artificial wants of mankind thus become more numerous than the natural; and as Poor Dick says, For one poor person there are a hundred indigent.

By these and other extravagances the genteel are reduced to poverty and forced to borrow of those whom they formerly despised, but who through industry and frugality have maintained their standing; in which case it appears plainly that a ploughman on his legs is better than a gentleman on his knees, as Poor Richard says.

Fond pride is, sure, a very curse.
Ere fancy you consult, consult your purse.

The Passenger Pigeons.

From the West come reports of the occurrence of small bands of passenger pigeons, and their publication will no doubt call forth those questions concerning the species and its present abundance, which so frequently find a place in these columns.

It is to be hoped that the gunners who may see wild pigeons will not forthwith feel prompted to go out and kill as many of them as they can. The thoughtful sportsman can be depended on to spare this bird, but unhappily many are not thoughtful, and those who are not so are anxious to make sure that the birds they see are really passenger pigeons, or to try the flavor in the pot of these birds, of which they have heard so much, or to have the doubtful glory of having killed the last wild pigeon. The average man has no difficulty in finding excuses for killing.

If for a few years these beautiful birds should be preserved from destruction and should be permitted to increase in peace and quietness, there is a fair prospect that once more the race would become firmly established and that the danger of its extermination would no longer threaten.

Already several species of North American birds have been exterminated, and one of them at least by the gun. Surely it is worth while now for each man to hold his hand as to the pigeon, and as to certain other birds which in many localities are yearly growing fewer in number, and to exert what influence he can to persuade others to let them alone.

The days of the old pigeon roosts, and the days when from sunrise to sunset, and long after, the sky was blotted with clouds of the passing birds or streaked with long lines of their flight have gone —never to return. But if the men and boys who carry guns can be taught to exercise a reasonable self control, we may hope in the future still to see from time to time, and to take pleasure in, little flocks of these birds.

Each State in the Union should pass a law protecting the passenger pigeon.—Forest and Stream.

Cut this out and take it to H. R. Echol's Drug store and get a free sample of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, the best physic. They also cure disorders of the stomach, biliousness and headache.

The Negro in Business.

Atlanta University, an institution for the higher education of the Negro, has published a pamphlet presenting the results of recent investigation to ascertain the part taken by freedmen in the business life of the South. The range of inquiry was not like that of a census, but was limited to localities that could be reached promptly by letter. The term "business men" was interpreted to include all men with stocks of goods to sell and such others as had at least $500 each in invested capital. It did not include barbers, except where there was $500 or more invested in a shop. It included blacksmiths and wheelwrights who kept stocks of wagons or other goods on sale.

The report shows that there are about 5,000 Negro business men in the United States. Definite reports, however, were received from only 1,906. Of these 136 are in Alabama, 324 in Georgia, 123 in South Carolina, 131 in Tennessee, 159 in Texas, and 105 in Virginia. Of those engaged in business 432 are listed as grocers, 166 as general merchandise dealers, 162 as master barbers, 30 as green grocers and dairymen, 24 as caterers, 48 as builders and contractors, 47 as dealers in meat, and 40 as merchant tailors. The 162 barbers have $200,000 capital invested. There are 17,480 Negro barbers reported, most of them working for wages or as proprietors of small shops. Of the Negro merchants in the country 598 are covered in this report. They represent a total investment of $1,828,243.

The 1906 business reported have $5,691,137 invested. On these returns it is estimated that the total capital invested by the American Negro in business is $8,748,537. Seventy-nine per cent of the investment is in sums of less than $2500. Only twelve establishments reach the sum of $50,000 or more. Of the 185 educated Negroes in business, thirty started with borrowed capital, and the others with money saved

An interesting feature of this report is the tracing of the different classes of the old slaves into business. It is found that of the 1906 Negroes covered by the report 462 came from the house-servant class, which took up naturally the work of barbers, restaurant keepers, expressmen, butchers, caterers, liverymen, bakers and milliners; 61 from the field-hand class, gravitating to the work of market gardeners, green grocers dairymen, florists, and lumber mill owners; 176, from the plantation mechanic class, taking up the work of builders, blacksmiths, brickmakers, jewelers, shoe dealers, machinists, tinners, paper hangers, and painters; 695, from the trading class, that is, from the old slaves who were employed in a way to bring out the bargaining or mercantile instinct. The compiler of the report reasons that "naturally business of all vocation was far removed from slavery; even the antebellum plantation owner was hardly a good business man, and his slaves were at best sharers in a monarchal communism. Therefore, it is contended, for a Negro to go into business means much—hard labor, thrift in saving, ability to learn a new vocation, and the comprehension of social movements.—The Outlook.

The Member's Bear Story.

"Bears," said the member just back from a trip. "Yes; saw one. Wait till I tell you. Ball, the guide, wanted to go and look at a bear trap before we went down the river, and I went along with him. He had his axe and I carried a gun. As we came in sight of the trap there was the bear. 'We've got him!' said Ball, in the words of the Winchester Calendar. I was raising my rifle but Ball said: 'Don't shoot; he's safe.' We walked up close and the bear stood up. Ball aimed a crack at him with the axe and the bear dodged one side and trotted off. He wasn't in the trap at all, and I forgot to shoot. Ball said—— Never mind."—Forest and Stream.

The Great Wall of China.

It would seem from the account of this extraordinary work that there was a time when the Chinese possessed a most remarkable persistence and were masters of what is even now one of the greatest wonders in existence.

This great wall was recently measured by Mr Unthank, an American engineer engaged on a survey for a Chinese railway. His measurement gave the height eighteen feet. Every few hundred yards there is a tower twenty-five feet high. The foundation of the wall is of solid granite. Mr Unthank brought with him a brick from the wall which is supposed to have been made 200 years B. C. In building this immense stone fence to keep out the Tartars, the builders never attempted to avoid mountains or chasms to save labor or expense. For 1,300 miles the wall goes over plains and mountains, and every foot of the foundation is of solid granite, and the rest of the structure solid masonry. In some places, the wall is built smooth up against the bank or crosses a precipice where there is a sheer descent of 1,000 feet.

Small streams are arched over; but on the larger streams the walls run to the water's edge and a tower is built on either side. On the top of the wall there are breast works or defenses facing in and out, so that the defender's forces can pass from one tower to another without being exposed to an enemy on either side.

To calculate time of building or cost of this wall is beyond human skill. So far as magnitude of the work is concerned, it surpasses every thing in ancient or modern times of which there is any trace. The Pyramids of Egypt are nothing compared with it. I have heard Chinamen in California tell about it, but scarcely believed their stories.—J. E. Emerson, in The Scientific American.

The Colonel's Romance.

"Colonel," said the romantic girl "tell me how you got that scar upon your left cheek. Oh, I just know it must be a thrilling story. Was it made by a bullet or a saber thrust? I prefer a saber thrust. It seems so much more like the old knighthood of old. You can't see a bullet coming, and there is no way to escape or combat it. But when your enemy rushes at you with his uplifted saber there is the possibility of parrying his blow and cutting him down. That seems much more manly, even if the victor in the fray does receive a wound or two, than to just be laid low or to lay the enemy low by a bullet that cannot be seen. There is no bravery in shooting a man, but there is something knightly in meeting another face to face with a sword. Your scar looks like one rendered by a gleaming blade, and I know your enemy must at least have been rendered hors de combat. Tell me all about it, Colonel —when it happened, and how. I am so interested in war stories!"

"Yes," he replied. "I agree with you fully about the sword and saber business. There isn't much bravery in shooting a fellow, and there is something knightly about standing up and thrusting and parrying with a blade. But I got this wound while acting as an innocent bystander at a Chicago strike riot. It was a brick.—Chicago Times-Herald.

A very Remarkable Remedy.

It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, says Druggist A. W. Sawtelle, of Hartford, Conn. "A lady customer, seeing the remedy exposed for sale on my show case said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore,' and she became so enthusiastic over its merits that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he sank at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever.

A Woman's Awful Peril.

"There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation" were the startling words heard by Mrs I. B. Hunt of Lime Ridge, Wis., from her doctor after he had vainly tried to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. Gaul stones had already formed and she constantly grew worse. Then she began to use Electric Bitters which wholly cured her. It is a wonderful Stomach, Liver and Kidney remedy. Cures dispepsia, loss of appetite. Try it. Only 50c. Guaranteed.

Beware of a Cough.

A cough is not a disease, but a symptom. Consumption and bronchitis, which are the most dangerous and fatal diseases, have for their first indication a persistent cough, and if properly treated as soon as this cough appears are easily cured. Chamberlain's cough remedy has proven wonderfully successful, and gained its wide reputation and extensive sale by its success in curing diseases which cause coughing. The Falling Leaves Give Warning of Winter

So the falling of the hair tells of the approach of age and declining power.

No matter how barren the tree nor how leafless it may seem, you confidently expect leaves again. And why?

Because there is life at the roots.

So you need not worry about the falling of your hair, the threatened departure of youth and beauty. And why?

Because if there is a spark of life remaining in the roots of the hair will arouse it into healthy activity. The hair ceases to come out; it begins to grow; and the glory of your youth is restored to you.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR

We have a book on the Hair and its Diseases. It is free.

Missouri's Grand Old Man.

Mr Vest gloriously said: "I do not belong to this modern school which is teaching the young men of the United States that our country has outgrown the Constitution, and that 'the young giant can no longer be amused by the nursery songs of his childhood.' I believe that the men who are teaching this doctrine are worse enemies to the Republic that its armed foes." This is the doctrine for all patriots to teach at all times. The Constitution is an embodiment of those elementary principles which are absolutely necessary for men to observe and respect if they would hope to live together in a society where all stand upon an equal footing and every man has an opportunity to better himself according to the powers and abilities which nature has given him, and the blackest hearted traitor which our country can know is the man who would attempt to corrupt the public mind and morals by persuading men to believe that the Constitution is the work of old fogies, unsuited to the new order of things. The Constitution is the embodiment of the theory that every man shall be treated with perfect impartiality and justice, and there can never be any order of things, old or new, when that theory is unsuited to the actual condition of affairs. —Richmond Dispatch.

MARLINTON, THURS. MAY 17, 1900.

Entered at the post-office at Marlinton, W. Va., as second class matter.

Our editor friend, the editor of the Monroe Watchman, was not elected a delegate to the National Convention at Kansas City. On the other hand J. W. St Claire, Joe Chilton, and John D. Alderson were. Without knowing the particulars we presume that it was a deal in which three kings beat a lone ace. Newspaper men, as a rule, do not get rewarded for their trouble. Their work is so constant and so harassing that they have no time to lay schemes for themselves in politics. When they do come out, they generally hark back to the printing office to take up the burden of life again, and say "the back of the ox is shaped for the burden." West Virginia editors are used to sucking the hind tit.

The friends of sobriety and good order are much gratified at the change that has recently come over the spirit of Marlinton's dreams. Rev Mr White was more than pleased by what he heard and saw. Let it be remembered that a good name is more to be desired than silver or gold, for a good name in a pinch will go farther than the other things will go, not backed by a good reputation. W. T. F.

NEW HOPE, VA.

We always read the Times with great interest. We think it real good, especially "A Leaf from my Note book." We would be glad to know whose notebook it is from.

The health of the dear people of Augusta is some better, but death has been in our midst. There were five deaths near us last week.

Wm. F. Kiracofe died at his home near Sangersville April 23. He was known to the people of Pocahontas as a pump maker. He was much respected by all who knew him there, as well as in Augusta.

We were sorry to read of the deaths of Mrs I. B. Moore, William Buzzard and Rev G. P. Hannah. While we mourn their loss, we hope the Realms of Eternal Day are blessed with three more sainted spirits.

The Presbytery which met at Mt Horeb, below New Hope, was quite a success.

Mrs J. N. Vandeventor wife of the Presbyterian minister at the Old Stone Church, at Ft. Defiance, who has been quite ill all winter, is improving slowly.

Rev, R. M. Martin, M. E. minister at New Hope, has entered upon his second year in delicate health.

Clark Gum, the blacksmith at Frost, may continue to strike while the iron is hot with no fear of competition.

Corn planting over and coming up, but it is being cut down before it is ripe by cut worms.

The frost last week did not kill the fruit.

The sick in our community say they are tired of the word grippe, and much more tired of the disease.

Col Tork seems to be taking great interest in the prosperity of old Pocahontas. We enjoy his pieces written for the Spectator. He has many friends here, where his boyhood days were spent.

May has been extremely warm and very dry. People are longing for a nice rain.

Persons seeking health are invited to visit Salem Springs in Agusta County. The large hotel will be occupied and ready for boarders this season.

LITTLE ME.

DIED.

Rev M. H. Bittenger, a widely known minister, died at his home, Centreville, Monroe County, May 12, aged about seventy-three years. He has been in the ministry about forty-five years, and has spent nearly all of his ministerial life in West Monroe. He was held in highest esteem for his piety, culture and fine pulpit abilities. He collected the largest private library in West Virginia, so far as known, and made good use of the same. His decease was the result of paralysis that struck him more than a year since.

Capt. R. E. L. McNeer, of Monroe County, died suddenly, May 12, at the Red Sulphur. He had been a soldier in the Cuban Insurgent Army three years, and was on General Maceo's staff at the time the General was slain in an ambuscade. He was captured by the Spaniards and put in prison at Mantanzas, but, escaping therefrom, joined the 7th Ohio Volunteers and served until mustered out as Regimental Sergeant Major.

Local Events.

Fine rains fell throughout the county last Friday and Saturday.

If you want to get the highest price in the country for your wool, see A Harrison & Co.

The commencement of the Lewisburg Female Institute will be held the 25th—29 instant.

Dr Ligon Marshall has located in Marlinton and will be found at the Yeager Hotel.

B. N. Rayburn had the mirfortune to lose an excellent horse on the trip to the railroad, last week.

Preaching service at Sunset next Sunday morning at eleven; Mt. Vernon at four in the afternoon by W. T. Price.

The Knapps Creek bridge will be done on time. A substantial cofferdam has been built and the pier is all that remains to be done.

Wm. G. Rodgers, a Highland citizen of wealth and well known in our county, died recently at his home near Vanderpool, aged about 75 years.

Oscar Slaven, of Kansas, is now in Marlinton visiting his sisters, Mrs S. L. Brown and L. M. McClintic. Mrs Brown has been able to ride out most every day the past week and finds it very refreshing.

We cannot conceive what has become of all the sawmills in the country. It is praticably impossible to buy lumber for quick delivery in Marlinton, and our building boom has been greatly hindered by this state of affairs.

J. A. McNeel, of Rockbridge, accompanied by his daughter Mary See and son Paul, passed Marlinton Saturday, enroute for the Levels. Miss McNeel will remain several weeks visiting friends and relatives.

The Parlor Millinery Co. have now a first class dress maker from the city. All ladies wishing a dress made first class and up-to-date will do well to call and see Miss Emma Rowem, from Armstrong & Cater, Baltimore, Md.

The fine large grey that Ed Rutlege drives to the Jericho quarry is a horse with a past. Three or four years since he kicked a buggy to pieces and killed an aged lady, Mrs Fitzgerald, near Ronceverte.

A deed has been recorded from John T. McGraw and others to the Gauley Company for the one half undivided interest in 6123 acres on Williams River. This gives the Gauley Company the ownership of the Penick, Slaughter, and John A. McNeel tract.

May 10, John Williams, once a supervisor of Greenbrier County, was found dead on Droop Mountain near the Pocahontas line, aged about 65 years. His ailment is thought to have been heart disease and when stricken fell from his horse.

Rev W. McC. White, from Lewisburg, preached a series of sermons at Marlinton the past week which were impressive and edifying to a marked degree. The Marlinton and Huntersville churches were declared vacant, and measures will be at once taken for a new pastor.

The Golden Store.

In the passing month three colored outlaws have left West Virginia for good and all. May 10, Wm Gray, at Caperton, shot [illegible] the board; May 11, Wm. Lee, from North Carolina, taken out of jail at Hinton, hung and riddled with 200 bullets, for a nameless offense; and Frank Ross, from the same State, shot at Pitts camp, near Marlinton, early in the month.

HOT FROM THE OVEN: Take these bargains before they get cold. For Cash: [illegible] To any one who will buy $1 worth of dry goods, we will sell one nice set of glass [illegible] for 25cts. This offer is good for a short time. Your gain and our loss.—L. D. SHARP, Linwood, W. Va.

There will be a total eclipse of the sun May 28th, next Monday, visible in North America. The eclipse will begin at 7:41 a. m. We are not far from the path of the total eclipse. The time of maximum [illegible] will be about 9 o'clock. [illegible] are coming from all over the world to view this eclipse from North America. About nine tenths of the sun will be darkened at this place.

BURNED TO DEATH.

What was probably the most shocking Accident ever occurring in our County, occurred near Buckeye, May 15.

Josie Francis Dorman, the little daughter of M. Dorman who attends McClintic's mill, was kindling a fire in the stove preparing to get supper. In some way a large can of kerosene became ignited and enveloped her in flames. No assistance was nearer than the mill where her father was at work.

She ran toward the mill and was met by her father who extinguished the flames, after being frightfully burned himself. In the meantime the building was set on fire by the burning kerosene and was only saved by the efforts of some men who happened to be working near. A physician, who fortunately passed by at this time, was called in and everything possible was done to relieve the child but inspite of all efforts she died the following morning at 4 o'clock, aged 11 years, 3 months and 18 days. She was buried at 11 o'clock on Thursday at Bethel church.

If the sympathy of a host of friends would sooth the distress of the grief stricken family, their sorrow would be short lived, but death is a thing for which earth has no consolation, save the knowledge that we can have no sorrow too great for heaven to heal.

She was loved by all who knew her, and is mourned by her youthful playmates and older friends.

Thou art gone, little Josie,
Child of our love;
From earth's fairy strand
To bright mansions above.

A FRIEND.

Meeting of Committee.

The Democratic Executive Committee met in the county court room last Thursday, the day set, to canvass the returns of the primary. There were present the chairman E. I. Holt, the secretary Andrew Price, Dr McClintic, one of the members from Levels district, and H. A. Yeager of the Edray District.

Ordinarily the declaring the result of a primary and certifying the nominations to the Clerk of the Circuit Court under the Australian ballot law, is a perfunctory duty devolving upon the chairman and secretary. Under the rules laid down in the call for a primary, four members were made a quorum to ascertain and declare the result of the primary. Mr Yeager being a candidate for the House of Delegates in the primary appeared with his attorney S. B. Scott, Jr., and announced that he would contest the election as to the House of Delegates, L M. McClintic having received a majority of three on the face of the returns and would therefore not act as a member of the committee.

Attention was called to the fact that only three members of the committee remained to be present, and desiring a full meeting of the committee it was decided to adjourn until Saturday, June 2 next, when it is desired that a full meeting of the committee be present to consider the question.

The ballots of the election from Marlinton were presented to the committee in the ballot-box, and were taken out placed in an envelope and sealed by the committee. The sealed returns from the other precincts were not opened but the whole were deposited in bank for safe keeping.

The Coming Theatricals.

May 24 and 25.

The local talent will give a two-night entertainment on Thursday and Friday nights, May 24 and 25, at the Court House, for the benefit of the Marlinton Brass Band. A first class play is billed for Thursday night. The program for Friday night is varied—a general entertainment. No pains have been spared to make this show a success, and the best of its kind.

Trout Fishing Party.

Governor William A. Stone of Pennsylvania, accompanied by his son Stephen, his brother-in-law General James L. White of Washington, Congressman William H. Graham of Allegheny City, Pa., and others, according to the Baltimore Sun, are at the Cheat clubhouse in this county on a trout fishing trip.

Musical Association.

The next meeting of the Pocahontas County Musical Association will be held at Academy [illegible] on Thursday evening at eight o'clock June 7th, and continuing over Friday and Saturday. All lovers of music expected to attend. Respectfully,

S. B. MOORE, President.

A LEAF FROM MY NOTE-BOOK.

Do bear with us, dear readers of the Times. We were not so long in making the trip from Slaty Fork to Edray, but the delay was in getting our notes in the paper.

Well, there is an old steam engine. It has a history of course, but we do not know much about it save one thing. It bursted some years ago and fatally scalded a young man named Jack, whose father now lives on yonder height of land on the opposite side of the pike. Mr Jack we are told has a good farm on the top of that mountain. We hope that if he be taken from earth as suddenly as his son was, that he will be ready to go and make a bright and shining star on the table lands of immortality.

The next thing that attracts our attention is Mrs McLaughlin's neat and quiet little home. She, though a widow lady and living almost alone, seems to enjoy life. As an eminent divine said to us once, she has a good Presbyterian name,—and so have many of the good people on this creek. But if God fore-ordained from all eternity for them to be Methodist, they can not help it, and we will not grumble about it whether they be Methodist or Presbyterian, so long as they have and retain the one thing needful, for which the Lord commended Mary of old. We may say, however, in passing that we think Mrs McLaughlin is a very good woman—a widow indeed.

Yonder is Boud Hannah. He speaks kindly, politely, and treats us, as he always does, with the greatest respect. Boud has a good farm here and another good one farther down this creek. The greater part of both these farms is nestled down in the bottom lands of this quiet valley. We hope their owner and occupants will live in the valley of humiliation before God, so that when the light of eternity fully breaks upon his vision that he will occupy a highly exalted position in the heavenly world.

Hurrying on, for our company rides faster than we generally do when traveling alone, we are nearing Jacob Moore's residence where peace and quietude seem to reign supreme. Here lives a good man. He is a member of the School Board and well thought of by the people generally. He belongs to the church, and we hope to shake hands with him where sorrow never comes. We must not pass here without noticing yonder mound on a high knob where the mortal remains of Mrs Moore await the resurrection of the just. Mrs Moore died last summer and left quite a large family behind her. Our earnest prayer is that they will see to it, each one of them, not to miss their mother's heaven when called to quit this mundane sphere.

Now we reach the school-house, near the foot of the mountain, where John S. Moore taught school last winter. Mr Moore is one of the lucky teachers this year—he got two schools. He is teaching at Huntersville now. Across the creek to the right of us is a little cabin where Wesley Brown, a colored man lives. Wesley is an octogenarian. He was a slave and is now supported in his old age by some of the family he served so faithfully. Wesley might differ from us in some minor points of doctrine were we to talk religion to him, but we take it for granted that he possesses the needful thing and will turn up all right in the general roll call.

Here the creek forks. You could jump across the great Elk River at this point. Out of sight up a ravine is where Hamilton Gay lives. We are not very well acquainted with Mr Gay but think well of him and feel well toward him, as we always aim to have a good place in our affections for all.

We now make mention of Mrs Jordan, another respectable widow lady, who lives among the spurs of the Elk mountain, which crowds itself upon us and becomes a stern reality at this stage of things. We right here recall the death and burial of Newton Jordan, which occurred in the latter part of last summer. Newton tried hard to live, and this is right. None should die until they have to, but Newton finally died in peace. We had something to do in connection with his burial. We hope to meet Newton "where sickness, sorrow, pain, and death are felt and feared no more." We drop a word of kindness and love for to cheer and encourage the still living members of this family, and do not forget in this connexion Newton's widow and precious child. We send a warm wish to heaven for them all.

By this time we have gotten quite a start up the big mountain. Joseph Gay joins us here. He comes riding out from his beautiful stock farm on those splendid heights. We think well also of Mr Gay. So far as we know him we like him, and pray that he may certainly occupy as high land in heaven as he does on earth. But away down yonder on the opposite side of the road lives a poor man in Giles Sharp's house, whom we saw by the roadside yesterday making shingles for Luther Sharps addition to his store house. We do not remember this man's name, but we would like to say something or "do something if we could to help him up the steep and rugged hillside of life and make him ride in the glory world, though he may not own a foot of land in this world.

We top the mountain and would like to pause a little if time would permit and survey the grandeur, beauty and pristine loveliness of the scene which the God of Nature spreads out before us. But we go on winding down the other side of the mountain over this well graded road, getting an occasional glimse of the old road nearly straight up and down the heights. What an improvement in roads as well as other things. Sometimes we think of this world as but in its infancy and the perfection it will finally reach a long way off. But however this is, trusting God all will be well. Truly, A. M.

A Missionary Tale.

In the historic town of Lewisburg two girls were trying to make money for the missionary society. One young lady wished to help raise a fund to send a missionary to the Philippines, and the other a missionary to Pocahontas, or in other words, one was working for foreign missions and the other for home missions. The people of the benevolent town of Lewisburg are divided as to which place needed the gospel the more, and so there are two funds.

One young lady of the eminently respectable town of Lewisburg had a hen which was to lay eggs and set on them and rear a brood or two of chickens, the proceeds of which was to go to help the heathen. You can take a pencil and a piece of paper any day and figure out profits in the poultry business. We got at it one day, and the only thing that prevented our ordering an incubator was the fear of glutting the market.

The other young lady of the socially delightful town of Lewisburg planted a pansy bed intending to bring light to the Philippines or Pocahontas.

One day recently the hen got into the pansy bed and utterly destroyed it. The owner discovered the hen in the act, and taking a club utterly destroyed her.

Now the heathen of Pocahontas stretch their hands to the heathen of the Philippines in their destitution and wonder if the missionaries will come anyway.

Resolutions.

Whereas, a request has been received from Rev W. T. Price, asking that the pastoral relation existing between himself and the churches at Huntersville and Marlinton be dissolved, on account of advancing age and recent illness; and

Whereas, this request has been concurred in by the churches under his urgent insistance; therefore be it

Resolved, That the request be granted and the pastoral relation be hereby dissolved.

2. That Rev W. McC. White be appointed to preach in the churches and declare them vacant.

3. That Presbytery hears of our dear brother's enfeebled health with sincere sympathy, sorrows with him in the sadness of this trying hour, and tenders him this expression of our esteem, confidence and brotherly love, with prayer that the "God of all Comfort" may be very near, and graciously grant his servant light at evening time.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to Rev W. T. Pribe, and also to the Pocahontas Times, with request for their publication.

By order of Presbytery

GREEN BANK.

We had a very fine rain Friday night and Saturday which was badly needed as the grass was burning and wheat and oats dying.

Mrs Henry Sharp and daughter Miss Pearl, of Driscol, were visiting in town Saturday and Sunday.

Cooper & Son were in town Saturday. They will do some painting for James Stretch.

Dr L. L. Little bought a fine saddle horse last week from H. A. Yeager.

L. J. R. Dysard was over to the Durbin town last week.

Why don't some one take the bridges out of the road between Green Bank and Dunmore so the people go over in safety.

There is a good big frost this Monday morning, with some ice.

The Secretary of the Board of Education of Green Bank District desires all persons having claims against said boards to present same for payment.—By order of the Board. MRS POOH.

BROWNS CREEK.

We had fine rains Friday and Saturday, which were badly needed.

Working the roads and shearing sheep seems to be the order of the day.

J. J. Noonan moved to Craigsville, Va., last Friday. A. W. Curry from Frost to Brown's Creek.

J. W. Loury and H. P. McLaughlin were the guests of J. F. Wanless last Sunday.

Frank Hogsett is at home from the railroad.

W. P. Hogsett, who has been quite unwell for some time, is able to be about again, we are glad to say.

Amos McCarty seems to be the champion shot up here. He killed five crows at one shot.

All quiet since the Primary.

MILL POINT.

"More rain," the farmers say.

Isaac Simmons, Moody Pyles and Ira Clendennin have gone to Dan O'Connell's camp to spend the summer in the shade of the pines.

Our constable was on special business Sunday.

We are certainly glad that Mrs Bessie Shafer is permitted to be with us again. Her health has been restored.

We are glad that our little town will furnish our next Prosecuting Attorney, T. S. McNeel.

Frank Jerio, musician and entertainer, went to mill Sunday to give lessons.

We think a few more murderous acts will make our county worse than the State of Kentucky.

CATARRH CAN BE CURED BY

Johnston's Sarsaparilla

QUART BOTTLES.

"DANGER IN THE EARTH AND AIR; DANGER EVERYWHERE."

A Wise and Venerable Doctor Talks about Advanced Science.

In a leading hotel, in a great city, a famous and aged physician was conversing. Listening to his wise and sententious discourse, were a group of well dressed men, evidently lawyers, business men and commercial travelers.

My firm belief, is "that medical science is certain yet to show that all diseases without exception are caused by invisible germs which are living organisms. Here is the germ of that terrible disease diphtheria. Here is the bacillus of typhoid fever; and here is the still more dreadful bacillus of tubercle which causes that most destructive of all diseases, consumption. This of that very common and supposed incurable disease, catarrh."

"I wish, Doctor," said the traveling man, "that you would tell us about catarrh. I have had it for years, and I am thoroughly discouraged."

The Doctor answered, "Catarrh, like diphtheria, consumption, typhoid fever, and a host of other diseases, is the result of a microbe invading the blood and attacking specially the mucous membrane. This foul and most disgusting disease is especially prevalent in the United States and it is rare to meet one who is not, or has not been troubled more or less with it. How often is he or she obliged to remain at home from pleasant entertainments, deprive themselves of many intellectual treats, from fear of the disagreeable odor arising from catarrhal affections. In its worst phase, the patient becomes loathsome both to himself and his friends.

"I believe," continued this great physician, "that the true way to heal catarrh is to medicate the blood. This can be done only by powerful alteratives which act as blood purifiers."

Betsy A. Marcjt, of Manistee, Manistee Co., Mich., writes:

Dear Sirs:—For ten years I was a sufferer from general debility and chronic catarrh. My face was pale as death. I was weak and short of breath. I could hardly walk, I was so dizzy and had a ringing in my head all the time. My hands and feet were always cold. My appetite was very poor. On getting up in the morning, my head swam so I was often obliged to lie down again. I had awful pains in the small of my back. I had a continual feeling of tiredness. My muscular power was almost entirely gone, and I couldn't go half a dozen steps without stopping to rest, and often that much exercise caused me to have a pain in my side. It seemed as though the blood had left my veins. The doctors said my blood had all turned to water. I had given up all hope of ever getting well. I tried the best physicians in the state, but failed to get any relief. My husband got me a bottle of Johnston's Sarsaparilla. I took it, and then I bought another. When these had been used, I was somewhat improved in health. I continued its use, and felt I was growing stronger; my sleep was refreshing, and it seemed as if I could feel new blood moving through my veins. I kept on taking it, and now consider myself a well and rugged woman. I work all the time, and am happy. I am positive that the Sarsaparilla saved my life. The sick headaches I have had since childhood, have disappeared, and my catarrh has almost entirely left me. I cannot be too thankful for what Johnston's Sarsaparilla has done for me. I recommend all women who have sick headaches to use your Sarsaparilla.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by the inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars.

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

"But this is too radical," protested King John, looking at the document the Barons wanted him to sign. "It subverts my whole kingdom, gentlemen. I can countenance no such change as that." "We'll change your countenance if you don't!" sternly answered the Barons. "That puts a new face on the matter," rejoined King John, affixing his seal with an effort at sprightliness.—Chicago Tribune.

A Sprained Ankle Quickly Cured

"At one time I suffered from a severe sprain of the ankle," says George E. Cary, editor of the Guide, Washington, Va. "After using several well recommended medicines without success, I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and am pleased to say that relief came as soon as I began its use and a complete cure speedily followed. This remedy has also been used in my family for frost bitten feet with the best results. I cheerfully recommend its use to all who may need a first-class liniment. Sold by—

EVERY LOVER OF ART

WILL BE GLAD TO LEARN THAT

The Masterpieces of America's Greatest Artists

Are to be Reproduced in the Finest Photogravure Process

THESE photogravures represent paintings that have been sold for thousands of dollars, and others that are fresh from the artists' brush. They would sell rapidly at any art store at $5 each, but they can be purchased only from us, as we absolutely control the copyrights.

The Masterpieces of twenty-five of our Greatest American Artists now for the first time available in a single collection

Beautify Your Home

This collection of paintings, varied in style and color-tone, will superbly adorn any home. They are 18 x 24 inches in size, are placed in a beautiful portfolio, and so arranged that they can be conveniently removed for framing.

An Art Educator

This magnificent collection will at once stimulate and cultivate a desire for the artistic. A complete description accompanies each painting, also a portrait and biographical sketch of the artist, an interesting account of his early studies, how he was led to take up art as a profession, in what schools and under what masters he received his instruction. It describes his trips and sojourns abroad, where and when his paintings were first exhibited, and the honors they received both in Europe and America. The titles of the artist's most notable paintings are also given, and where they are now. All this information is not only interesting, but exceedingly instructive.

SPECIAL PROPOSITION

To those who write at once we will send one of our original specimen sets by express, being the first sharp, clear impressions from the fresh, new plates. The price will be less than one-third their real value, and the payments easy, with the privilege of return if not satisfactory. Clip this special proposition and send with your letter.

West Virginia University,

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

The School of Music

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Premedical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

MORE POINTERS FROM UNCLE ABRAHAM.

Uncle Abraham was much out of place, it would seem, for if every one was like him sales would be few and far between.

Having expressed the opinion [illegible] gentlemen on their knees, he proceeds to moralize in this manner. Perhaps the parties now on their knees have had a small estate left them, which they knew not the getting; they think 'T is day and will never be night; that a little to be spent out so much is not worth minding, (A child and a thoughtless one, as Poor Richard says, imagine that twenty shillings and twenty years can never be spent), but, Always taking out of the meal tub and never putting in soon comes to the bottom. When the well is dry people know the worth of water, and such might have known before if they had only heeded good advice.

It is always easier to suppress the first desire than to satisfy all that follow it, and Poor Dick was of the opinion, 'T is as truly silly for the poor to ape the rich as for the frog to swell in order to equal the ox.

Great estates may venture more,
But little boats should keep near shore.

This, however, is a folly soon punished; for Pride that dines on vanity sups on contempt, and in another place poor Richard says: Pride breakfasted with Plenty, dined with Poverty, and supped with Infamy. And after all, exclaims Uncle Abraham, warming up to his subject, of what use is this pride of appearances for which so much is risked, so much suffered? It can not promote health or ease pain; it makes no increase of merit in the person; it creates envy; it hastens misfortune.

What is a butterfly? At best
He's but a caterpillar drest:
The gaudy fop's his picture just,

as poor Richard says.

But what madness must it be to run into debt for these superfluities. Here we are offered by the terms of the vendor six months credit, and that perhaps has induced some of us to attend it, because we could n't spare the ready money and hope now to be fine without it. But O! think what you do when you run into debt; you give another power over your liberty. If you can not pay at the time you will be ashamed to see your creditor; you will be in fear when you speak to him; you may perhaps be tempted to make poor pitiful sneaking excuses, and by degrees come to lose your veracity and sink into base downright lying; for as Poor Richard says, The second vice is lying, the first is running into debt; and again to [illegible] back; whereas a freeborn citizen ought not to be ashamed or afraid to see or speak to any man living. But poverty often deprives a man of all spirit and virtue. 'Tis hard for an empty bag to stand upright, as Poor Dick truly says.

What would you think of that prince or the Government who should issue an edict forbidding you to dress like a gentleman or a lady on pain of being sold out of house or home? Would you not say that you are free, have a right to dress as you please, and that such an edict would be a breach of your privileges, and such a Government? And yet you are about to put yourself under such tyranny when you run in debt for dress or show. Your creditor has authority at his pleasure to set you out in the big road, should you not be able to pay him.

Then again, when you have gained your bargain, you may perhaps think little of payment, but creditors (Poor Richard tells us) have better memories than debtors: and creditors are a superstitious set, great observers of set days and times. Pay day comes round before you are aware, and the demand for settlement before you are prepared to satisfy it; or if you bear your debt in mind, the term which at first seemed so long, will, as it lessons, appear extremely short. Time will seem to have added wings to his heels as well as to his shoulders. Those have a short Lent, saith Poor Dick, who owe money to be paid at Easter.

Then since, as he says, The borrower is a slave to the lender, and the debtor to the creditor, disdain the chain preserve your freedom, and maintain your independency. Be industrious and free; be frugal and free. At present perhaps you may think yourself in thriving circumstances, and that you can bear a little extravagance without injury, but—

For age and want save while you may;
No morning sun lasts a whole day.

Now as Poor Richard says, gain may be temporary and uncertain, but ever while you live expense is constant and certain; and it is easier to build two chimneys than to keep one in fuel; so rather go to bed supperless than rise in debt. This doctrine, my friends, is reason and wisdom.

Get what you can and what you get hold,
'Tis the stone that will turn all your lead into gold.

But still, after all, do not depend too much upon your own industry, frugality, tho such excellent things for they may all be blasted without the blessing of Heaven; and therefore ask that blessing humbly, and be not uncharitable to those that at present seem to want it, but comfort and help them. Remember Job suffered, and was afterwards prosperous.

And now to conclude, Experience keeps a dear school, but there are some who will learn in no other—and scarce in that; for it is true we may give advice, but we can not give conduct. However, remember this, They that wont be counseled cant be helped; and further, If you will not hear Reason she'll surely rap your knuckles, quoth Poor Richard.

Uncle Abraham reports that the crowd gave him good attention, approved his doctrines, and immediately practiced the contrary,—just as if it had been a common sermon. For the auctioneer took his place and the people bought extravagantly, notwithstanding all the cautions he gave them and their own great fear of taxes and hard times.

There was one person, however, that was influenced. It was his purpose to buy stuff for a new coat but the harangue seemed to have its effect and he went away resolved to wear the old coat a little longer. It was a satisfaction whenever he thought of the old coat, that it was paid for, and the profit derived from that act of self-denial was such that in the course of time he had a new paid for coat, when the old one was sent to the [illegible]

The Horse in Battle.

Horses wounded on the battlefield are duly attended to when no danger to human life is involved. At the conclusion of the battle, if it has been decisive and one or other of the combatant armies has been driven from the field, a party of veterinary surgeons, with their assistants, is sent out to examine every animal that has fallen, and to shoot such as are badly wounded. Those suffering from only slight injuries are collected and taken to the veterinary hospital lines. Here they are again examined by the officers waiting for their reception, and operated on as occasion may necessitate. The station is fitted with operating tables upon which the animals are strapped for the extraction of bullets, after which they are sent down to the sick-horse hospitals for recovery.

At Talavera 290 horses were killed and 240 men, while at the famous charge of the Light Brigade at Balaclava the losses among the horses was 360 and among the men 280.

The horse is more liable to suffer from hunger and want of rest than a man, and consequently we find that in all protracted wars the loss in horses from diseases from disease is terribly heavy. In Napoleon's campaign across the Nieman, out of 60,000 horses no fewer than 45,000 succomed in six months. At the seige of Plevna the Russians lost over 30 per cent. of their draft animals; and in the Egyptian war of 1882 half the English horses were disabled, of which 600 died from sickness and only 60 on the field of Battle.—Pearson's Magazine.

Tortured a Witness.

Intense suffering was endured by witness T. L. Martin, of Dixie, Ky., before he gave this evidence: "I coughed every night until my throat was nearly raw; then tried Dr King's New Discovery which gave instant relief. I have used it in my family four years and recommend it as the greatest remedy for coughs, colds and all throat, chest and lung troubles. It will stop the worst cough and not only prevents but absolutely cures consumption. Price 50c and $1. Every bottle guaranteed.

SHALL THERE BE A POCAHONTAS COUNTY HISTORY?

Having been repeatedly asked by quite a number of persons whether I would consent to edit and have printed such a History, I have concluded to do so, provided safe financial arrangements be made in advance.

Individually, I have nothing, financially, that I could afford to risk on a venture of this character.

Moreover, the time and labor required for a respectable History such as our County richly deserves, I learn from professionals they would not undertake for less than a thousand dollars as their own personal compensation, paid in advance or well secured at least.

Now, as my part of the proposed publication, prompted as I believe and trust, by local attachment and a patriotic desire to see my native county and her worthy citizenship have a suitable History, I will undertake the literary work, without any guarantee of adequate pecuniary compensation personally, provided four hundred responsible citizens would subscribe each $2.50 in advance.

Let it be understood, however, this subscription will not be payable until the book be put into the hands of the subscribers.

The names of the advance subscribers will appear in the preface of the book, and recognized as co-workers in the service of preparing the book for publication. To all others the book is to be sold at $3.00 per copy payable on delivery.

It is proposed to print an octavo volume of four or five hundred pages, according as the advance subscriptions may seem to justify. All persons inclined to favor and help this historical publication will please send me a postal card or letter with their own names, and as many other names they may find it in their power to procure or recommend, and they will be entered as advance subscribers.

As to the contents of this history, a prominent feature will be the "Biographical Notes" republished from The Pocahontas Times," corrected and extended to date, with some additional families yet to be written up, along with many miscellaneous articles illustrative of our county history yet to be prepared.

Our readers will perceive from what has been written, the matter stands in this way: I undertake a literary work without guaranteed personal recompense that professionals of the class, I would like to beg, would not undertake for less than one thousand dollars, and place the book in the hands of the advanced subscribers for $2.50 per copy, before the subscriptions become payable.

On the part of the advance subscriber, he is to write a postal card or letter to me at Marlinton, W. Va., be enrolled as an advance subscriber and have $2.50 ready. Several names might be on the same card or in the same letter, somewhat in this way: "We, the undersigned, hereby become advance subscribers to a History of Pocahontas County, to be edited by William T Price, and pledge ourselves to pay $2.50 each per copy on delivery of the same."

This offer remains open till August 1st, 1900.

Right now may not be the best time for such a work that has yet been; still, it is quite manifest it may be, and in fact is, the best time that may ever be again. The little that I have already done, in many instances, seems to have been just in time.

Quite a number of my best informed and reliable authorities in local history have already passed away in the little while since I interviewed them,—Mrs Elizabeth McLaughlin, Squire John W. Warwick, Colonel J. W. Ruckman, John Hanna, John and Samuel Sutton, Allan Galford, Mrs Nancy Callison, Dr Matt Wallace, and Captain William L. McNeel.

[illegible] present opportunity and each person guarantee $2.50 on the terms indicated, it is possible to prepare and publish a history that will do credit to their county and be an honor to themselves for all time to come, or as long as any one remains that may be interested in the annals of our great county, now emerging from obscurity with prospects of becoming one of the foremost counties of the West Virginia commonwealth.

Esteemed Friends, I now await your pleasure. Let your postals or letters be in hand on or before the 1st of August, 1900, the sooner the better, in order your names may appear in the preface, and thus due credit be accorded you as helpers without whose assistance the book would not have been published, and those coming after you will know whom to thank and honor for the pleasure and benefit afforded them by the proposed History.

If four hundred citizens, to be known in all time to come as the "Historical Four Hundred," do each the part suggested, I will do what has been proposed, and possibly more, should it please God to spare my life and keep me in health. —WM. T. PRICE.

IS THIS YOUR STORY?

"Every morning I have a bad taste in my mouth; my tongue is coated; my head aches and I often feel dizzy. I have no appetite for breakfast and what food I eat distresses me. I have a heavy feeling in my stomach. I am getting so weak that sometimes I tremble and my nerves are all unstrung. I am getting pale and thin. I am as tired in the morning as at night."

What does your doctor say?

"You are suffering from impure blood."

What is his remedy?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

You must not have constipated bowels if you expect the Sarsaparilla to do its best work. But Ayer's Pills cure constipation.

We have a book on Paleness and Weakness which you may have for the asking.

The Danger of Euphuism.

"Can I tell you the meaning of eupuism?" [illegible] the younger men on the staff. "Why certainly, my boy. It is the pleasant art of calling a bootblack a gentleman of polish, and its very valuable in newspaper work, provided you do not carry the joke too far. I remember when I was a 'cub' myself and was working out in Denver a fellow came in one day asked me to write a nice little notice about the marriage of his brother to a girl over in Centre City. 'Who is the bride?' I asked, so as to get some material for a paragraph; 'what is her father's occupation?' Why, he's a—teller' said my caller, with some hesitating a little. 'All right,' said I, and thinking it would sound a shade finer, I referred to the lady as 'the beautiful and accomplished daughter of the well-known banker of Centre City.' Next day the boss came in foaming at the mouth. 'What in the blazes do you mean by speaking of old—— as a banker?' he bellowed. 'He's a professional clairvoyant and the biggest old fraud out of jail! He's got an old ad in the paper right now, offering to reveal the past and future for 35 cents and lock of your hair!' I was overwhelmed with chagrin and hunted up my informant. 'Why did you tell me that girl's father was a banker?' I asked reproachfully. 'I did'nt he answered; 'I said he was a teller.' 'It's one and the same thing,' I retorted. 'No, it is'nt,' said he; 'you jumped at conclusions. I didn't mean a paying teller, I meant a fortune teller.'"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A very Remarkable Remedy.

It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, says Druggist A. W. Sawtelle, of Hartford, Conn. "A lady customer, seeing the remedy exposed for sale on my show case said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore,' and she became so enthusiastic over its merits that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he sank at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever."

MARLINTON, THURS. MAY 31, 1900.

Entered at the post-office at Marlinton, W. Va., as second class matter.

INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT.

The new railroad chartered to be built from Nicholas to Pocahontas county will develop one of the richest countries in the world. The land is underlaid with coal and the growth of timber on the surface is marvellous. It is the class of country that has proved too heavily timbered to clear. Around the heads of Cherry and Cranberry rivers lies a great wilderness. On Williams River the timber is practically untouched. It is in this section that a landowner sold a measured acre of timber to a sawmill man. The saw bill showed that 64,000 feet was cut from that acre.

The new town of Cass, which is to be established on the Greenbrier River about 25 miles above Marlinton at the mouth of Leatherbark Creek, will be one of the biggest towns of the county. A saw mill with the capacity of the St Lawrence Company's mill at Ronceverte will be established there. The pulp timber will be taken to the Covington mills and the saw timber to the mill at Leatherbark. Next to securing the pulp mill is the establishing the saw mill here, and the saw mill has none of the bad features of the pulp industry.

The stream Leatherbark comes into the Greenbrier River from the west. It goes back from the river right into Cheat Mountain and drains a fine timber country. Its headwaters extend to the banks of Cheat River. By a short cut of not over 20 feet depth the waters of Cheat River would be diverted into Greenbrier River by way of Leatherbark. Cheat River is on top of Cheat Mountain and Greenbrier River washes the foot of Cheat Mountain.

The town of Durbin, which will probably be the beneficiary of the expenditures of the Greenbrier River Lumber Company, will be laid off in lots and will be an important town on the new railroad.

Marlinton, as the county seat of what is probably the richest county of the State in natural resources, is certain to be one of the big towns of the State. It is the natural meeting place from east to west across the county, intersecting the Greenbrier Railway which runs north and south at Marlinton.

As a field for investment Pocahontas County offers unparallelled advantages. Every man who wants work can find it here. Tho this section is in the east the same advantages are here that were to be found in the west when Horace Greely advised young men to go west and grow up with the country.

A CARD.

Editor Pocahontas Times:

In the issue of the Times of the 17th day of May, you call attention to lawlessness in this county and correctly attribute it to the unlawful sale of whiskey. You say that "many persons have the illegal traffic here, but that we lack men who are willing to take the initiative to aid the officers to close the places, presumably here in Marlinton.

This I consider an unjust reflection on the law abiding citizens of Marlinton and is an intimation to outsiders that this class is small in Marlinton. On the contrary we have as many law abiding citizens here as in any other place in the county, and these citizens have shown in every possible way their willingness to aid the officials to eradicate this evil, and stand ready now to take the initiative to bring about this result, it they can have the assurance of the support of the proper officers of the county and of the court.

If complaints are made will you sustain with your paper all efforts to punish the offenders and to abate the nuisance.

Let us all understand each other.

Resp'l., H. A. YEAGER.

[NOTE: The article referred to the conditions existing in the whole county. The Times will be found on the side of law and order in any and every event.]

Circular 7,730 sent out by the Government contains the following statement; "More women marry than men." This seems rather remarkable for upon examination of the records of this county we find that each year since its formation exactly the same number of men and women have been married. We cannot imagine a different state of affairs in any other county so there must be something wrong about this statement of the Census Department.

In the Kanawha primary Gaines carried the county over Edwards by a majority of 12 in a vote of over six thousand for Congress. The Republican Executive Committee refused to recount the ballots on Edwards' motion.

In response to the question as to when the war will end, Lord Roberts telegraphs: "I regret that I cannot give any reply to your question, as it is impossible at present to predict when the campaign may end."

ARBOVALE.

And, by the way, it rained again.

Phil Edmeston was in town last Friday on business.

Benjamin Arbogast, George Oliver and Schuyler Fitzgerald were out to Huttonsville for goods last week.

Misses Virgie Gillespie and Lexie Sutton were in town one day last week.

Rev Pullen is holding a protracted meeting at the Moore school house on Back Alleghany.

John Coffe's little girl aged four years was very badly scalded the other day. She is not expected to live.

Mrs C. L. Burner and daughter Minnie were in town last week trading at the store.

Mrs Bertie Clark was in town last Friday.

Colaw & Moses, of Highland, are sawing a nice lot of lumber for David Shears.

Fount and Glen Arbogast were up to Traveler's Collapse last Saturday and Sunday on a fishing scout.

Working the roads is the order of the day.

Pearl Arbogast is able to be out again.

Marvin Wenger is in this part visiting friends and relatives.

The graveyard at Arbovale will be cleaned up next Thursday. Let every one come out and fix up the graves of the ones they love.

Robert Gum is tending the Hevener mill.

George Sutton and daughter Miss Lucy are in this part visiting friends.

This town is on a boom. There are eight dwelling houses, one church, harness shop, post office, store, carpenter shop, and milliner shop; all inside the corporation.

W. J. Lambert has moved to that beautiful town of Durbin.

George Hannah has bought him a new bike.

William Bestor is in this part again.

Rev C. C. Arbogast bought a fine horse the other day.

We are sorry to learn that Amos Gillespie had a fine horse stolen. May the guilty person be captured and sent to Moundsville, where he can behave himself.

We extend our sympathies to the people of New Hope. Va., where death has been so prevalent.

Rev Pullen preached a good sermon at Arbovale Sunday evening.

The funeral sermon of Wm Hill will be preached at Arbovale next Sunday by Rev Fulse of Greenbrier.

The International Peace Bureau at Berne, Switzerland, will make and appeal to the twenty-five powers signing the conventions adopted by the Hague Peace Conference, in favor of the restoration of peace in South Africa by means of mediation. The results of this appeal will be a crucial test as to whether there was any virtue in the Hague Peace Conference, or whether it was a pretentious, sanctimonious fiasco, having the form but destitute the power of peace. If the appeal fails the world may look out for the most terrific military cyclones before long.

About a dozen teams of Johnson Briggs & Pitts are hauling in ties cut on the lands of the Greenbrier River Lumber Company near Marlinton.

Miss Glenna Hill has closed her music instructions at Marlinton, and returned home last week. Miss Zoe Irvine received the handsome gold medal for improvement.

Peter Lightner of Greenbrier passed Marlinton last week on his return from Green Bank, where his daughter will spend several weeks visiting the home of Capt. G. W. Siple.

Rev J. M. Sloan will preach at Marlinton Friday night, June 8th, and remain until Sunday. He will preach Sunday morning at 11, and a congregational meeting will be held for election of pastor. At Huntersville same day at 4 o'clock p. m. a congregational meeting will be held for the same purpose.

The Greenbrier primary resulted in the nomination of T. H. [illegible] and B. F. Harlow for the Legislature; D. A. Dwyer for sheriff; Henry Gilmer for prosecuting attorney; J. W. McDowell for county commissioner; John Legg for assessor of the upper district; [illegible] Miller for assessor of the lower district; John Handley for surveyor. There were about [illegible] votes cast. Most of the interest centered about the race for sheriff. Dwyer's majority was about [illegible].

The following officers have been appointed by the council of the town of Marlinton: Sergeant, F. P. Anderson; Assessor, W. B. King; Street Commissioner, E. F. McLaughlin; Board of Health, Dr J. M. Cunningham, Dr E. J. Marshall, and E. D. King.

Webster.

Good morning Mr Editor.

I see you have had your primary election. A splendid ticket. You have one of the best men in the county for Representative, tho he had a close shave. Such a ticket is bound to bring victory to the Democrat party this fall.

They tell me that Marlinton is [illegible] spirit, the town was the right move in the right direction. I think she had room for improvement. Now for a first class saloon to bring you a revenue for your streets and walks, and not so many easy going drug stores. We have experienced this in our little county. Cowen is a good example—Addison is a better one.

The lumber business is progressing in this section. W. G. Gray has about ½ million of poplar yet to cut on Gauley River belonging to the Gauley Company. The Middle Fork Driving Company has ten million to cut this year. Henry Lynch has the cutting. Henry is a hustler, and will no doubt make good money. He is running a crew of fourteen men, and wants several more good men.

W. McClintic will commence skidding this week.

The Isenhart logging job on Little Fork is rather on the slow move, but probably they are catching a head.

We noticed the pleasant face of W. McClintic in Cowen last week. He is always a welcome visitor in town.

We learn his favorite road teamster, O. W. Kellison, is putting out a large crop of potatoes at the three forks of Williams River. Owen is a hustler and is always looking ahead.

Nath Doverspike's camp was consumed by fire last week.

A fine rain last week which was badly needed.

Webster Snake.

Brass Band Benefit.

Three very creditable entertainments were given in the court room last week by the young people of Marlinton, and a neat sum of money raised to help along the organization of a brass band at this place. We understand the instruments will be ordered at once, and the candidates will proceed to practice band music.

The promoters of the entertainment and all concerned tender heartfelt thanks to the honorable County Court for kind permission to use the court room on this occasion.

The programs of this entertainment are printed in full on the front page of this paper.

Musical Association.

The next meeting of the Pocahontas County Musical Association will be held at Academy commencing on Thursday evening at eight o'clock June 7th, and continuing over Friday and Saturday.

All leaders of music expected to attend. Respectfully,

S. B. Moore, President.

GREEN BANK.

Fine growing weather, but a little cold.

Farmers are complaining about corn not coming up well, and the cutworm is getting in his work. In some places frost cut the corn down, but there will be a good crop of fruit if it don't fall off.

S. M. Burner and Miss Pearl Yeager were in town one night last week.

Mrs J. C. Arbogast and son Earl were out to Doe Hill last week.

If you want a plaster that will stop pain in any part of the body, call on J. H. Curry and he will supply you.

Rev J. W. McNeel preached a very good sermon last Sunday night at this place.

J. W. Oliver of Wanless was in town Saturday.

There will be quarterly meeting services at this place on June 9th and 10th, at which time Rev Hutchinson will be here. Preaching on Saturday at 11 o'clock and on Sunday at the same hour.

S. R. Sutton and Wilson Sutton and family have rented the G. C. Cooper property near town and moved in last week.

The postoffice at this place will change hands shortly.

Dr J. P. Mooman is off to Lewisburg for his daughters who have been attending the L. F. I. The school is in vacation.

L. J. R. Dysard is on the sick list at this time.

We are looking for the eclipse this morning as we write. Yes, it is coming on now! I will clean my lamp and have it ready: I will not need it—it is getting lighter now.

Rev Caldwell will preach at Liberty church next Sunday at 11. We are glad to have him among us again.

CATARRH CAN BE CURED BY
Johnston's Sarsaparilla
QUART BOTTLES.

"DANGER IN THE EARTH AND AIR; DANGER EVERYWHERE."

A Wise and Venerable Doctor Talks about Advanced Science.

In a leading hotel, in a great city, a famous and aged physician was conversing. Listening to his wise and sententious discourse, were a group of well dressed men, evidently lawyers, business men and commercial travelers.

My firm belief, is "that medical science is certain yet to show that all diseases without exception are caused by invisible germs which are living organisms. Here is the germ of that terrible disease diphtheria. Here is the bacillus of typhoid fever; and here is the still more dreadful bacillus of tubercle which causes that most destructive of all diseases, consumption. This of that very common and supposed incurable disease, catarrh."

"I wish, Doctor," said the traveling man, "that you would tell us about catarrh. I have had it for years, and I am thoroughly discouraged."

The Doctor answered. "Catarrh, like diphtheria, consumption, typhoid fever, and a host of other diseases, is the result of a microbe invading the blood and attacking specially the mucous membrane. This foul and most disgusting disease is especially prevalent in the United States and it is rare to meet one who is not, or has not been troubled more or less with it. How often is he or she obliged to remain at home from pleasant entertainments, deprive themselves of many intellectual treats, from fear of the disagreeable odor arising from catarrhal affections. In its worst phase, the patient becomes loathsome both to himself and his friends.

"I believe," continued this great physician, "that the true way to heal catarrh is to medicate the blood. This can be done only by powerful alteratives which act as blood purifiers."

Betsy A. Marejl, of Manistee, Manistee Co., Mich., writes:

Dear Sirs:—For ten years I was a sufferer from general debility and chronic catarrh. My face was pale as death. I was weak and short of breath. I could hardly walk, I was so dizzy and had a ringing in my head all the time. My hands and feet were always cold. My appetite was very poor. On getting up in the morning, my head swam so I was often obliged to lie down again. I had awful pains in the small of my back. I had a continual feeling of tiredness. My muscular power was almost entirely gone, and I couldn't go half a dozen steps without stopping to rest, and often that much exercise caused me to have a pain in my side. It seemed as though the blood had left my veins. The doctors said my blood had all turned to water. I had given up all hope of ever getting well. I tried the best physicians in the state, but failed to get any relief. My husband got me a bottle of Johnston's Sarsaparilla. I took it, and then I bought another. When these had been used, I was somewhat improved in health. I continued its use, and felt I was growing stronger; my sleep was refreshing, and it seemed as if I could feel new blood moving through my veins. I kept on taking it, and now consider myself a well and rugged woman. I work all the time, and am happy. I am positive that the Sarsaparilla saved my life. The sick headaches I have had since childhood, have disappeared, and my catarrh has almost entirely left me. I cannot be too thankful for what Johnston's Sarsaparilla has done for me. I recommend all women who have sick headaches to use your Sarsaparilla.

After Big Bears.

Dr Frank Baker, of the Smithsonian Institution, has sent Elwood Hofer, a guide and hunter of the Yellowstone Park, to catch some of the monster bears on Kadiak Island, in the Gulf of Alaska, for the National Zoological Park. Vhese bears are of the polar breed, perfectly white with long, heavy fur, and at full growth are twice as large as the ordinary black bear of the Rocky Mountains, weighing from 2,4000 to 3,000 pounds and standing as high as an ordinary cow—the biggest corniverous animal living. The tracks they leave in the snow have often measured 15 inches long and 10 inches wide. They are very savage and fight desperately when attacked. Several have been killed and the skins brought to this country, but no Kadiak bear was ever captured alive. Dr. Tarleton H. Bean, the fish expert, who is in charge of the department of fisheries at the Paris Exposition, while making an exploration of the fishing resources of Kadiak Island last year, saw a good many of these bears and describes them in graphic terms. He says that while climbing a rocky hill one day he saw a large drove of them near the coast running about and playing like so many lambs. There must have been a hundred and fifty or two hundred in the bunch, he says, and some of them were enormous.—Baltimore Sun.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by the inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars.

The Bustle.

When the daily toil is over and the sun is going down, you are ready then to read the news that's going on in town. If you are a favorite paper, here's a hint, 'twill make you smile; perhaps you'll find it on your daughter, for the bustle's back in style. When you wash your face in soapsuds and are looking for a towel, while the soap is getting in your eyes, you start to swear and howl; wipe your face upon your coat sleeve, and remember all the while, that the towel's hard to locate since the bustle's back in style. Now, there's no use in getting angry and it does no good to swear; if your Sunday shirt is missing and you've nothing clean to wear, try your hardest to look pleasant, do your best to wear a smile, and remember when you miss things that the bustle's back in style.—Exchange.

A Sprained Ankle Quickly Cured

"At one time I suffered from a severe sprain of the ankle," says George E. Cary, editor of the Guide, Washington, Va. "After using several well recommended medicines without success, I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and am pleased to say that relief came as soon as I began its use and a complete cure speedily followed. This remedy has also been used in my family for frost bitten feet with the best results. I cheerfully recommend its use to all who may need a first-class liniment. Sold by—

THESE photogravures represent paintings that have been sold for thousands of dollars, and others that are fresh from the artists' brush. They would sell rapidly at any art store at $5 each, but they can be purchased only from us, as we absolutely control the copyrights.

The Masterpieces of twenty-five of our Greatest American Artists now for the first time available in a single collection

Beautify Your Home

This collection of paintings, varied in style and color-tone, will superbly adorn any home. They are 18 x 24 inches in size, are placed in a beautiful portfolio, and so arranged that they can be conveniently removed for framing.

An Art Educator

This magnificent collection will at once stimulate and cultivate a desire for the artistic. A complete description accompanies each painting, also a portrait and biographical sketch of the artist, an interesting account of his early studies, how he was led to take up art as a profession, in what schools and under what masters he received his instruction. It describes his trips and sojourns abroad, where and when his paintings were first exhibited, and the honors they received both in Europe and America. The titles of the artist's most notable paintings are also given, and where they are now. All this information is not only interesting, but exceedingly instructive.

A Warning to Borrowers.

A man who was too economical to take this paper sent his little boy to borrow the copy taken by his neighbor. In his haste the boy ran over a $4 stand of bees and in ten minutes looked like a warty summer squash. His cries reached his father, who ran to his assistance, and, failing to notice a barbed wire fence, ran into that, breaking it down, cutting a handful of flesh from his anatomy and ruining a $5 pair of pants. The old cow took advantage of the gap in the fence and got into the cornfield and killed herself eating green corn. Hearing the racket the wife ran, upset a four gallon churn of rich cream into a basket of kittens, drowning the whole flock. In her hurry she dropped a $7 set of false teeth. The baby, left alone, crawled through the spilled milk and into the parlor, ruining a $20 carpet. During the excitement the oldest daughter ran away with the hired man, the dog broke up 11 setting hens and the calves got out and chewed the tails off four fine shirts.—Exchange.

A Woman's Awful Peril.

"There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation" were the startling words heard by Mrs I. B. Hunt of Lime Ridge, Wis., from her doctor after he had vainly tried to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. Gall stones had already formed and she constantly grew worse. Then she began to use Electric Bitters which wholly cured her. It is a wonderful Stomach, Liver and Kidney remedy. Cures dyspepsia, loss of appetite. Try it. Only 50c. Guaranteed.

Beware of a Cough

A cough is not a disease, but a symptom. Consumption and bronchitis, which are the most dangerous and fatal diseases, have for their first indication a persistent cough, and if properly treated as soon as this cough appears are easily cured. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has proven wonderfully successful and gained its wide reputation and extensive sale by its success in curing diseases which cause coughing. West Virginia University,

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

The School of Music

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Preclinical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

POCAHONTAS, THE INDIAN PRINCESS.

As no historical name is more familiar to the residents of our great county, this article is intended to recall some interesting particulars of her history.

Thomas Mann Randolph was the Governor who approved the act that formed Pocahontas County, and his being a descendant of Pocahontas perhaps had much to do with this selection of a name for the new county.

About the first of March, 1899, a portrait of Pocahontas was presented to the Virginia Senate by Mr Henry S. Welcome, an American resident of England, a distinguished chemist and druggist.

This picture is a fine copy of a painting hanging on the walls of Boothin Hall, Norfolk, England, the former home of the Rolfe family. The original was painted from life by De Passe, an eminent artist of the 16th and early years of the 17th centuries. On the canvas of the original painting are these words painted: Matoaka Rebecka, filia potentis Prince Powhatani Imp. Virginia." Then lower down on the same canvass is this inscription, likewise painted:

> Matoaka, alias Rebeka, daughter of the mighty Prince Powhatani, Emperor of Attanough Komouck of Virninia; a Christian converted and married to the worshypful Mr Thomas Rolfe. Aged 21, 1616."

It seems there was a superstition among the Indians that prompted them to conceal the true name; Matoaka was the true name of the princess, yet the Indians called her Pocahontas.

Time and space will not be taken to repeat what is on record in all our histories, how Capt. John Smith, soldier, sailor, and knight-errant, landed at Jamestown, Virginia, May 13, 1607, and by his courage, wisdom, and tact with [illegible] preserved the colony from many trials and dangers.

The land was beautiful and fertile, and what bordered on the river was covered with groves of wonderful foliage and enchanting colors. Fish abounded in the waters and game roamed the forests beyond anything ever dreamed of in the old country.

Nevertheless danger lurked in every forest recess. Showers of arrows from Indian warriors hidden in the tall grass was the salute with which the settlers were received in that wilderness ruled by Powhatan, having a tribe estimated at 8000, of whom 2400 were warriors. There was discontent in the colony, and the royal order came for Captain Smith to go in search of the South Sea, of which the Gulf of Mexico is a well known feature to us. So to carry out the royal order, Captain John Smith on a bleak December day, 1607, with a small detachment embarked on a barge and headed up the Chicahominy River to find the South Sea. Coming to the shallows he had to leave the barge and most of his party.

Having secured a canoe and some Indians for guides, he detailed two of his companions and continued up the river to a point in the White Oak Swamp east of Richmond that he named Rassaweak. Here he was hindered in his search for the South Sea by a band of Indians, and being captured by them he was taken before their chief, Opechancanough, a brother of King Powhatan, who turned him over to his kingly relative to be disposed of, and so Capt Smith was sent under guard to Werowocomoco, Powhatan's chief place of council, in what is now Gloucester County, at a point not so very far from Yorktown, on the North Fork of York River.

Passing over the incidents of Capt. Smith's rescue so oft told tale, and of the many acts of kindness the young princess showed the settlers, we find that in the course of events Pocahontas herself became a prisoner in 1612, taken by Captain Samuel Argall, and was carried to Jamestown from her forest home much against her will, a disconsolate and sorrowing captive, seventeen or eighteen years of age.

John Rolf, sometimes called Thomas Rolfe, one of the colonists, was smitten with her charms, and his attachment was reciprocated. Rolfe it seems became now "much troubled in spirit." The Bible as he read it forbade marriage with strange wives, and their mutual love kindled a "mighty warfare in his meditations." The moving impulse of his soul, like most of colonists, was to christianize the heathen, and so Mr Rolfe reflected upon the question whether it was not his duty to marry and convert this "heathen creature Pocahontas." And so the historian says of this marriage: "What most touched and decided Rolfe was her desire to be taught and instructed in the knowledge of God; her capabilities of understanding, her aptness and willingness to receive any good impressions, and also the 'the spiritual beside her own incitements stirring me up thereto."

So according to the true poetic justice of romance the lovely Indian girl at the age of eighteen became Mrs John Rolfe in the old church at Jamestown and was endowed with the christian name of of Rebecca.

Three years later Mr Rolfe carried his bride to London, where she was honored as the daughter of a king, her arrival creating a great sensation.

In her Virginia forest home Pocahontas had dressed in doeskin lined with down from pigeon-breasts. Her adornments were anklets and bracelets of coral, with a white plume badge of royalty floating over her hair. But in London and in her English home she appeared in all the splendors of courts pparel, and was the first lady of the New World to appear in the home country of her husband.

Pocahontas was presented at [illegible] by Lady Delaware, and was most "graciously used" by the King and Queen.

The Primate of England pleased with her conversion to christianity gave a grand entertainment in her honor and for a time Pocahontas was all the fashion in the brilliant revels of the great metropolis.

In March, 1617, she died suddenly at Gravesend, aged twenty-two years. All her arrangements were about made for her return to Virginia. But she made "a godly end" and was buried in the parish church and her name carelessly registered Rebecca Wrothe. This building was afterwards burned, and in its ashes disappeared the earthly relics of Pocahontas.

She left one son, Thomas Rolfe, who was brought up in London. He finally came to Virginia and was known as Lieutenant Rolfe, commanding Fort James on the Chickahominy. Lieut. Rolfe married in England afterwards and brought his wife to Virginia, where he became a gentleman of note and fortune. Their only daughter became Mrs Robert Bolling, a widely connected family of Virginia. And now, as a Virginia historian says, "This remnant of the imperial family of Virginia, which long ran in a single person, is now increased and branched out into a very numerous progeny."

The character and worthy services of Pocahontas were fully attested and appreciated by the colonists. They were deeply touched by "the love of Pocahontas," who "ever once in four or five days brought food which saved many of their lives, that else for all this had starved of hunger," and they called her the "dear and blessed Pocahontas." Capt. John Smith said of her: "As for features, countenance, and expression she far exceeded any of the rest," and in his letter presenting and commending her to Queen Anne, Captain Smith declared that,—"During the time of two or three years, she, next under God, was still the instrument to preserve this colony from death, famine and utter confusion, which if in those days had once been discovered Virginia might have been as it was at our first arrival to this day."

Senator Daniel, who presented the portrait to the Virginia Senate for Mr Welcome, closed his presentation address in this manner:

"The charm of romance will ever hang over the story of Pocahontas, and that flower of the wilderness will ever shed its brightness and fragrance over the rude, sombre, and cruel scenes of our people's earliest struggles to get a foothold in the land, whose inhabitants are now as the stars of heaven, the leaves of the trees, and the sands of the sea. But far beyond this,—it should not be forgotten that she was indeed the guardian spirit of the great frontier Captain John Smith, and his feeble companions; and who knows but for her what would have been the new world's destiny?

"It is meet that her portrait should hang here, in remembrance of her lovely character and her pious deeds, and the myriads that gaze upon it, wondering whence came the gentle spirit that dwelt in the savage breast, will be minded also that all men are brethren, and that even in dark shadows of the forest primeval there may shine a light from Heaven and be found, or find at least,

> "'A spark of that immortal fire,
> By angels shared, by Allah given,
> To lift from earth our low desire.'"

LOOSE PIECES OF ROCK.

While it is a fact that Pocahontas County cannot keep her roads in first class order, still they can be vastly improved every spring by sending men over them throwing out the loose pieces of rock which interfere so seriously with the traveling public. Every one recognizes that the roads could be improved fifty per cent by this method at trifling cost, but it seems to be a case of official inertia.

If someone would institute a general rock-picking on the county roads at a cost of not over 50 cents per mile [illegible] improve as though by magic.

Go on any of our roads and you will see five pound pebbles which have been worn round and smooth by the wheels of vehicles. Thousand of people have come in contact with them and have let them lie. When the road mender comes by with a shovel (to save stooping) he takes the stone, and it requires just about one second to hurl it over the bank and out of the way.

How all the stones get into the road is more than we can imagine. There are certainly more stones in the roads than elsewhere. The county court is always providing for improvements, but there has never been a rock picking fund. Some men will of their own accord stoop and roll a stone away from the line of travel, but they are few and far between, and are philanthropists.

THE KENTUCKY CASE.

The Supreme Court of the United States decided that Taylor had had his rights under the Constitution of Kentucky, and that there were no grounds to give the Federal courts jurisdiction. This gives the Democrats control of the Governorship and minor offices. The Taylor militia decided not to disrupt the Union, so they gave three cheers for Taylor and disbanded. Beckham is governor.

It will take Kentucky a long time to recover from the effects of the terrible time she has experienced through her politicians. As long as people allow themselves to be moved by professional politicians such conditions are possible. Hardly one public man out of ten is sincere and honest. We believe that politics will corrupt any man. He is continually in a war in which hate, envy, malice, falsehood, fear and licentiousness mingle until his nature becomes warped and crooked.

He must be elevated to office by ways so crooked and has to stoop so low that when he is elected he feels that he has paid the price and is under no obligations to anyone.

Kentucky's condition is only the disease in a malignant form, and under our latter day system of politics any State is liable to pass through just such scenes of [illegible]

AN OLD CLOCK.

Mr J. M. Price, of Ronceverte, W. Va., writes us concerning a remarkable old clock:

I notice in a recent issue of your paper an account of Geo. Brown's clock, 40 years old. I have one in my house, one my father bought 1825 to 1827. It kept time for father ever afterwards, until his death, which occurred in 1877. Then sister Sarah kept it until she died, and then I had it brought to my house, and it is our standard time, far superior to any of the modern clock. In fact, the jeweler here says it is not worn any, as far as he can see.

It is a wooden clock and runs with weights. I read on the inside the following announcement by the maker: "Patent Clocks. Invented by Eli Terry. Made and Sold at Plymouth, Conn., by E. Terry & Sons. Warranted if well used."

This clock cost $40 when new—the price of 8 or 10 calves, at least, and about the highest price for a horse or two steers. Who says old things are not as good as the new—at least, clocks.

Our First International Marriage.

Some people are given to thinking that the Englishman's predilection for the American girl is a recently developed passion. Such [illegible] portrait in oils of one of the very first American girls to catch an Englishman of position, let them journey to Boonton Hall, in the County of Norfolk, the hall that was in former days the seat of the Rolfe family. In this hall hangs a portrait of a handsome young woman with high cheekbones and complexion splendidly swarthy. . . This portrait of the far-famed Princess Pocahontas was painted but a few weeks before she died on a ship about to sail for America. She was buried in the parish church of Gravesend, at the mouth of the river Thames, and to this day the curious can see the following entry in the parish register: "1616, March 10. Rebecca Wroife, wife of Thomas Wroife, gent., a Virginia lady born, was buried here in the chauncell." Unfortunately the original edifice was burnt down a century ago, otherwise Americans could now look upon the tomb of the first American girl who took an English husband.—Saturday Evening Post.

We hear on every hand that the Republicans are fixing to carry the ... it. They are making much of the differences occasioned by the late unpleasantness in the Democratic Primary. Especially do they expect aid and comfort in the election of a Representative to the Legislature to vote for Stephen B. Elkins for United States Senator. To all such we will say that the primary was held early to give the voter time to cease from sulking in his tent, and come to his senses. There will be no scratcing in November.

SIMMONS—JOHNSON.

About noon May 30th, 1900, at the home of William E. Johnson near Marlinton, George Hampden Simmons and Miss Lavinia Johnson were joined in holy matrimony by William T. Price as officiating minister.

The groom is a young industrious farmer residing on Spruce Flats near Buckeye; the bride is the youngest daughter of Ewing Johnson and his deceased second wife, who had been Miss Montana McKay of Augusta County, Va.

Several nice presents were received by the bride. A bountiful dinner, handsomely spread and nicely served was enjoyed by a goodly number of guests. Many sincerely kind wishes attend these young people in their now blended lives.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires a constitutional remedy. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. John Andrew Warwick.

Died, at Warwickton, near the Warm Springs, Bath County, Va., May 29, 1900, of pneumonia complicated with other ailments, John Andrew Warwick, aged 63 years.

He was a Confederate soldier from start to finish in the Bath Squadron of Cavalry, with the rank of lieutenant. During the war he received a wound that was a grievous affliction to him for many years, although not disabled from military service very long thereby. Since the porclamation of peace between the States, he has been closely occupied in farming and handling live stock. He spent many years on Western ranches, but returned to Virginia a few years ago to be near his aged parents and assist in caring for them and their younger children.

He had but recently purchased Warwickton, the old Jackson's River Homestead, and very flattering prospects were opening up before him when he was taken hence by death. His decease is a calamity to be deeply deplored by his family, many attached friends and relatives, while Bath and Pocahontas counties are bereaved of an intelligent, patriotic citizen.

We attach a tribute to his memory by a life long friend:

John Andrew Warwick was sixty-three years old, being the oldest of Judge James Warwick's family, of Bath County, Va. His mother having died when he was quite young, much of his early life was spent with his uncle, James Woods of Nelson Co., Va; a man possessed of many sterling qualities. The one, however, which most impressed the young man was his great honesty, and so it is not surprising that this principle thoroughly permeated his life. His old comrades of the Bath Cavalry, of whom some are living, all testify with tears to his steady courage in action, his general kindness, his magnanimity to his comrades.

Soon after the war he moved to Dunmore, this county, and lived there some years, when he moved west and fixed himself in the live stock business in Washington Territory, and had collected quite a herd of cattle, when one of the hard winters overtook him. He attempted to take his stock thro' crusted snow two feet deep a long distance to a settlement, having to go ahead and break the crust frequently on foot, using up all his blankets tied about his legs, when the crust had gotten into his flesh; and thus with unparalelled hard... save only a few of his cattle. This with one other experience left him with only a pair of mules as property. With these he began hauling rails for Henry McNeel of Washington, and gradually worked up to the ownership of a saw-mill, which burning up with a great quantity of lumber left him again penniless.

But his indomitable pluck and his strength of character were beginning to be found out. Walking the streets of a town, calculating what next to pursue, a man met him and proposed to sell him a mill. Without a dollar, the man took his note, and he began operations again and succeeded until he was owner of land which produced $6000 worth of wheat a year. Every dollar he possessed was literally by the sweat of his brow.

As an instance of the esteem in which he was held, he was elected without solicitation or even knowledge, Clerk of the Circuit Court at a salary of $3000 a year; but with characteristic modesty and conscientiousness he declined, not considering himself qualified to fill the office.

At another time he was employed by a Portland man at $75 per month to measure a large lot of lumber he had bought and having shipped from Dayton, Wash. The Dayton party who had sold the lumber had also fixed upon him to measure, so they each paid him $75 per month; but the Dayton party wished him to bill the lumber for the railroad at less than measurement to save freight, which he refused to do. So he was left to measure, but the false billing was given to other hands.

The banks let him have money on his own recognizance, knowing that he refused to give or go security. He would loan a friend money rather than sign his name on his paper.

Hearing of his father's perplexities in his advancing years, he sold his property in the West and hastened to his relief. He frequently spoke of his gratification at being able to make his declining years free from care.

Whilst west he attended the ministrations of the church regularly, and spoke frequently of Rev Mr. Penrose of the Congregational church, who was a brother of Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania. He was immersed whilst out there, and was a conscientious Christian. His strong mind was always utterly averse to the levity and familiarity which frequently marks our conversation on religious subjects. A monumental rebuke to all who are ashamed of their profession. The Bible was his text—he wanted nothing more or less, and daily prayer his practice. We shall feel the need of his stalwart nature, his presence was an inspiration, a very prompting to right action. The little children will miss him, for they loved him. "Bold as a lion," yet "gentle as a lamb."

No more pathetic scene could be than his aged and faithful comrade, Stephen Sullivan, who bore him off the Wilderness battle-field grieviously wounded,—standing by his bedside with sleepless eyes, ready to bear him off this greater battlefield, victorious at the last; but ready to say even now, according to his creed, "God rest his soul!"

Meeting of Committee.

The County Democratic Executive Committee met last Friday to canvass the returns of the May Primary. Nine members of the twelve who form the committee were present. S. B. Scott, Jr., appeared in behalf of H. A. Yeager and asked that the ballots be recounted for the office of representative in the legislature. The committee proceeded in executive session to open and count the ballots. The returns of the Commissioners of election were found to be correct in every case except one. At Mill Point there was one ballot which indicated that the voter had attempted to erase the pencil marks over Yeager's name and then scratched McClintic. The committee and commissioners both counted this vote for Yeager. A ballot from Green Bank was torn so that only a small part of McClintic's name remained. Except for the fact that the form of the ballot was familiar the name could not have been distinguished. The entire heading of the ballot was gone. A pencil mark on the remnant of McClintic's name showed the intention of the voter, in the minds of the committe, and this mutilated ballot was counted for Yeager. These were the only debatable votes of the lot.

When Split Rock was reached, the ballots returned were 69. The poll-books showed that 69 persons had voted. The commissioners returned 70 votes cast for legislator and 71 cast for sheriff. The commissioners' written return showed McClintic 55, Yeager 15. The ballots counted out McClintic 54, Yeager 15. The addition of votes cast in the whole county showed 566 votes for McClintic and 565 votes for Yeager. The result of the recount was announced, and Mr Yeager's attorney asked the committee to take up the question of how those persons who had no right to vote in the primary voted for this office, naming several men whom the speaker averred had voted for McClintic and were not voters of the county. Mr McClintic replied that he too had information of men who probably had no right to vote who had voted for Yeager, and expressed himself as being most unwilling to undertake such a contest.

The committee adopted the following resolution and adjourned after signing certificates of nomination for the county offices:

Whereas, on the 12th of May, 1900, the Democratic party of Pocahontas County held a primary election to nominate candidates for public offices to be filled at the next general election, and whereas there were cast in said election for representative in the House of Delegates 566 votes for L. M. McClintic and 565 votes for H. A. Yeager, ascertained by a careful canvass of the Executive Committee, and whereas the said committee after so finding the result as aforesaid were moved by the attorney for H. A. Yeager to take up the question of illegal votes cast in said election to ascertain who had received the majority of votes from those persons who had no right to participate in said primary,

Be it Resolved, That it is the sense of this committee that it has no right to take up the question aforesaid, owing to the fact that it would be an impossible task to ascertain how many irregular votes were cast and for whom, and because the commissioners of election at the various precincts were constituted under the call for said primary sole judges of the qualifications of the voter. This committee earnestly appeals to the contestants and all other good Democrats of the county to unite in the support of the ticket as this day certified by this committee, and calls upon all who have the good of the party at heart to join in the effort to carry this county by an increased majority at the general election.

A LEAF FROM MY NOTE-BOOK.

We turn another leaf in the Note-Book and get a glance at the headwaters of Indian Draft down the mountain side to the left of us. Mount Pleasant and its surroundings catch up our attention for a little, but as we are hurrying on, and have to even glance back to pick up a note by the wayside, we forbear to make mention of the good people in this quiet vale which reposes at the foot of the mountain in this direction.

Our friend Jacob Beverage has been passed,—not intentionally, however, in hastily turning the leaves of our book, we drop back then right at this point to drop a good and pleasant word in his behalf. Mr Beverage lives in quietude on the slope of the mountain between the headwaters of Elk River and Clover Creek. We learn that he thinks of moving across to the other side of Elk soon. We trust that he and his are getting ready to "see the King in His beauty" when the veil is lifted. But in missing a leaf, we seem at least to be rambling in our thoughts, as Isaac Sharp's place is the next thing that heaves in sight.

Isaac is a good man and has a nice little family. We hope, however, that he will not fail to lead that good family of his heavenward, that when the King shall come he will pronounce the "well done" in behalf each one of them.

Here are stock scales. Another stock man lives here. G. W. Mann is an active, energetic man; wherever you see him he is busy. Besides his attention to farming and stock here, he has a hotel and livery stable at Marlinton. He belongs to a good church, and our prayer is that we may all keep in touch with Heaven all through this life—that we have the promise of the Gospel which gives both this life and the next to the faithful.

We are well at the foot of the mountain, and watering our horses in this beautiful spring at William Sharp's milk-house. This is a nice location, just "back from the village street," but close enough to town to make it both pleasant and profitable. We are commanded not to be covetous, unless it be to covet the good gifts of God. We want to be submissive to the laws of Heaven; and yet we would like a location like this. It is near enough to the beautiful little village of Edray; it is even near enough to the county seat and the Greenbrier Valley Railroad. But why particularize since we are in the midst of nice locations and pleasant surroundings. Pitch our tent any where in this vicinity and we will have a good place and good people for neighbors.

We have reached Edray at last. We cannot pass Mr Sharp's place without noticing those two little mounds out in the field. A new graveyard is started here. Two precious little ones, children of Dr J. W. and Mrs Price, sleep here. The great Shepherd of the sheep has taken these little lambs to Himself. The people of this household have such an interest in heaven as they did not have before these precious ones went there. They lead the way for parents, grandparents and all of us to that bright clime where they will not need the light of the sun, but all shall shine brighter than the sun in the Kingdom of heaven.

Here our company leave us. They hurry on to Marlinton to Court, as we linger a little at the post office. Just here we cannot refrain from thinking of the great White Throne before which we all shall stand on the great day for which all other days were made. We can not afford to fail in being ready to pass the final test. We are at Edray now. Here we find two store houses filled with general merchandise, and very accommodating clerks to wait on us. Geo. P. Moore, the P. M., is a friend to all and is very popular among the people. Alvin Gay is friendly, talkative, and a good clerk,—knows his business well and attends to it.

S. B. Moore is behind the counter. He also is one of our very best men, and takes delight in waiting on the people. In his absence Adam Baxter or his daughter Miss Lena, clerk—fill the bill well.

Time flies and we hurry on, but at the end of Indian Draft we drop a good word for Rankin Ponge and his as we pass. Mr Ponge occupies one of those nice locations we talked of above. We are glad to see our friends so comfortable and happy in this life, and [illegible] wish to be wise in attaching their affections to the things of the better life. Nearing the end of our journey we hasten on without going farther up the Draft at present.

Here is a shoe shop, saddler's shop, tannery &c. The [illegible] of these lives just on the hill yonder. Here is another good place to live. Here you will be kindly treated and [illegible] pleasantry &c. at A. T. Smith's residence. May Heaven bless them all there.

The church and school-house are at hand right here, inviting all who come within their reach to school and to heaven. Life eternal is bound up in the knowledge of "the true God and Jesus Christ whom he has sent."

Here is S. B. Moore's residence in a quiet and retired spot, and yonder is J. W. Tyler's farther on. Here is the forks of the road that leads to the Big Spring, &c. In all this little village we cannot tell you where we would get the best treatment. We are sure that any of these good people would use us well were we to stop for dinner, as it is nearing this time of day. We go on past Mr Tyler's, a place where they can take either wood or iron and make anything out of it they wish, and alight at the next house on the height of land at the Pine-bush. Making our best bow to all, we get down here and rest awhile, as well as take dinner with the people.

If we get time and chance, we may, if it is thought best, drop your readers some more jottings from our Note-Book.

We never would refuse,
If we could find all out,
In our short round about,
To give you all the news.

So then, dear friends, be kind,—
If in this jotting lot
We notice you or not,
And bear us well in mind.

A. M.

FROST.

Brad Sharp, who has been gone for nearly two years, has returned, some say, ready to hang out his sign as an attorney-at law.

Peter Gum, the sheep and cattle buyer of Highland, was here on Thursday buying lambs.

Rev C. M. Fultz spent some time in our quiet town Thursday.

We are certain that Uncle Sam is somewhat puzzled to know what to do in regard to re-establishing our mail route. His bossee, vice-President from Canada, has looked over the route, but has been slow in making out the required papers. We wonder if it isn't time for the fool killer to come this way. He could make good use of his cycle.

Our Sunday school is progressing finely under the supervision of J. H. Lantz, to whom the people are greatly indebted for the interest he manifests in it.

Hannah & Harper's wool trade is immense. They are selling goods right along, and the bargains they give are drawing a good trade from the Dunmore neighborhood.

Mrs Sherman Curry returned last Sunday from Highland, where she was visiting her parets for the first time in three years. Miss Mollie Curry, her sister, accompanied her back, and is now under the treatment of Dr Jordan. She will remain some time.

"Reuben," in a recent issue of the Times, said that Frost would soon have a blacksmith. We would inform the writer that we had one already: a good smith and a Christian gentleman. Always ready to attend his own business—a thing he learned when he was a boy.

We hope the railroad will soon be completed to Clover Lick so we can get our mail on time.

Mrs O. B. Sharp, who has been very ill, is slowly improving.

I suppose, Mr Editor, that those candidates who have just returned from Salt River have settled down and are willing to take up the banner and be on top for Democracy and the county ticket from head to foot.

Peter Warwick and Mrs George W. Siple attended the burial of tneir sister Mrs Lightner in Bath last week.

H. M. Moore and family are on a visit to Highland county.

Miss Lucy Baxter will close her school at Dunmore this week.

The big sawmill will soon be ready for operation at Leatherbark.

We would like for old Mrs Pooh to take the bridges out of the road before she breaks her neck.

We want to put in new bridges soon.

The legal voters of Pocahontas County demand of the Executive Committee to know who the legal voters are. This is a question of importance.

A great many people want C. B. Swecker to run independent for Commissioner of the Court. He declines on these grounds: He believes in good roads by taxation and believes in a hog law, and it would be a hard matter to elect a man for commissioner who believes that way,—and both are needed.

The cut worms and the Republican party have the lead at present.

Swecker will run a big auction dering Circuit Court, which commences June 19.

Biggle Horse Book contains more "horse sense" than many volumes ten times its size. It tells all about breeds, about feeding and watering, about stable and road management, of whims and vices, of harness, of diseases and remedies, of breeding, of colt education, of shoeing, and indeed it covers the whole subject in a concise, practical and interesting manner. It contains 128 pages, is profusely and beautifully illustrated, and handsomely bound in cloth. Every man or woman who drives a horse should have a copy. The price is 50 cents by mail; address the publishers, Wilmer Atkinson Co., Philadelphia.

HIS LIFE SAVED

By Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

"I am sure that Chamberlain's colic, cholera and diarrhoea Remedy saved my life," says A. E. Lafollette of Gregory Landing, Clark county, Missouri. "I was in such a bad shape that the doctors said I could not live. When I was at the lowest ebb, one of my neighbors brought in a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and I took it and got instant relief. I soon got up and around. That was nine years ago and I am still in good health. Since then the medicine has always been in my house and always will be. It is the best on earth."

DR. De BAUSSET'S AIRSHIP

He Says It Will Take a Trip to Paris Soon.

IT MAY NOT WORK WELL

Will Float a Steel Cylinder by Means of a Vacuum Four and One-Half Miles Up in the Air—He Has Also a Company to Float.

Who wants to go to the Paris Exposition by air-line? Any person possessing the requisite courage to disport himself at an altitude of four and one-half miles and the requisite cash to pay a fare of nearly ten times the cost of passage by water, may have the opportunity to cleave the upper air at the rate of 100 miles an hour and make Paris in thirty hours from this city, says the New York Sun, according to the plans and specifications of an aeronautical engineer who has been stirring about in the flying-machine market. He is Dr. A. De Banssot, and that he means business of one sort or another is shown by the fact that he has organized a stock company to float his airship—financially, that is, for he says that it will float itself otherwise—and, announcing his capital at $100,000,000, offers one million shares at $100 a share. His airship is to be the biggest thing in the balloon line ever thought of; it is to ascend by the vacuum principle, and it will have a capacity of 1,000 passengers.

Theoretically, Dr. De Bausset's idea of a vacuum airship is an excellent one, to all appearances. He has been studying on it for nearly twenty years, he says, and he is not only sure of his figures and plans but he has the testimony of competent engineers as to the correctness of his constructional mathematics. Here are the principal characteristics of the craft as set forth by the inventor:

The ascentional force of overcoming gravitation is to be obtained by pumping air out from within the cylinder and causing it to raise its own weight of 250 tons, including the car fastened under it, which contains all the apparatus for propelling and steering the aerial vessel.

The maximum altitude contemplated to be reached for interoceanic travels is four and one-half miles.

The apparatus will consist of forty exhausting screw propellers, each capable of exhausting 36,000 cubic feet of air per minute. Eight of these propellers are to be used as steering apparatus, forcing the air so exhausted at any angle desired for obtaining the direction wanted. The other thirty-two propellers are to be located directly under the cylinder-vacuum and are to be rigidly bolted at the lower rail of the cylinder, their base resting upon the hurricane deck of the car, which car itself is to be rigidly fastened to the cylinder, in order to render the whole construction so solid that no swaying can take place.

The mechanical horse power is taken at a maximum of 33,000 pounds.

The power required to propel a craft of this type at sea level will become three times more effective in navigating the sky at four and one half miles altitude, owing to the decrease of barometric pressure, and the speed will be proportionately increased.

"We're almost ready to begin work on it," says the inventer. "A site was offered us in New Jersey, but we have picked out a place on Long Island and shall probably commence the building at once. Capital has come in both from this country and from Europe and I think we shall have enough to start on at once."

"How long will it take to build the ship?"

"We want and intend to build twenty ships at once," replied the inventor, "so as to have a fleet ready to go all over the world, and that would take a year, but first we shall build one to go to the Paris Exposition and hurry it up as fast as posible. By working day and night we expect to get it completed in time for the Exposition.

"Don't you expect to find difficulty in getting any one to try the trip?"

"No, indeed," said the inventor emphatically. "I have already had applications from people in this country and in Europe who are eager to go and willing to pay the $1,000 passage to experience the novelty of flying through the air and escaping the miseries of sea sickness."

"How much will it cost to build one of these ships?" asked the reporter.

"About half a million dollars, according to my most careful estimate," answered Dr. De Bausset. "You see air navigation will not be as expensive as sea navigation in the first instance. The reason for the high passage rates is that we can carry no freight to speak of. Besides we don't expect much competition in our line and it will be worth the price to travel so swiftly and comfortably between here and the other continents of the world. We shall not limit ourselves to transatlantic travel but shall go all over the universe when we get our fleet built. Also we shall discover the North Pole and the South Pole."

The great problem of aeronautics has always been to build an airship which should be dirigible. Many experimenters have constructed so-called dirigible balloons, but balloons have either failed to steer according to plan and specification or the inventors have failed to reckon successfully with the wandering winds of heaven. A case in point is that of a Brooklyn man named Campbell, who about twenty-five years ago set out from this city for Europe in a "dirigible" airship. Mr. Campbell has not been heard of since, and it is confidently predicted by students of aerial navigation and other persons that he never will be.

It would appear that soldiers are hit during battle according to the color of their dress in the following order: Red is the most fatal color; Austrian gray is the least fatal. The proportions are: Red, 12; rifle green, 7; brown, 6; Austrian bluish gray, 5.

A performance of "William Tell" was given in Switzerland not long ago in a large meadow at the foot of a mountain; a wooden theatre having been erected for the purpose. Tell was represented by a soldier of gigantic build.

West Virginia University,

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

The School of Music

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Premedical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

ODDS AND ENDS.

A Persian Poem.

A Persian poet named Omar Kayyam lived in the eleventh century. He was also a great astronomer and mathematician. He wrote a poem called the Rubaiyat of Omar Kayyam, which owes its great poularity to the exquisite translation by Edward Fitzgerald, who died in 1883. Omar was an old heathen who believed in the temporal things of this world. The poem contains 101 verses. We copy some of the finest. They are taken from different parts of the poem at random.

Ah, make the most of what we yet may spend
Before we, too, into the dust descend;
Dust unto Dust and under Dust to lie,
Sans Wine, sans Song, sans Singer, and sans End.

The worldly hope men set their hearts upon
Turns ashes, or it prospers and anon,
Like snow upon the desert's dusty face,
Lighting a little hour or two is gone.

Whether at Naishapur or Babylon,
Whether the cup with sweet or bitter run,
The wine of life keeps oozing drop by drop,
The leaves of life keep falling one by one.

For some we loved, the loveliest and best
That from this vintage rolling Time hath pressed,
Have drunk their cup a round or two before,
And one by one crept silently to rest.

Waste not the hour, nor in the vain pursuit
Of This and That endeavor and dispute;
Better be jocund with the fruitful grape
Than sadden after none or bitter fruit.

O threats of Hell and hopes of Paradise!
One thing at least is certain—this life flies;
One thing is certain and the rest is lies;
The flower that once has bloomed forever dies.

The revelations of devout and learned
Who rose before us and as prophets burned,
Are all but stories which awoke from sleep
They told their comrades and to sleep returned.

Heav'n but the vision of fulfilled desire,
And Hell the shadow from a soul on fire,
Cast on that darkness into which ourselves,
So late emerged from shall so soon expire.

The moving finger writes and having writ,
Moves on: nor all your piety nor wit
Shall lure it back to cancel half a line,
Nor all your tears wash out a word of it.

Oh Thou who didst with pitful and with gin
Beset the road I was to wander in,
Thou wilt not with predestined evil round
Emesh and then impute my fall to sin!

Come fill the cup and in the fire of Spring
Your winter garment of repentence fling:
The Bird of Time has but a little way
To flutter—and the Bird is on the wing.

Ah Love! could you and I with Him conspire
To grasp this sorry scheme of things entire,
Would we not shatter it to bits—and then,
Remold it nearer to the heart's desire.

We had copied some of the foregoing with a view to printing them. They were lying on the desk when a young attorney came in. This young gentleman has spent a considerable portion of his limited existence in college, and he is supposed to know poetry when he sees it. He caught sight of the copied verses and picked them up and read them and laid them down with the remark that the editor of the Pocahontas Times was breaking over and writing doggeral again.

Sappho.

Have I read Sapho? I have and found it about as inane, dull, uninteresting, and unvarnished a tale as ever came my way. From the amount of free advertising the book had received we imagined that was something that man, who is as prone to do evil as the sparks are to fly upward, would want to read but should not. Finally chance threw temptation in my way and I picked up a copy of Sappho marked "unabridged." We thought how dreadful it would be if we should be taken off with a copy of that dreadful book in our possession. This is the orthodox thought to have on such occasions. We looked into the book and found it dull as ditch water. It reminded us of some young man too dumb to be bad masquerading as a desperate villain. The search-er after erotic literature will find more of it in Paradise Lost on the center table in the parlor than in the insipid Sappho.

A short time after we discovered that Sappho was a fraud, we were on the train that was bearing some of the members of the Baltimore Conference South. The religious book agent [illegible] tried to claim us for his own, and the first pass he made at us was to sell us a copy of Sappho. We remarked that it was not a suitable book for a minister of the gospel to read, and he gave us a sorrowful look and troubled us no more that trip.

Repartee.

The substantial citizen was sitting in his office when he received a call from an improvident friend who wanted to borrow fifty dollars of him. As usual he began to inquire into the nature of the case. The would be borrower explained.

"My landlady gave me the ultimatum this morning. She came down mad and told me that if I did not pay her fifty dollars to-day she would have my trunks and boxes carried down stairs and piled on the side-walk."

"Well, what did you say to that?"

"Say? I couldn't say anything. You know I never was good at repartee."

The Colonel.

There is a certain good-natured Virginian who is by courtesy a Colonel. He decided to take the Keeley cure, and before matriculating he went to Washington to wind up his drinking days with one more big spree. After some days drinking he had his friend drive him around to the institution. The dean received him very politely. The first question he asked him, however, was not a success. The dean said, "What regiment did you belong to, Colonel?" "What regiment? D—n you go read the history of your country!"

Maud Muller on a summer's day
Raked the meadow sweet with hay
And as she raked, now here, now there,
The hayseeds fluttered from her hair.
She knew amid the show tents brown
Her brother loitered in the town:
While down the glen in bushes thick
Her dad was fishing in the crick.
"Ah, me," she cried, "what lots of joy
I've missed because I ain't a boy!
An' oh, I'm sadder than of sin,
To think, alas, it might of been."

19TH CENTURY CONVENIENCES

Many of the leading magazines are publishing articles illustrating the various reasons why the 19th century should be regarded as the most progressive in the history of human development of all the centuries.

One of these articles has this to say about lucifer matches, which are so common and so cheap, compared with what matches were as first remembered by the writer, fifty or more years ago. So far as the writer knows the first box of matches, costing 25 cents, ever brought to Marlinton was by the late J. A. Price. It consisted of twenty-five matches, much like the matches now in ordinary use, tipped with a preparation of sulphur and phosphorus, and ignited by a piece of sand paper, which came with every box.

The paper was doubled up, the match inserted in the fold and compressed tightly by thumb and forefinger, and then drawn out quickly, being iguited by the friction. The fumes of sulphur were stifling and sneezing and coughing so severe that the match was sometimes dropped and the person seek the fresh air, leaving the match to take care of itself among the shavings or dry stuff prepared beforehand. This was considered, however, a marked advance on flint and steel, flashing of powder in a flint-lock gun, or carrying a chunk of fire a mile or two, as the writer knows from experience.

One of the magazine articles contains this paragraph in substance: The present generation of younger people can hardly realize how much the anxiety of living has been allayed by the invention and production of lucifer matches, for the power to make fire at will is the most fundamental necessities of human existence. While all times prehistoric, as it were, how difficult was the acquirement of this power to make fire at will that there is much plausibility in the classic belief that fire was a direct gift from the Almighty, and much to justify the ancient custom of preserving fire as a religious ceremony. But the primative methods of producing fire through friction by rubbing together two dry sticks of wood, or whirling one piece of wood pivoted into another was difficult of execution; while the later method of eliciting a spark by striking a flint upon steel was dependent for its success on the possession of the choicest tinder most carefully prepared.

But few persons now living can fully realze the anxiety and with which our grandmothers raked the ashes off the embers in the fireplace on a cold winter morning to see if there was life enough left in them to kindle a flame, because there was so much dependent on one live coal, for food and comfort. Now all this source of anxious apprehension has passed away. With a penny the housewife can now buy a gross of matches with which to produce the heavenly gift of light and warmth. In this connection about the facility of producing fire at will one may remember and reflect upon the advantages to be derived from the abundance and cheapness of materials of various kinds for illuminating purposes. How dreary our lives would be in long winter evenings if for the sake of economy or any other reason families were compelled to while away the hours in darkness.

About seventy years ago aluminum was discovered by Woehler, and for thirty years it was regarded as a mere scientific fancy article, and it was only about forty years ago that any industrial use began to be made upon this one of the most wonderful of all metals. Today it commands the attention of the entire industrial world in a way no other metal does. Not so very long since a pound of aluminum sold at the fancy rate of thirty or forty dollars; but [illegible] could have been bought in any desired amount for thirty or forty cents a pound, and there is ample reason for the opinion that it will not be long until thirty or forty cents will look as fanciful as thirty or forty dollars appear to us now, so great are possible improvements in the method of manufacture. It is only a question of a brief period when it will supercede copper, as it serves all the uses of copper and more besides. Having superceded copper in industrial uses, it will come in competition with iron and the isue of the contest will hinge on the question whether iron shall be indispensable in machinery for the production of electricity, and this question the future alone can settle by actual experimental tests yet to be put into use.

While all this may be true, still enough has been settled by actual appliances as to leave little or no doubt that the age is just in sight when aluminum will virtually dethrone King Iron, and aluminum assume the crown as emperor of all metals yet discovered, when in the times so near at hand aluminum will become the chief means of increasing and extending the range of human performance on the land, the sea and the illimitable realms of the firmament above.

In this respect aluminum has capabilities greater by far than any other metal now known, and its civilizing potency may be estimated at fully a hundred times that of iron, however startling this statement may fall upon our ears. This estimate as to the potency of aluminum contrasted with iron, though astonishing in the extreme, is not at all exaggerated. To familiarize ourselves with a state so strangely astonishing let us reflect upon the fact that in bulk available for the uses of man there is thirty times as much aluminum as iron, or in other words, where is a ton of iron in bulk there are thirty tons of aluminum.

This feature of comparative abundance suggests great possibilities. Moreover, aluminum [illegible]ble, which adds to its value. In many of its properties aluminum partakes of the character of a precious metal, which gives it additional worth. Its electric conductivity, which, for a given weigh, is greater than anyother metal, would be alone sufficient to make it one of the mott important factors in future homan progress. The extreme lightness of aluminum makes it far more easy to transport the object manufactured. In virtue of this relative lightness, aluminum bids fair to revolutionize the construction of war ships, and making transportation more rapid and secure and thus increase enormously the useful performances of human energy and endeavor.

But by an increasing number of thoughtful people it is coming to be believed that the greatest civilizing potency of aluminum will be developed in aerial navigation and travel, which is well nigh sure to be brought about by its use. Telegrayhic and telephonic instruments made of aluminum will slowly enlightion the millions of barbaric peoples. Electric motors and lamps will do the work of enlightenment and civilization more quickly than telegraph or telephone; but more quickly still will the flying machine enlighten and civilize beyond anything hitherto accomplished by the uses of aluminum. By rendering travel easy and rapid, aluminum will prove the best of means for unifying the diversified and heterogeneous elements of our wonderful humanity.

W. S. Whedon, Cashier of the First National Bank, of Winterset, Iowa, in a recent letter gives some experience with a carpenter in his employ, that will be of value to other mechanics. I mentioned to him that I had been similarly troubled and that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy had cured me. THE FRENCH COACH HORSE.

Editor Times:

As many ignorant or unprincipled persons are trying to put upon the public scrub horses as French Coachers, I send you a translation from the French of the Resolutions by the Horse Breeders Association of France, establishing a model type of Coach horse with description of typical stallion, which I think you will consider worthy of publication.

Respectfully, &c., ——.

Realizing that the highest degree of success in all things is only accomplished through the united and persistent efforts of enthusiastic and intelligent workers, and being inspired by ambitious desires to achieve greater perfection, more uniform production, higher physical qualities, greater endurance, more speed, and more in the breed of carriage horses of our country, we join in the establishment of a model which shall be outlined as a standard to which all breeders may look as typifying in form and qualities our ideal breed of horses. A standard that by its perfection will inspire us with higher ambition to place the name of the carrosier of France first among the breeds of the world.

As the breeders of France we inherit that historic race of horses developed under Charlemagne and and all the great feudal lords of France; a race whose courage, strength, and endurance carried the armored chivalry of France to victory on the battlefield of Tours, and hurled back that vast wave of infidel Saracens, saving Europe to Christianity and Civilization. A race whose energy and stoutness gave William the field of Hastings and name of Conqueror; to France the domination of England, and to the world a new language and new civilization. A race that bore the Crusades and a hundred [illegible] of her noblest knights to do successful battle for the Holy Sepulcher at the very gates of Jerusalem, hurling back the Arab of the desert. A race that has carried the victorious armies of France to every capital of Europe.

In the past the horse of France shines in the reflected light of the tempered shield, the gleaming battleax, the glistening helmet, the gaudy uniform, and all the blazing panoply of war. All the resources of a great nation have been energized to mould the noblest of the animal creation into a powerful agent for war.

The demands of peaceful pursuits and the requirements of a luxurious age require him for a different purpose. Elegant, active, enduring, courageous, and swift must be the horse of the future.

Model Carrosier.

In repose impressive and stately; in form harmonious in all proportions, height 1 metre 63 centimetres, (16 1-20 hands) with depth of shoulder and body sufficient to guarantee great lung power and digestive capacity, without a suggestion of coarseness or grossness.

This form necessitates high withers, deep brisket, prominent breast, well sprung ribs, and good flank; head medium sized, clean and bony; large, open nostril; jowl not too prominent, frontal broad and full. Large, clear hazel eye; ear small at base, medium length, sharp at point, erect and quick. Throttle small; head set at a flexible angle; neck, long slight crest, with easy graceful arch, springing from very sloping shoulders overlaid with prominent [illegible]; high thin withers; back short, slightly hollowed from middle to withers, muscled powerfully over the loins, with quarters long and smooth sloping with easy curve to tail, which should be attached high and gracefully elevated the moment the animal moves. Hips, smooth but well muscled; thighs, strong wide and powerful; hocks, broad, low, and clean.

The bony structure clearly delineated; legs between hocks and pasterns, short and flat with all cords and tendons clearly delineated, especially on back of leg which should be neither too crooked nor too straight; pasterns, medium length and sloping backward slightly more than front line of hoof. Hoof, large, for blooded at heel [illegible]

The fore feet should be somewhat more round with good frog and hoof; pasters well sloped; leg short from pastern to knee, flat and broad; tendons clean and free in the back. Knees, broad and flat. Leg, from knee to elbow, long, strong, and well muscled both inside and out.

At rest the horse should stand squarely on all four legs with toes turned slightly outward. Skin, thin; hair soft and silky; mane fine but not too abundont; easy, quick walk. Trotting action quick, high and round, free and clean; not so long in stride to be displeasing, yet sufficiently long and quick to attain a high rate of speed.

With the typical form and perfection of movement, we demand that no animal be usek for breeding purposes that is not absolutely free from all hereditary taint; and further, that the speed necessary to the production of a typical carrosier should not be less than 4800 metres (about 3 miles) in eight minutes under a weight of one hundred and seventy pounds in saddle by actual test.

Does Your Head Ache?

Are your nerves weak? Can't you sleep well? Pain in your back? Lack energy? Appetite poor? Digestion bad? Boils or pimples? These are sure signs of poisoning.

From what poisons?

From poisons that are always found in constipated bowels.

If the contents of the bowels are not removed from the body each day, as nature intended, these poisonous substances are sure to be absorbed into the blood, always causing suffering and frequently causing severe disease.

There is a common sense cure.

AYER'S PILLS

They daily insure an easy and natural movement of the bowels.

You will find that the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

with the pills will hasten recovery. It cleanses the blood from all impurities and is a great tonic to the nerves.

THE STATE CONVENTION

[illegible] tion at Parkersburg last week was one of the largest and most enthusiastic meetings of the kind ever held in the State. The ticket nominated will have the desired effect of uniting the party and when the convention adjourned every delegate from the highest to the lowest was impressed with the idea that the Democratic party would sweep the State this fall.

For Governor, John H. Holt was nominated over Judge Tavenner.

For Auditor, James H. Miller, of Hinton, with Joseph Hanlan, of Wheeling, as second man.

For Superintendent of Schools, Robert A. Armstrong, with H. L. Swisher second.

For Attorney General, George A. McCoy, of Sisterville had a walk over.

For Treasurer, J. Garland Hurst or Harper's Ferry was nominated.

For Judges of the Supreme Court, John W. English, the present incumbent was nominated by acclamation to succeed himself. To succeed Brannon, Judge W. G. Bennett was nominated with Judge A. N. Campbell a close second.

We see it stated generally that Judge Campbell was beaten solely by reason of his geographical position. The southern part of the State having received her share of the nominations.

The platform was a safe and very satisfactory one. The first clause adopts the principles laid down by Thomas Jefferson in his inaugural address, which in a general way outline an ideal form of government. The second clause reaffirms the Chicago platform so far as it contains an exposition of those principles. That was a master hand that steered so close to the rock on which we split in 1896. Bryan is endorsed and we pledge ourselves to abide by the result of the Kansas City Convention. We denounce imperialism, wars of aggression, trusts, protective tariffs, militarism, and the law recently passed by Congress in regard to the currency.

We insist upon the maintainance of the Monroe Doctrine. We sympathize with the Boers in the unholy war which has been thrust upon them. We favor building and owning the Nicaragua canal, and we reiterate that we do not owe any part of the Virginia State debt. We then show up the rottenness of Republican State politics, and call attention to the fact that the appropriations by the legislature in the six years of Republican domination have increased from $1,400,000 to $2,000,000. So we call upon the State to return to its old love. Some things are conspicuous by their absence. For instance, in all that long platform, we have looked in vain for such words as bimetalism, ratio, demonitization, and silver. This is just as well, perhaps, as there are some Democrats who are easily frightened away by such words and there is no need to strife over what can not become a live issue.

A Life and Death Fight.

[illegible] almost miraculous escape from death, says: "Exposure after measles induced serious lung trouble which ended in Consumption. I had frequent hemorrhages and coughed day and night. All my doctors said I must die. Then I began to use Dr King's New Discovery which wholly cured me. Hundreds have used it on my advice and all say it never fails to cure Throat, Chest and Lung troubles. Regular size 50c and $1.

CONFEDERATE VETERANS, ATTENTION.

In obedience to a general order from General Green, (Comdj. 2nd Brigade) Burgess Camp. No. 929, U. C. V., met at Academy Saturday, June 2nd, 1900, and appointed a committee to arrange for the execution of said order, viz.: the observance of Memorial or Decoration Day.

The Committee fully realize how sacred is the duty which the Camp has commissioned it to perform. We have a tender recollection of the Cause that was lost. As time removes us from the scenes and events of that thrilling and passionrte period, our thoughts and affections revert more frequently and vividly to all that we then knew and witnessed.

In the mysterious recesses of a memory which communes with the things long gone, we again hear the war drum's throb, the clarion note of the bugle, and see the gray columns marching to the fight, and when they are gone and the roar of combat has opened, we listen to the prayers of aged men and the sobs of helpless women, breaking down under the grief which they had hidden in the presence of those for whom they had prayed and wept. Heroic forms pass proundly before us in that vision, and our eyes seem to catch once more a glimpse of the "Bonnie Blue Flag."

We can never forget that the Confederate soldier and all with which he was connected have on us a claim which sympathy, patriotism, charity and affection alike compel us to acknowledge and discharge, and we have remembered that the noblest purpose a people can cherish is to preserve for the guidance of generations yet to come the best traditions and the greatest examples of the past.

Hence we feel that there rests upon the men and women of the South an obligation no less imperious than the call which once summoned our fathers, husbands and brother to arms; an obligation from which no condition can excuse and no power acquit. Therefore in this memorial service we endeavor to perpetuate and honor the memory of our heroic dead. The noble patriots who wore the [illegible] for their homes and firesides, who [illegible] principle and died that principle to maintain.

We call upon all members of Burgess Camp and other Confederate veterans to meet at Academy June 23, at 9 o'clock a. m. At the same time and place all members of the Julia Jackson Chapter U. D. C. are requested to assemble and unitedly honor our fallen comrades by placing a flower upon the grave of every Confederate in loving remembrance of his noble, unselfish and heroic deeds.

DIED.

Died, April 23, 1900, of pneumonia, Grace Eva, youngest child of Mr and Mrs J. W. Riley, aged 8 years, 8 months and 20 days. Her sufferings were of a short duration and every effort to keep off the fast approaching hand of death was made, but He who doeth all things well summoned our darling home to live with the redeemed. The untimely and unexpected death of this dear one was a deep wound, felt in the hearts of many. But we bow in humble submission to the Lord, who has said "Suffer the little children to come unto me, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

Now our home is sad and lonely;
It was Grace we loved so well;
She has gone to live with Jesus;
God knows best: He does all things well.

We are left to wander lonely
Through this bitter world of woe;
And we long for bliss immortal,
In that land where all must go.

—Written by a Sister.

John P. McDannald, a prominent citizen near Warm Springs, was thrown out of his buggy near the Shields tannery, May 28, and was so injured that he died June 8, aged 77 years. He was widely known and was much esteemed. In youth he attended among the first pupils the Hillsboro Academy in our county. Upon attaining his majority he and his brother Charles went out with the Forty-Niners to California and they were fairly successful in mining gold. He had a watch encased in gold of his own digging. For many years he was a merchant. In the war between the States he was a faithful soldier in the Bath Squadron. For several years he has devoted his attention to farming and handling livestock. His wife Saidie, a daughter of the late Alexander McClintic, on lower Jacksons River, survives him, along with three sons: Clyde, a physician in charge of a New York Hospital; Alexander, a Cincinnatti lawyer; Boyd, a student at Roanoke College.

Mrs Asbury Pullin, nee Bird, died May 29, near Mt Grove. J. D. Pullen at Marlinton is her nephew.

Mrs Jacob Lightner, of Upper Back Creek, died in Staunton May 27. She was a daughter of the late William Warwick, near Green Bank, and has many friends in this county.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires a constitutional remedy. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Local Events.

William Gatewood of Linwood was in town Sunday.

James Turner and wife, of Driftwood, were in town Saturday.

Dr C. P. Casto, of Buchhannon, is in town visiting his friend, Dr L. J. Marshall.

The bass season opens on Friday and the local fishermen and others are preparing for the sport.

Capt. A. E. Smith and F. W. Harper have started a big brick plant at this place.

J. D. Hutchkiss, traffic agent of the C. & O passed up the line of the new railroad last week.

Dr Austin, dental surgeon, has located at Marlinton for the practice of his profession.

The suit pending for the settlement of the estate of James McClure has been compromised.

Marvin Carter is putting up a building in town. His mother Mrs Susan Carter has moved to town.

The pine tree in the yard of the Methodist parsonage at Edray was stricken twice with lightning during the thunder storm of a week ago.

Mrs Silas Sharp returned from Fayette County last week accompanied by Mrs George P. Hannah and children, who were sorely bereaved by the recent decease of Rev G. P. Hannah.

George Baxter's next surveying service will be on the projected new road from Linwood via Thorny Flats to Driftwood, thence to Dunmore, which presents a perplexing problem of its kind.

Rev G. W. Nickel has been called to the pastorate of the Marlinton and Huntersville Presbyterian Churches. Rev H. W. McLaughlin will in all probability receive a call to the Green Bank and Dunmore churches.

Rev J. M. Sloan, Presbyterial evangelist, is in this county arranging to supply the vacant churches with ministers. He conducted services at Marlinton and Huntersville, and will also visit Dunmore and Green Bank.

Rev W. T. Price is in Virginia visiting the scenes of his early association, and will spend some time on a horseback tour of the Valley. He has not visited that section since his removal to this county, fifteen years ago.

Dr A. L. Austin, Dentist, of Lewisburg, has opened an office at the Marlinton House. The people of this vicinity now have an opportunity to have first class work done, which they should take advantage of, as the Doctor does not know how long he will remain here.

The Ellis Mill & Manufacturing Company, of Milwaukee, will put in a large band sawmill opposite the mouth of Stoney Creek, just above the town of Marlinton. It will be one of the largest mill in West Virginia. We have it from authentic sources that the contract assuring this industry to Marlinton has been signed.

Little head little wit; big head not a bit. That's an old proverb, so don't get it—the big head I mean—for it doesn't pay. The Golden Store don't pretend to know it all. The days of foolishly high prices is passing; women will buy their hats with some of the judgment they display in buying other things. The Golden Store don't boast that it has all the styles of America and no one else has any. The Golden Store is made up of many little stores. If you want a trimmed hat you can get it there cheaper than elsewhere. If you want a good substantial bed stead in oak you can get it there for $2.95. Women's waists, big new kinds—the percale, the madras, the pique, and the organdie, exclusive styles, a nice line for 75 cents.

STOCKHOLDERS MEETING.

Notice is hereby given that a general meeting of the stockholders of the Pocahontas Supply Company, a corporation chartered under the laws of the State of West Virginia, will be held at the office of West Virginia Pulp & Paper Company, at 309 Broadway, New York City, on Tuesday, the third day of July, 1900, for the purpose of organizing said Company [illegible]

Montgomery Brown of Lewisburg has been in Marlinton.

Work on the piers of the Knaps Creek bridge will probably be finished this week.

Dr Hunter Mooman and Miss Dora Cowger of Green Bank are in Marlinton.

Samuel Coyner and Miss Mabel Ligon of Clover Lick were here last Sunday.

Misses Georgia Ligon and Myrtle Varner visited Academy last week.

The great and only Arthur Lawson has returned from England and is now in our midst.

John Waugh and Wm. Cochran have opened their new store at Indian Draft.

The Musical Association met at Academy Thursday, Friday, and Saturday last week, with a large attendance from all parts of the county.

George Rayburn's buggy team ran off from the Edray parsonage Sunday afternoon. The vehicle was badly wrecked and one of the horses somewhat hurt. The team, detached from the buggy, was checked at Geiger's Mill.

Andy Taylor has some burr flour that he would like to place on exhibition at the Paris Exposition. He would rather however give his neighbors a chance to sample it and take it all should it suit them.

A Spanish silver coin, about the size of a half dollar, was plowed up in Rev W. T. Price's garden, in Marlinton. It bears the date of 1793. It is not much worn, indicating that it had not been in circulation very many years before it was lost.

Glorious News.

Comes from Dr D. B. Cargile, of Washita, I. T. He writes. Electric Bitters has cured Mrs Brewer of scrofula, which has caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help; but now her health is excellent." Electric bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. Stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up strength. Only 50c.

Sold by Harry R. Echols, Marlinton; N. J. Brown, Mill Point; E. L. Beard & Co., Academy; H. N. Hannah, Renick's Valley; S. F. Myles, Falling Spring.

DENTISTRY.

Dr Campbell of Monterey requests us to announce that he will be at points in this county on or near dates given, prepared to attend to dental operations. He has taken a special course of training in gold crown and bridge work in Baltimore recently, and is prepared to do work in that line, in up to date style.

A Challenge.

The stone-cutters in Marlinton propose to organize a baseball team and play a Marlinton team a match game on the 4th of July. We hope all those interested in baseball will take steps to meet them half way. There are some we know who would be delighted to arrange a game, and we may at least expect to have some practice games.

NOTICE.

There will be a meeting of the Board of Education of Edray District next Saturday, June 16, 1900, to audit claims. All persons holding claims to be paid by said Board will present them at that time.

FROST.

Nice growing weather. The sun and rain makes everything put on a lively appearance, and makes us think of young life when we bloom and send forth fragrance, either to make the world better or worse for having lived, or to wait the coming of fall when we will be cut to the ground by the bleak northern winds.

Hello Mike! we surely were delighted to hear from you, well knowing that you are witty and wise. Your reputation as a journalist is secure in the haven of rest among the tadpoles of Swamp Hollow, where your praises will be sung both night and day.

Peyton Moore has moved his saw mill from Greenbrier River to H. Lee White's where he will saw a large set.

Wise Herold was in the upper end on business Friday.

D. W. Dever is on Elk superintending the construction of a house on his farm.

A. J. Hooks purchased 1000 lbs. of wool in this vicinity, which he delivered to Paul Golden at Marlinton.

A number of our people have been in Marlinton the past week trading out their wool.

Rev Pullin delivered a very able sermon at Frost Sunday morning and at Trinity Church Sunday evening.

Go to A. L. Dilley for bargains.

EAST FROST.

The farmers have been quite busy in their corn fields during the past week.

S. R. Hogsett and daughter of Brown's Creek were pleasant callers in our town last week.

Ellis Buzzard was off to the Hot Springs last week for goods for our merchants.

The post office has never been located in our town yet.

Floyd Williams of Green Bank was in our town on business last week.

Mrs E. Spitzer was off to Douthard's Creek last week.

Don't forget the concert at Cove Hill Saturday night June 16.

Ben Sharp made a flying trip to Dunmore Friday.

A. L. Dilley opened up his new store last week. He will exchange goods for wool and grain at cash prices. If you want to save money go to his cheap cash store.

SLY FOX.

GREEN BANK.

Fine growing weather at this time.

Oh Yes! Mrs Pooh is not the overseer of the road between Dunmore and Green Bank or she would remove the bridges. She kindly asks the overseer to do it.

Capt Swecker was in town last Thursday on business.

Deputy Sheets was in town on Thursday.

F. P. Patterson was in this vicinity last week taking the census of the district.

Scott Gum and C. C. Burner were in town Friday.

The quarterly meeting at this place was largely attended, and there was some fine preaching by the Presiding Elder, Rev Hutcheson.

The polls have had an honest count and we hope the party is satisfied with results. Let every Democrat in the county be in his place next November and vote the straight ticket, regardless of feeling. Let us marshal our forces and stand to our colors. Our Republican friends are urging every man to his post and to vote the straight ticket, but let not one vote be lost to the grand old Democratic party, and we will see W. J. Bryan as our leader to give us a prosperous time in the next four years.

We would like to see the vote cast for our district officers, if any were voted for. We have not seen the first figures yet.

MRS POOH.

INDIAN DRAFT.

Fine weather with refreshing showers. Corn hoeing is the order of the day.

Cochran & Waugh have opened up their new store and are doing a good business.

Taylor & Barlow are kept busy with their blacksmithing and wagon repairing.

Henry Forge will go to Millboro this week for a load of goods for Cochran and Waugh.

William Gay is off to Huttonsville this week for Jacoby.

Mrs John Waugh is on the sick list, but we hope to see her about again soon.

Sunday school at Mt Pleasant Sunday and much interest shown. Preaching in the evening by Rev Bogle.

Frank Dilley passed here one day last week enroute to Frost.

Wesley Barlow spent a day or two of pleasure in this part last week.

J. W. McClure still trades horses.

J. H. Landis has got a new supply of photograph goods and is ready for business.

FEE.

GILLESPIE.

Plenty of rain and grass is growing fine, and the mocking bird is singing in the trees.

Several wagons passed here enroute for Huttonsville for supplies for the railroad contractors and D. O'Connell.

Industrious boy, if you want work come to O'Connell's camp and you will find it. He is running two camps with about fifty or sixty men at each one.

Miss Minnie Burner spent Sunday with Misses Virgie and Lucy Gillispie.

Rev J. W. McNeill preached an able sermon to an attentive audience at the Big Fill school-house Tuesday night.

Clyde Y. Beard is scaling logs for D. O'Connell. Clyde is a hustler.

We are glad to see Wade Kelley back in our midst.

James Brooke, who has been very ill for some time, is improving.

Dr J. Cambert has located at Durbin.

G. W. Clarke and Miss Dora Lynch of Alvon, Greenbrier county, spent a days visiting friends at this place.

S. W. Kelley and wife, who were visiting Mrs Kelley's parents at Travellers Repose have returned to their home.

Mr Willis G. Burner of Travellers Repose and Miss Emma Lee Kelley of this place were united in marriage on Wednesday, June 6th at 8.30 a. m., at the bride's home, Rev J. W. McNeill officiating minister. The brides maids were Misses Roberta Kelley and Maude Burner, and the groomsmen were Messrs Ward Burner and Wade Kelley. The bride was becomingly attired in a beautiful costume of white cashmere, trimmed in rich white satin and silk braid. The brides maids were dressed in white lawn with green sashes. They started on an extended bridal tour, accompanied as far as Huttonsville by the attendants, where they took the train for Weston, Buckhannon and other places. They have our best wishes.

"CHEAT."

BROWNS CREEK.

We have had fine rains the past week and all vegetation is growing fast.

Rev Remus Clark stopped over night at Peter McCarty's on his way to hold Quarterly meeting at the Buzzard Church last Sunday.

S. R. Hogsett and C. L. Moore are building additions to their barns.

Old Aunt Becca Corbett returned home Saturday from an extended visit to relatives and friends in Highland County. Her son M. H Corbett accompanied her home. He reports several cases of smallpox in and around Bolar Springs in Bath County.

We were sorry to hear of the sudden and unexpected death of Lieut. John A. Warwick. He was a fine man and a brave Confederate soldier. The old Confederates are rapidly passing away.

Jessie and Harry McComb of Huntersville are visiting their grandparents Mrs and Mr H. P. McLaughlin.

J. F. H. likes to haul lumber from Knapps Creek.

Bob Rider jumped 40 feet in a circle and turned a summersault up hill. Its a boy.

Ed Fenwick will start in a few days for his old home in England. He expects to return this fall.

W. T. Moore caught a large wild cat in a trap. It had killed a lamb for him.

Jack Hooks was in these parts last week looking after stock.

Biggle Horse Book contains more "horse sense" than many volumes ten times its size. It tells all about breeds, about feeding and gaiering, about stable and road management, of whims and vices, of harness, of diseases and remedies, of breeding, of colt education, of shoeing and indeed it covers the whole subject in a concise, practical and interesting manner. It contains 128 pages, is profusely and beautifully illustrated, and handsomely bound in cloth. Every man or woman who drives a horse should have a copy. The price is 50 cents by mail; address the publishers, Wilmer Atkinson Atkinson Co., Philadelphia.

A PUGILISTIC PARSON.

The Royal Oak, Mich., Minister Tells Why He Fought in the Prize Ring.

For some time the saloons have run the town of Royal Oak, Mich., and paid no taxes. Thus they were privileged to do about as they pleased. The boxing contest in which I participated was the outcome of a call I made on them Sunday evening, when I found the leading officials of the village and town enjoying themselves in the saloon.

I called because they had been selling to minors and then abusing and injuring them. They had sold to common drunkards whose families our church was helping, and gave beer to a man I helped from my own scanty supply; because they were as bad as you can picture them, and as bold as getting a band to play in front on Sunday and selling liquor openly, keeping open until 2 or 3 A. M., also wide open on Sundays and holidays, selling to men already intoxicated and then taking money from them, more than due.

They opened a new saloon across the street from the church. Men come into church with whisky breath, sit a while, go out and return worse than before.

The streets are thronged with drunken men on Sunday nights, making it unsafe for our ladies to come to church. The insulting conduct of officials became unbearable and their refusal to take a complaint against a saloonkeeper became a scandal.

The evidence I secured made the conditions such that before daring to open again my influence must be destroyed and I driven from town. Therefore the saloon-keepers and officials entered into a conspiracy. An article was prepared and printed in the official organ of the whisky dealers.

First, however, a fight must be had in order to draw me into the net and thus prove the statements made in their article—that I was a wolf in sheep's clothing and used to aspire to be a pugilist. Saloon-keeper Dondero wanted to slap my face, and, being an artist with the gloves, sought a means by which to bring about a friendly contest for points and then secure an opportunity to slug me and prove my conduct disgraceful as a minister. Thus he had me fixed. If I accepted his challenge I was a pugilist and would not be allowed to preach again, the officials having great influence in our church. If I refused I was a coward and fit prey for the gang, who would enjoy themselves at my expense and harass me until I would have to leave. The officials being against me and betting on my showing up, I was forced to depend upon my own resources.

So persistently did they keep at me that I finally, at 10 P. M., Saturday, Dec. 9, consented to take my chances with one man rather than be at the mercy of the gang. So I went with them to a barn which they had prepared for the occasion. I being challenged claimed the right to furnish the gloves and make the conditions. I got out a peculiar set of gloves, made according to my own ideas while at college, which the boys had dubbed "Axtell's pillows." They chose timekeepers and a referee and appointed my second. I am twenty-six years of age, and weigh 135 pounds, being 5 feet 8 inches in height, a Wolverine of Yankee descent. Gus Dondero, of Italian parentage, weight 170 pounds, is about thirty years of age, and a well known character hereabouts.

The contest was a lively one from the word go. I took the defensive and maintained it until the latter part of the third round, when I became aggressive, landing a right hook on the jugular. In the fourth and fifth I kept him groggy, my aim being to convince him without badly injuring him. The last few seconds of the fifth I landed right and left and had him up ready and just about to deliver a solar plexus when the referee, his brother-in-law, called time and decided it a draw. I was escorted home by the gang and wished well.

The officials and saloon element are making it unbearable here, however, and the landlords, one of their sympathizers, has notified me that my rent is to be raised, and as there is not a vacant house in town I don't know what the outcome will be.

Dondero has been arrested on several charges, and as the cases are sure ones he may also have to leave town, escorted by the Sheriff. I wish every young man was a properly trained athlete, learning that it is glorious to possess a giant's power, yet cowardly to use it in any but a just cause, which would make better Christians and citizens. I have spent a large share of my time in the study of anthropology, and believe in upbuilding the human race rather than uplifting it.

"Mens sana in sano corpore" is my motto, and "alterum vivo" my purpose. JOSHUA J. AXTELL.

Poison in Potatoes.

The Sanitary Home is authority for the statement that potatoes contain a poison known as solanin. New potatoes contain comparatively little of this poison unless they grow above the surface of the ground and have a green skin, when they are generally known to be poisonous.

It is not, however, generally known that old potatoes contain much more of this poisoning principle—solanin—and many cases of serious poisoning have occurred in late summer when old potatoes are used. In 1892 and 1893 there was almost wholesale poisoning among the troops of the German army. The symptoms were frontal headache, colic, diarrhoea, vomiting, weakness and slight stupor, and in some cases dilatation of the pupils of the eyes. [illegible] investigated the case, and found in old potatoes, kept in a damp place and beginning to sprout, twenty-four times as much solanin as in new potatoes.

West Virginia University,

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

The School of Music

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other Departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Premedical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

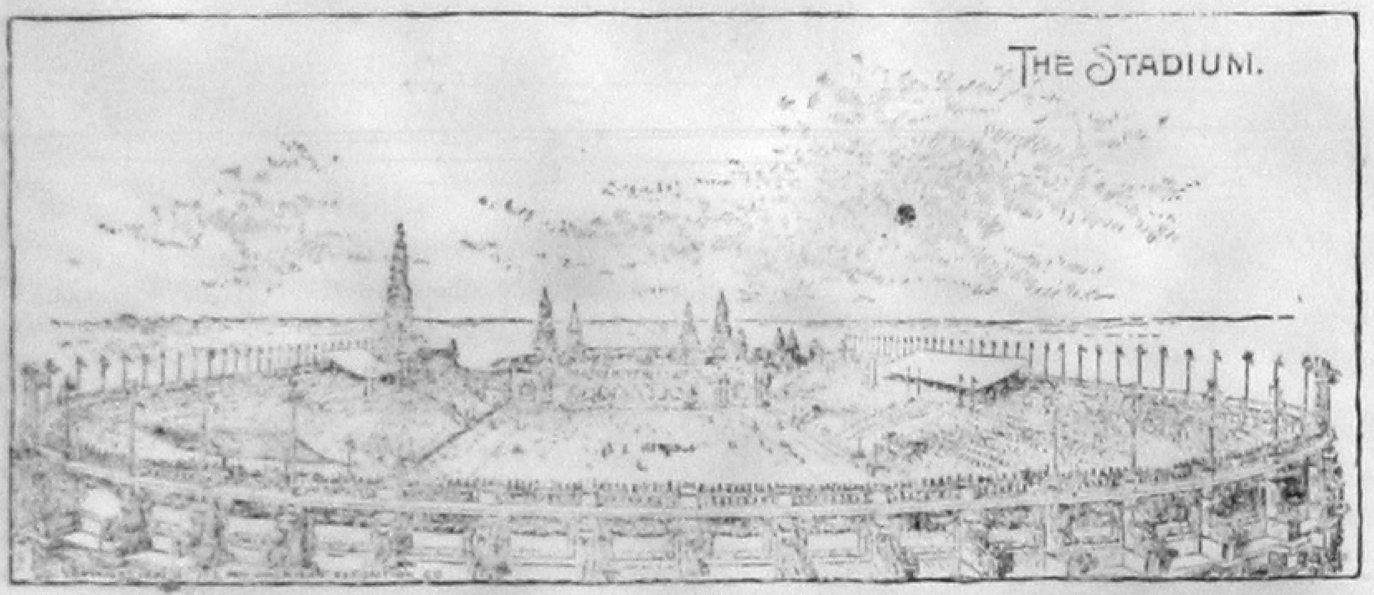
The Great Pan-American Exposition, 1901.

THE STADIUM.

The completed Stadium for the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo next year will offer to the lovers of sports the most spacious and splendid arena ever erected in America. The Athletic Carnival to be held during the great Exposition will be the most notable in the history of American sport. The coöperation of many of the best promoters of athletic games and contests has been secured. Visitors to the Pan-American Exposition may therefore expect to witness the meeting of the most famous athletes of the world, in competition for prizes worthy of their best feats of endurence, strength, and skill.

It is said that the great Colosseum at Rome, built in the first century of the Christian Era, could accommodate 87,000 spectators. The Pan American Stadium will be 129 feet longer and but ten feet narrower than the historic amphitheatre of Rome. The Stadium, however, will have a larger arena, and the seating capacity is estimated for 25,000 people. The top row of seats will be sixty feet above the ground, and every seat will command a perfect view of the vast interior. Standards are to be placed at various points for the support of awnings in such a way that they will not obstruct the view from the other seats.

The Stadium resembles in a general way that erected at Athens a few years ago, altho this one can be, of course, only a temporary structure. It is intended as a model of what it is hoped may be executed some day in permanent form.



THE FALLS OF NIAGARA.

GREATEST AUXILIARY ATTRACTION TO THE PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

The importance of the great Falls, Rapids, and Gorge of the Niagara River as auxiliaries to the many and varied attractions of the Pan-American Exposition to be held in Buffalo, May 1st to Nov. 1st, 1901, can not well be overestimated. In its immense flow of waters, its grand scenery, and its historic lore, the Niagara is one of the most renowned rivers of the world. Its great cataract has defied the descriptive powers of poets and philosophers and baffled the delineative skill of painters and photographers. The grandeur of their environment renders the falls perennially interesting at all seasons of the year, and very few of those who visit the Pan American Exposition but will desire also to visit them. The trip from Buffalo can be made in half an hour. There are many points of view and places of interest and the visitor can plan his itinerary according to the leisure time at his disposal. If time will permit, the cataract should be viewed from both sides of the river and trips should be made the length of the Gorge, either along the cliffs above or over the trolley road which runs close to the water's edge.

Perhaps the most comprehensive near views of the Falls are those obtained on the Canadian side of the Gorge, especially that from Falls View station. Here is seen a complete panorama, embracing the rushing and turbulent currents of the upper rapids and the whole sweep of the falling waters, reaching from end to end nearly four-fifths of a mile, with the great Horseshoe Fall in the Foreground, separated by Goat Island from the American Fall, which is 158 feet high and 1881 feet wide.

On the American side there are two great corporations utilizing the current of the Niagara River for developing electric power used in many industries at the Falls. The power thus generated by one of these corporations is also transmitted to Buffalo, 25 miles distant, for use for the electric lighting of the city, for operating a great electric car system, and in many important manufacturing establishments. The power thus transmitted will also be extensively used for the purpose of the Exposition.

Hundreds have used it on my advice and all say it never fails to cure Throat, Chest and Lung troubles. Regular size 50c and $1.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

Proceedings of the Conventon in Marlinton, June 19, 1900.

At a convention of tbhe Republican party of Pocahontas County, held in the court house in Marlinton June 19, pursuant to a call, the house was called to order by Hon N. C. McNeil, chairman of Executive Committee of Pocahontas County, George P. Moore was called to the chair as temporary chairman, and W. B. Sharp as temporary secretary. On motion the temporary organization was made permanent.

Daniel O'Connel and S. B. Moore were nominated for House of Delegates. When a rising vote was ordered Daniel O'Connel received sixty-three votes and S. B. Moore forty-three. Daniel O'Connel receiving the majority of votes cast was declared elected. On motion the nomination was made unanimous.

James Gibson was nominated for Sheriff, and there being no other nomination, was elected by acclamation.

W. B Sharp was nominated for Prosecuting Attorney, and there being no other nomination, was elected by acclamation.

Peter Hill was nominated for Commissioner of the County Court and there being no other nomination, was elected by acclamation.

G. E. Moore was nominated for Assessor, and there being no other nomination was elected by acclamation.

On motion the following delegates were nominated and elected to represent Pocahontas County at the State and Congressional Conventions to be held in Charleston, W. Va.; the former on July 11 and the latter on July 10: Capt. E. A. Smith, Wm. Gibson, John E. Barlow, W. B. Hill, Alvin R. Gay and N. C. McNeil.

On motion the following delegates were nominated to represent Pocahontas County at the Senatorial Convention to be held in Alderson, on July 21, 1900: W. B. Sharp, Wm. Burns, Oliver McKeever, D. T. McNeel, A. D. Williams and James I. Beverage. A motion was made and carried that any of the delegates at either convention cast the entire vote of the County.

On motion the following resolution was adopted: Whereas, L. J Williams, of Greenbrier County, President of the West Virginia Bar Association, a lawyer of recognized ability and a gentleman of sterling ability, will be a candidate before the convention for the nomination for one of the Judgeships of West Virginia of the Supreme Court of Appeals, Therefore, Be it Resolved, That we the Republicans of Pocahontas County, in convention assembled, do hereby instruct the delegates from this county to said Convention to support said L. J. Williams for said nomination, and to use every honorable means to secure his nomination by said convention.

On motion a resolution was adopted that the proceedings of the convention be sent by the Secretary to the Wheeling Intelligencer, the West Virginia News and the Pocahontas Times and ask for its publication in said papers.

At this juncture in the Convention, upon motion, it was ordered that the several districts organize into seperate district conventions for the purpose of nominating district candidates, which resulted in the following reports:

Edray District—For Justice, N. C. Rodgers and W. Hannah; for Board of Education, Aron M. Kee, President, Harmon Sharp and John E. Barlow, Commissioners; for constables, J. O. Morrison and Geo. L. Hannah; for members of the Republican Executive Committee, N. C. McNeil, John D. Gibson, and Beverly Waugh.

Huntersville District—For Justice, D. B. McElwee; for Constable, E. H. Moore; for Member of the Board of Education, W. A. G. Sharp; Republican Executive Committee, O. E. McKeever, J. W Grimes and W. B. Sharp.

Little Levels District—For Justices, S. W. McCarty and T. W. Hogsett; for member Board of Education, Frank Kennison; for constables, E. F. Smith and J. E. McMillion; Republican Executive Committee, J. W. Snedegar, T. A. McCarty, and Wm. Burns.

Green Bank District—For Members of the Republican Executive Committe, Phil Edmiston, C. C. Wanless and Benj. Arbogast.

The above reports were adopted by the Convention as a whole, There being no other business for the Convention, on motion, said Convention adjourned.

G. P. MOORE, Chairman.
W. B. Sharp, Secretary.

Views of Life.

A great contrast is usually presented between the view of life entertained by a young man and that presented to an old man. The one is filled with the bright colors of hope; the other is tinged with the dark shades of sorrow and disappointment. Age in years does not regulate the character of the view, for some men remain young for a long time and others grow prematurely old. Much depends upon temperment, but more upon experience. The young and innocent have no cares of any kind; their books are balanced each day, and they have nothing to look too except the future, and that future appears bright to their imagination because they have had no experience that would suggest to them anything sad or sorrowful. As the years pass, however, each has his share of sorrows, and then the view of life alters. The future may still appear promising but not quite so bright as formerly. The shadows of the past creep into it, and as age increases the future loses interest. It has become altogether dull and commonplace. Happy the man who can preserve to the end a view of past life illuminated by good deeds, something that will take the place of the visions of future happiness which regaled his early years. To the young life is a great holiday, seemingly without end; to the old it is an experience sweet or bitter, as the case may be, from which the holiday element has disappeared. The views dissolve one into another, but not at rates regulated by the mere age of the individual and as those of the young are so much more enjoyable than those of the old, one should aim to prolong them as much as possible. This can be done only by leading a life of innocent enjoyment throughout maturity. Some men and some women manage to maintain their youthful spirits through sympathy with their children and even their children's children. Others become soured in early life. Their sufferings, deserved or undeserved, make them cynical; they are no longer agreeable companions and therefore lose the the associations which have the greatest influence in preserving youth and the hopefulness of youth—association with youth itself. The cheery old man is always surrounded by youthful companions; the morose man is deserted by those of his own age. But one cannot be either cheery or morose or cheery to order or at will. These are states of mind produced by a great number of influences. One who is to be cheery and hopeful must have a pleasant past to look back upon, a past that is free from wrong dodoing and illuminated by good deeds. And so also we may be quite sure that the dissatisfied or morose man has abundant reason for his disposition in conduct that has warped and twisted his view of life. We start in life with everything before us, nothing behind us; we end it in a good old age with everything behind us, nothing before us. The change is gradual, and we should aim by our conduct to make both views pleasant, that when we reach the middle period imagination may picture an enjoyable future out of the material furnished by an enjoyable past. Right living is the surest means of perpetuating the joys of youth. Only those whose backward view of life shows no shadows can preserve to the end the glorious spirit of youth which sees in the future nothing but happiness.—Baltimore Sun.

THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

Two great Republican Conventions were held last week, one at Philadelphia and the other at Marlinton. It is the Marlinton one of which we wish to speak. There is no use in denying the fact that the Republicans had a large and enthusiastic meeting and showed determination to unite to elect a whole or part of the ticket. All day there were signs that the leaders were determined to take advantage of internal dissentions in the Democratic party in this county, and to our shame be it said that we have given them reason to hope.

N. C. McNeil, County Chairman called the meeting to order and took advantage of this opportune moment to make one of those neat little addresses for which he is so famous. He referred to the fact that heretofore their conventions were merely perfunctory matters held in some small room in the town, where a handful of the faithful met, made nominations with no hope or thought of election, and adjourned. Now the largest room in the court house was filled to nominate a county ticket. In regard to the office of Representative especially the Democratic party had "fixed themselves." He stated the object of the meeting and called George P. Moore to the chair. Mr Moore made a short speech in regard to the necessity of there being two great parties, and gave the Democrats credit for honesty of purpose, but claimed for his party the faculty of being able to give the country the good government both parties desired, more effectually than the Democratic party. W. B. Sharp was made secretary of the meeting and nominations were in order.

The whole ticket was nominated in a cut and dried style, with the exception of the nominee for Representative in the Legislature. This resulted in a contest between D. O'Connel and S. B. Moore. Captain Walt Allen nominated O'Connel and Captain A. E. Smith immediately nominated S. B. Moore. Then followed a lot of speech making. Senator McNeil [illegible] opening for a [illegible] in his speech, and led off by [illegible] ing and [illegible] both men. He was [illegible] [illegible] both names blessed, and referred to all the claims of both. He left them in statu quo. O. A. McKeever seconded O'Connell's nomination in a vigorous speech, and it was plain from the applause that O'Connel had a great deal of strength in the audience. The vote finally showed Moore 41 and O'Connel 63. Moore represents the old line Republicanism and O'Connel is a late recruit from the Democratic ranks. He went over to Palmer and Buckner in 1896, and broad is the road that leads from those men into the Republican party.

After this nomination the rest of the ticket was nominated in a harmonious manner. James Gibson, Jr., of Elk was put up for Sheriff; W. B. Sharp of Frost, a recent graduate of a Tennessee law school, was nominated for Prosecuting Attorney; our old friend Peter Hill of Jacox was nominated for County Court; G. E. Moore of Academy for Assessor.

TESTIMONY.

Rev E. O. GUERRANT, D. D., Kentucky

"A good female school is a public blessing, and among many noble institutions I do not know a better one than the one presided over by Rev R. L. Telford at Lewisburg, W. Va. It is Christian, Biblical, thorough, and attractive—making not only finished scholars, but lovely Christian characters. It is good enough to educate my own daughter, and I take pleasure in commending it to my friends."

Dr J. M. POYNTZ, of Richmond, Ky.

"Rarely indeed does one have the opportunity of placing their daughters in so good an institution of learning as the one presided over by Rev R. L. Telford at Lewisburg. Anyway, it has been good enough for me. My daughter has been cared for as if she had been a member of the family."

J. J. ECHOLS, Esq., of West Virginia.

"I have been a patron of the Lewisburg Female Institute for the last six years, and I believe that under the present management it is the very best Female School in the two Virginias. If I had a dozen daughters I would want them all educated there."

Rev M. L. LACY, D. D., of West Virginia.

"I honestly believe it is the best school of which I have any knowledge."

Hon JOHN W. McCREERY, of the State Senate, West Virginia.

"I regard the school as one of the best in the country."

It is easy to see since the trees are leaved out what immense damage was done the forests by the great fires of last November. One might say that all the young trees were killed in the burnt districts and where there are no large trees the mountains appear bald and brown for a great distance. It will be remembered that smoke from mountain fires made living almost intolerable in the late fall, the fires being the greatest and most wide-spread in the history of West Virginia.

The Cherry Railroad.

In the rush attending the building of the Greenbrier Railway and the Coal and Iron Railway to meet it, very little general attention is given to the new railway projected to unite the Camden System and the C. & O. The new railroad starts at Cherry Bottom and comes up Cherry River until it reaches a gap which lets it over on the waters of Hills Creek in Pocahontas County. At this point there is a wonderful formation in that there is no perceptible divide between the waters of Cherry and the waters of Hills Creek. Up to this point the grade is easy and natural. Immediately after the waters of Hills Creek are reached the trouble begins for the engineer.

Hills Creek has falls 150 feet high and great difficulty is experienced in getting down to a level below them. This has been accomplished, but Hill's Creek unfortunately runs into and under Droop Mountain and makes that route no thoroughfare. The engineering corps at the present time are surveying for a tunnel underneath the mountain. Hills Creek comes through the mountain and is known as Locust creek. It is believed to be about a mile through the mountain as the creek runs. It is quite a large stream and the passage through must be quite large, but no one has ever had the hardihood to follow it through the mountain. No fish have ever penetrated the mountain either, for while Locust Creek has always been well stocked with fish no fish have ever been known in Hills Creek. The mountain is of limestone formation. In time of flood on the Hills Creek side the water has been dammed back until it formed a lake fifty or sixty feet deep.

Another route is to keep up on the Hills Creek side and cross over Droop Mountain and get down to the Greenbrier River by means of the Stamping creek valley.

The distance from the Greenbrier Railway to the Camden System is 31 miles by the route surveyed, but it is thought that a railroad can be built between the two in 28 miles. If this road be built it will open one of the richest timber sections in the country, all of which is practically a wilderness.

Circuit Court.

Circuit Court passed off very quietly. The town government had the desired effect of keeping down disorder on the part of those who have been accustomed to become too noisy and riotous by reason of too much drink.

There were two juries empaneled. The case of the State vs. W. D. Sharp resulted in an acquittal owing to an error in the writing of the indictment.

The case of Dawson vs. Smith and Whiting and others resulted in a verdict in favor of Smith and Whiting.

The case of A. M. McLaughlin vs. John T. McGraw was arranged by compromise.

The order of the Supreme Court dismissing the case of Andrew Herold vs. Amos Barlow was entered.

An order was entered to the effect that if the jail at this place was not put into a good sanitary condition by the next term of this court, then the Prosecuting Attorney is instructed to begin suit against the County Court to compel it to make the necessary improvements. Owing to the unsanitary condition of the jail, John Robinson who is confined therein on a charge of felony is ordered to be removed to the Greenbrier jail until the next term of this court.

Death of Mrs S. L. Brown.

Wednesday, June 21, Mrs Josephine Brown, the wife of S. L. Brown, County Clerk of Pocahontas, died at her home in Marlinton after a long and painful illness, aged 47.

Mrs Brown was a daughter of the late Randolph Slaven. She leaves surviving her husband, a sister Mrs L. M. McClintic, and a brother O. R. Slaven of Hutchinson, Kansas. She was a most estimable lady, whose loss in the community will be greatly felt.

The interment took place at Huntersville Thursday, Rev G. W. Bogle officiating.

Bank of Marlinton Building

The contract for a bank building was let by the Bank of Marlinton last week to E. D. King of this place for $10,364.00.

The building is to be 50 x 62, three stories high, to be built of brick with stone foundation and trimmings, to be finished in oak. The banking department is to be on the ground floor, and the rest of the building will be fitted up for a hotel.

DUNMORE.

Fatal Accident at Bower's & Co's. Camp. Other Items.

On Thursday evening at six o'clock Harvey Shanklin, aged 23, son of John Shanklin, a member of the firm of Bowers & Co., railroad builders, and a Greek laborer about thirty-five years old were engaged in loading a blast on the Greenbrier Railroad. They had placed five kegs of black powder, 125 pounds, in the hole. A negro laborer was sent for more powder. A rock was in the hole and young Shanklin tried to move it with a crowbar. A spark was struck igniting the powder. The unfortunate young man was immediately over the charge and was hurled at least sixty-five feet in the air and landed in the middle of the Greenbrier River. He was of course killed instanily. The Greek was close by. He lived until 1 o'clock that night but never recovered consciousness. A foreman near by named Williams received slight injuries. The laborer who had gone for the powder escaped. The rest or the working force were absent, havinfi gone to supper.

The burial took place Friday at Dunmore, services conducted by Rev R. M. Caldwell.

Young Mr Shanklin bore an enviable reputation. He was very much liked by all who came in contact with him. The bereaved father and mother have the sincerest sympathy of the people of this vicinity. A very large crowd attended the funeral, among them 75 Greeks from the camps on the river.

Accidental Shooting.

On last Thursday morning D. A. Tharp was accidentally shot with a pistol by J. E. McMillion, who picked up an empty pistol and after looking at it laid it down while looking at another one, and not knowing that the first had been loaded by a third party in the meantime, picked it up and it was accidentally discharged, striking Mr Tharp who was standing nearby. The ball passed through one finger and thumb and entered the left leg. The Doctor dressed his wounds but failed to locate the ball. He is is doing very well, being pretty badly hurt but not dangerously.

Contrary reports to this have been circulated but are false.

FIFTY YEARS OLD

Why let your neighbors know it?

And why give them a chance to guess you are even five or ten years more?

Better give them good reasons for guessing the other way. It is very easy; for nothing tells of age so quickly as gray hair.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

is a youth-renewer.

It hides the age under a luxuriant growth of hair the color of youth.

It never fails to restore color to gray hair. It will stop the hair from coming out also.

It feeds the hair bulbs. Thin hair becomes thick hair, and short hair becomes long hair.

It cleanses the scalp; removes all dandruff, and prevents its formation.

We have a book on the Hair which we will gladly send free.

HIS LIFE SAVED

By Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

"I am sure that Chamberlain's colic, cholera and diarrhoea Remedy saved my life," says A. E Lafalette of Gregory Landing, Clark county, Missouri. "I was in such a bad shape that the doctors said I could not live. When I was at the lowest ebb, one of my neighbors brought in a bottle of Chamberlains Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and I took it and got instant relief. I soon got up and around. That was nine years ago and I am still in good health. Since then the medicine has always been in my house and always will be. It is the best on earth."

H. R. Echols, Marlinton; Barlow and Moore, Edray; Amos Barlow, Huntersville; D. T. McNeel, Buckeye.

—After the census man had jotted down the answers to the preceding questions, he asked: "Do you speak the English language?" "Say," replied the "gent" who was under examination, "what kind of a spiel is this you're uncorkin' on me, any way? Me speak the English language? Well, my boy, if you think I'm talkin' Choctaw to you now you're up against one of the emptiest propositions that ever come down the pike. Say, if the man that invented the English language could hear me spiel on my larynx he'd holler for help, and that's no josh neither. You don't haft to have no translator to git my meanin' into your headpiece, do you, hub? Me talk English! Old man, if I'm trowin, anything else into you rite now you give me a map of it on a roller, will you?" Times-Herald.

Can you fix me up with a little whiskey?" asked the nervous man in the drug store; "I have a pain in my stomach." "I can see thro' you," retorted the druggist unfeelingly.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires a constitutional remedy. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. VOL. 18, NO. 50 | MARLINTON, WEST VIRGINIA, JULY 5, 1900. | $1.00 PER YEAR

West Virginia University,

MORGANTOWN, W. VA.

The growth of the University is quite as notable in its equipment, its faculty, and its new departments as in its attendance. For example, look at

The School of Music

established two years ago. It has a faculty of seven instructors, trained under the best teachers in this country and Europe. It occupies a separate building fitted up especially for its needs. Instruction on all stringed instruments, including violin, viola, mandolin, guitar, etc., is free. For voice and piano the fees are very low. A magnificent pipe organ for Commencement Hall is being constructed and it will be for the use of students of the School of Music. If you are interested in the study of music, write for full information.

Other departments of the University are developing with equal rapidity. The Premedical Department, with its four new instructors, deserves special mention. Write for a special pamphlet about it.

The University has a faculty of sixty-five instructors, graduates of the foremost schools in the world.

The Winter Quarter begins January 1, and the Spring Quarter April 1.

A NIGHT OF TERROR.

BY A. L. P.

'Twas the first winter month and in the mountains of the old Granite State December was wont to earn its name for cold and rigor. Halfway between the hill top and vale the L. family had an humble but entirely comfortable dwelling and everything within and out of the homestead betokened thrift and its twin sister—industry.

The family in question had gathered after supper around the ample hearthstone and many were the comments on barometrical changes evidenced by sharp gusts of wind and the pattering of icy snow upon the window pane. A whining at the door brought the dog Nero in to notice and he was ushered in, while Mr L. remarked that animals knew more and said less than all the scientific Weather Bureaus.

It was observed that one member of the family group remained unusually silent this evening and occasionally ceased from her loved knitting, an almost unheard of thing; for some of the younger children averred that "Aunt Elsie" knit all through the night—they left her knitting when they retired and at early dawn they found the needles still flitting between her fingers. There were many feet marked "L" that needed guarding from the cold and the "mother" was wonderfully helped by aunt Elsie's continuous knitting; but this useful woman did other things also and took her rest beside, as wise people ever do.

The weather and innocent gossip of the neighborhood being fully discussed and passed around, a novel subject was introduced by Philip, the half-grown boy: "Say, is it true, what I have read and heard spoken of, that human hair will turn white suddenly?" One member of the family declared it would, and gave several instances from history to this effect. Another doubted the truth of such records and the general opinion was in the negative. "Ask your aunt Elsie of the matter," said the mother, and while all turned to aunt Elsie for information she was silent and seemed distressed: then the children noticed for the first time in their lives that aunt Elsie's hair was a great deal whiter than her age justified, and their curiosity now aroused and supported by their mother's word, they exclaimed: "O, aunt Elsie, tell us, did your hair turn white in a single night like Queen Marie Antoinette's?"

"Have you not promised, Elsie, to tell sometime the story of your adventure and fright, and now is a good time, I think." J was the father who thus interposed, and great silence fell upon the group as aunt Elsie was seen to fold up her knitting work and accede.

"Long ago, children, during a winter like this and when I was young and gay like you, my home for the timebeing was at an uncle's, in a part of the State entirely new to me. Word came past the middle of the day for some one of the family to assist relatives in distress and at once. I was chosen for the emergency, and preparations begun to get me off quickly. Of course the traveling must be by sleigh for the bare ground had not been seen for a month. All day the cold had been increasing and a storm such as this to-night threatening. My escort on the journey was a young man hired for farm work and who thought he knew the country well; but a blinding bitter snow fall and wind might well perplex the truest mind. We had never heard of "blizzards" then; I think 'twas one that we encountered. Well wrapped in furs and shawls, with heated bricks at my feet and the [illegible] of a sleigh we started, and the cold started with us too, also the snow. Winter afternoons are short and this one the shortest of all. As the dark gathered my companion showed signs of perplexity which I had been feeling for some time; but I was not a timid girl for had I been we would not have been on the road.

"Raining in the house my driver spoke thus, 'I wish I was to home!' 'Why?' said I. 'Because we be lost, that's all.' I made no immediate reply when the young man added, 'from Dan to Beersheba!' The connection of these words under the circumstances I was unable to discover; but I suggested our seeking a house by the way for shelter until the night, now fairly set in, should be over and we could get our bearings in the way. A glimmering light in the distance guided us, and at last we were glad to be under a roof.

"The family that so kindly took us in from the night storm and our perplexed situation seemed to consist of two persons, a man and his wife. Mine hostess was talkative and as the exciting scenes of the road had robbed me of desire to sleep I was a patient listener; she carried me through her whole life, I believe, and all her troubles, reserving the greatest for the last disclosure, and well had it been for me if this grief never met my ears. 'My man and I have a child, an only son—poor dear boy!' and then she wept violently. 'Your boy is dead?' and my own voice became unsteady in presence of a mother's sorrow. 'Nay, young lady, not dead—it is worse than that.' A horrible suspense struck me for nothing was so awful as the loss of reason, and could it be, her son crazy? and perhaps here at home near his parents. Oh the wild tempest, the cold night outside and the unknown road were nothing compared with contact to the insane!

"And it was even so as the mother informed me speedily; but perceiving the alarm I could not hide added, 'He cannot hurt you; our poor senseless boy is tied and kept close: no one sees him and he sees no one.' Frightened, restless and unable to perform my part as guest I begged to retire, and was led up the bare stairs that creaked so to my step I imagined the maniac boy was near at hand and would touch me. Opening one of the two doors at the upper landing, the lady said, 'You do not mind being in the house alone? We occupy the small building in the yard with our poor child!' Reproaching myself inwardly for my fear so selfish compared with the great affliction and thankless care and labor of these lone parents, I meekly answered, 'O no, I mind nothing, except—' and hastily added, 'Forgive me; I do thank you so much for taking us in tonight, I pray God to bless you!' 'Well, well, young lady, I see you are clean worn out and it is late. Good night, and try to go to sleep.'

"Sleep does not always or ever follow trying; the sweet restorer comes unwittingly, and when to me that night it was a feverish slumber, scaring my senses with the screams and jargon and aimless efforts of the mad. The rickety door of my apartment had no fastening, and evidently I arose while sleeping and crossed the narrow landing to the room opposite and lay down upon a bare lounge left with other things in a kind of lumber room. The window panes were mostly out and the cold air awakened me, but did not explain my strange surroundings. Just then a sound from below froze my brain and stilled every effort to move from my position on the lounge where I seemed to have been spirited. The sound was the opening of a lower door and the clanking of a chain! Steps approached the stair and that terrible chorus of the chain steadily ascending. It was the maniac boy; it could be nothing else! He had escaped, and what was to become of me! Great horror seized upon me, tremulous, the cold sweat stood on my forehead, and I could not scream, which I essayed time and again. Night mares are thus described, but I was wide awake and horror stricken.

"As the chain and its bearer reached my door and entered I mercifully lost myself and was dead to all other things. How long unconscious I know not and soon after reviving and soothed gently by anxious friends, I refrained from asking any questions."

"But, aunt Elsie," said one of the interested and deeply attentive group at the fireside, "you found out sometime all about the matter, did you not? Please tell us the whole."

"Yes, my dears, I found the cause of my intense alarm imaginary as in ghost stories, but mine is not such; my story is real and the effect was serious. I remained ill, weakly and nervous for a long time and my once brown hair sensibly whitened, young as I was, until as you see it now."

"Aunt Elsie, you walked in your sleep to that other unused room; but what of the chain and the step?"

"That, my dear nephew, was only a large Newfoundland dog which had slipped his halter and was seeking as often, doubtless, before, the upper solitary room to lay him down and sleep; farthest from the mild animal's thoughts was the scaring of a human being almost to death." "Aunt Elsie" ceased speaking and resumed her knitting.

Times When we Pay War Taxes.

Secretary Gage says the war taxes are piling up a surplus that will reach $70,00 ,000 at the close of the present fiscal year, and in all probability will be greatly in excess of that amount. And still the Government fines the citizen—

When he sends a telegram.

When he draws a check.

When he becomes a member of a corporation.

When he transfers his stock.

When he insures his house or his life.

When he assigns his insurance.

When he makes a note to raise money for the payment of his other taxes.

When he buys a money order.

When he executes a lease.

When he sends a paid telephone message.

When an indemnity bond is given.

When a bill of exchange is drawn.

When the citizen executes an instrument necessary in the sale of merchandise on Change.

When he ships goods by freight or express.

When he clears a vessel and files a manifest.

When he files a ticket to go abroad.

When he executes a power of attorney.

When he buys proprietary medicines.

When he chews gum.

When he uses any perfume or his wife indulges in cosmetics.

When a note is protested.

When a warehouse receipt is given.

When merchandise is entered at a Customhouse.

When—will it be ended?—Arkansas Gazette.

MAUD MULLER AND THE 'MOBILE

Maud Muller on a summer's day
Went out to rake the fragrent hay.

She glanced up toward the distant town
To see if the Judge was riding down.

Then she leaned upon her rake to rest
And a nameless longing filled her breast.

A blue fly buzzed around her and Got smashed upon her soft white hand

Again she looked, and her round cheeks glowed—
A speck appeared far up the road.

Maud raked the hay with all her might,
Still keeping the growing speck in sight.

In his automobile the Judge sat proud
Leaving behind a thick dust cloud.

He'd never been out until that day
In the splendid thing, and his heart was gay.

O'er his features played a contented smile
As he ran over dogs in a lordly style.

Maud saw him come and her heart leaped high
As she dropped the rake, saying "My, oh my!"

Then she rushed where the cool spring bubbled up
And stooped to fill her little old cup.

[illegible]
Where the Judge [illegible] with the [illegible]

Sod,
While the Judge had been saying things to Maud.

On, on he came like a fast express!
She gave a hitch to the back of her dress

And straightened her hat and jabbed her hair
To be sure the frizzle and all were there

The Judge gave his gray mustache a twirl
And smiled as he saw the waiting girl,

And gazed at the sky as if wondering whether
The cloud in the west would bring wet weather,

And noticed the grass and flowers and trees
And the grazing kine as he cleft the breeze.

Then he grasped a handle some where at last,
To stop himself from going so fast;

But it seemed to stick and he gave a jerk
And seemed surprised that it wouldn't work!

And, in his hurry, he steered at Maud,
Who dropped her cup and yelled "O lord!"

And tried to climb the fence and got
Half way across, when, like a shot

From a cannon, the Judge arrived and went
On, after the manner of Gov. Kent.

* * * * * *

At last Maud rose from the wreck and gazed
Around at the scattered rails, amazed.

She saw the cows rush o'er the mead,
Developing awful rates of speed.

She heard hens cackle and people call
And then at last she remembered all.

Looking away o'er the fields, she saw
The undulating expounder of the law,

As he skipped the valleys and hit the hills,
Smashed the fences and jumped the rills.

Clutching her brow she sighed, "Ah me!"
Which the mock-bird echoed from his tree.

Then she took up her rake and mused awhile,
Saying "Blast the automobeel or byle!

Why didn't he stick to the sorrel mare?
Ah, where is he now!" Echo adswered "Where?"

Maud's rake is hanging unused today;
In a horseless age what's the use of hay

And oft in her palm she rests her chin
And thinks of the Judge and what might have been

If he only had stuck to the old mare's back—
Alas! Alas! Likewise alack!

White Man Turned Yellow.

Great consternation was felt by the friends of M. A. Hogarty of Lexington Ko., when they saw him turning yellow. His skin slowly changed color, also his eyes, and he suffered terribly. His malady was yellow jaundice. There is a rule in the Gazette office to shut up shop on holidays. The paper is very thin on Memorial Day, Fourth of July, Christmas, and Thanksgiving. If the subscribers don't like it they can just naturally lump it, and if that is hard they can stop it. When the owner of the Gazette was working on a salary for other men, he swore a mighty oath that the holidays of his employees should be respected.—Emporia (Kansas) Gazette.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

At old Millboro I passed an hour at the Sulphur Spring recently covered in by an elegant dome roof and enclosed by a picket fence, painted white. In the meantime Prince was turned loose to graze and he seemed to be more than satisfied until he lifted up his eyes and noticed a young lady holding a horse near the creek, a few hundred yards away, and he started for them. Upon calling to the young lady she came forward to check him, which she did by taking him by the bridle waited for me to come up, in the meantime while waiting she caressed old Prince very gently, which he seemed to appreciate very much. When I came up puffing and blowing from the race I asked her to see what trouble her charms had caused me. A blush and a smile beautified her features and in the most self-possessed manner replied: "Oh, well all horses love me." In an instant she had vaulted her own horse in clothes-pin fashion, and galloped away, presenting a most picturesque appearance in her riding habit, white bodiss, navy-bue skirt and summer hat trimmed in flowers that might allure the humming bird in its search for honey dew.

At the Warm Springs the summer hat is to be seen in alluring floral splendor. On a recent morning while a party of ladies were standing on the slated walk in merry conversation, a humming bird poised above them and sampled the flowers but finding no nectarine sweets, sped away like a flash of rainbow light.

Several localities in Rockbridge have been considerably injured by rain storms and freshets at intervals since May 28 and June 13. On June 12 the rain fall Lexington in less than an hour was 2½ inches, and was the heaviest down pour of rain for fifteen years. Side walks and gardens were considerably damaged.

The impression seems to be prevalent in Virginia that in the course of a year or two millions of dollars will be invested in Pocahontas county alone, to say nothing of what may be in store for Greenbrier and Randolph counties. So it seems one of the best ways to see ourselves as others see us is to take a trip from home. The only observation the writer feels equal to is, We shall see what we will see; and, All things come to those who wait, at the hands of hustlers. To the writer it is a source of regretful surprise, however to reflect that children of the pioneers who had been toiling, waiting and bearing the beat of the past days will have no more in hand than those who have come in at the eleventh hour, and possibly in many instances not near so much in the outcome.

Owing to rain and swollen streams in addition to and virtue of a cordial and pressing invitation the writer spent several June days in the charming Rockbridge home of Captain J. A. McNeel, once a widely known resident of our county. Mr and Mrs McNeel are the favored parents of four sons and three daughters, who are being faithfully trained up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, and are children of much promise.

Col Wm. T. Poage, one of the most distinguished of Confederate artillery officers under Stonewall Jackson and successors, afforded the writer one of the most pleasant afternoons of his stay in Lexington by devoting himself to my personal entertainment. Seated with him in one of the nicest of buggies he showed us the city, moved slowly throughout the University and Institute grounds, and then selected one of the most eligible points of view to take in the boat race on the final stretch, and witness the enthusiastic demonstration of two thousand spectators at the crucial moment. Patiently and kindly Col Poage showed me through the Jackson memorial Hall with its many objects of interest. On the wall of the Library has been but recently hung a portrait of Stonewall Jackson, which is the only portrait that I have seen that reminds me of the manner of person Jackson was, as I remember him. For three years no one's form and features were more familiar to me than Jackson's, and this portrait presents him as I remember him with speaking fidelity, and in my estimation compared with this new portrait all others are decently innocent cartoons.

To persons of reflective habits but few scenes could be more impressive than those witnessed at Lexington during commencement exercises. When the Tucker Memorial Hall was dedicated the address made by President Wilson, Rector Strickler and Prof. Quarles were pervaded by sentiments eulogistic of a life first consecrated to personal piety towards God, then elevated statesmanship, and purest jurisprudence. The addresses impressively illustrated how essential all these characteristics are in the characters of those called to care for and promote the highest interests of our country and the homes of our millions of people The mind is filled with thoughts too deep for tears seeing our American youth receiving their diplomas, then going forth to their places in life's arena to perform the parts assigned them in their respective spheres of service, as one fondly hopes, by Providential interposition and personal guidance. In the estimation of very competent and appreciative listeners the most masterly address of the current University series was that to the Alumni by Hon J. W. Davis, of West Virginia. Considered as to matter, manner and fitness of things this address deserves to be assigned rank with oratorical utterances. Like a voice in the wilderness it was a startling protest against the materialistic tendencies of the age that so seriously menace blood bought constitutional rights and forebode an imperial dynasty, having the form of liberty but denying the power thereof.

TO THE READERS OF THE TIMES.

The business known as the Pocahontas Times has been reorganized and a new partnership formed of Andrew, Norman and Calvin W. Price, to be known as Price Brothers. The writer has been editor, printer, devil and general scrapeer in the running of this paper for nearly eight years. He had been cast on these hospitable shores a learned law student, and the people showed an alarming tendency to search out lawyers of age and experience for consolation and advice. The paper was then bought and the same week we got a case in the justic's court. Since then we have posed before the public both as a lawyer and a newspaper man. But it is hard to serve two masters, and we knew sometime or other we would come to the parting of the ways. For the last year other work has prevented us from giving the paper much attention and it has been principally under the control of the editor's younger brothers, both of whom are first class printers and all-round newspaper men. From now on, the writer will give his undivided time if necessary to the practice of law, and only do such work in giving the county a paper as will not interfere with his duties as a lawyer, which in fact he has been doing all along. We expect to enlarge our paper in the near future, and will at all times endeavor to get out as good a paper as the field justifies. All country lawyers suffer from seasons of enforced idleness and at such times the writer will help in the office. Thanking you for your attention, I remain,

Yours very truly,

ANDREW PRICE.

But 'tis God who hath bereft us:
And sorrow-full, we bow to him,
While bitter tears our eyes bedim.

We thought that she was needed here—
Her home was bright, her friends were dear;
Age had not settled on her brow—
Her face, her voice seem with us now.

III.

"A little while," 'twas thus she spoke,
Ere yet life's silver cord was broke;
And it is so—a little while,
Until we reach life's latest mile.

And there are lonely hearts this way,
Who walked beside her day by day,
Until her hand slipped from their own—
The spirit from earth's hold had flown!

Where comes no weary troubled night;
Sickness and pain forever fled,
And Death itself, thro' Christ, is dead!

OBITUARY.

Mrs S. L. Brown.

The sympathies of a wide circle of friends in this and other States have been profoundly stirred by the decease of Mrs Mary Josephine Brown, wife of S. L. Brown, clerk of Pocahontas County. This sorrowful event occurred June 20, 1900, at her home in Marlinton, after a prolonged and distressing illness, resulting from a baffling complication of chronic ailments, aggravated by an attack of the prevalent influenza, late in the winter.

Mrs Brown was a daughter of the late Randolph Slaven, of Huntersville, and was born near Green Bank. As a dutiful daughter, an affectionate sister, faithful wife, kind neighbor and exemplary christian in the pale of the Presbyterian branch of the church of Christ. She acquired a reputation not to be forgotten for long years to come on earth and be everlastingly remembered in heaven.

Among the many touching incidents transpiring during the final months of her life this is recalled: Several weeks before her decease her Heavenly Redeemer gave her "a song in the night" in this beautiful way. Upon awaking she found herself singing:

"I am thine, O Lord; I have heard Thy voice,
And it told Thy love to me;
But I long to rise in the arms of faith,
And be closer drawn to Thee.

"There are depths of love that I cannot know,
'Till I cross the narrow sea;
There are heights of joy that I may not reach,
'Till I rest in peace with Thee.

"Draw me nearer, nearer, blessed Lord,
To the cross where Thou hast died;
Draw me nearer, nearer, blessed Lord,
To Thy precious bleeding side."

Her departure was attended by all the consoling evidences that affords peace and comfort to all who believe that Jesus Christ died and rose again, and those that sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him.

One of the last sacred songs she wanted to hear was "Is my Name Written There." Her comment was "Yes, I know my name is on the page bright and fair in the book of my Savior's Kingdom. Yes, my name is written there." Her passion for sacred music, flowers and little children was intense, [illegible] but the seal of heavenly [illegible] and consolations.

In parting with husband, [illegible] attended a [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] patience [illegible]

Her regret seemed to be mainly she could not remain with them to minister to their comfort. She seemed to be at a loss for words to express her heartfelt appreciation of all the care and attention shown her day and night during her sufferings. Her farewell message to her venerable father-in-law Wm. L. Brown, then too infirm to visit her, was touchingly filial, assuring him that with a daughter's love she would wait for him at the pearly gates and try to be the first to meet him, coming home at the Savior's bidding.

Gently as a tired child she fell asleep thus assuring us that Jesus can and does make the dying bed feel soft as downy pillows when we have faith in his promise lean our heads on his breast and breathe our lives out sweetly there.

Church Notes.

The Quarterly Meeting will be held at West Union next Saturday and Sunday, July 7 and 8.

Rev M. W. Atkinson will not preach at Marlinton next Sunday, as announced.

Greenbrier Presbytery met in called session in Lewisburg July 3. There were present ten ministers and two ruling elders. The calls of Green Bank and Dunmore churches and Marlinton and Huntersville churches to Revs H. W. McLaughlin and G. W. Nickel to be their pastors, were heard and their action approved by Presbytery. It appearing that Rev Nickel had submitted his resignation as pastor of his present charges in Monroe, to consider such resignation congregational meetings will held Sunday, July 8. Presbytery adjourned to meet in Ronceverte July 12, to hear reason, if any, why said pastorial relation should not be dissolved. It is hoped that by that time matters may have shaped themselves so that Presbytery may see clear to arrange for their installation as pastors of the above named churches.

About thirty-three years since the Chinese authorities founded schools of instruction at the Foo Chow arsenal, and secured foreigners for instructors. Highly recommended German, French and English professors were employed to instruct in ship building, in fortification, in the manufacture of arms and handling the same, and also in the English language. As a feature of English study the cadets were required to write compositions in English. When Dr T. E. Converse, editor of the Christian Observer, was in China, thirty years ago, he read one of these compositions which was as follows: "We are very glad to have the foreigners come here and teach us how to build ships and how to make arms and how to shoot, and when the foreigners have taught us how to make ships and arms [illegible] the foreigners can go." GRASSHOPPER GLACIER.

Icy Tomb of Thousands of the Long-legged Insects.

There are many remarkable glaciers in that part of the Rocky Mountain uplift that crosses the southern border of Montana. A part of this region has hitherto been unmapped and its more elevated portions were unvisited and unnamed until last summer, when a geographical party piloted the way up the mountains and discovered some of the largest glaciers in the temperate regions of the western world. Here rises Granite Peak which, according to Mr. Gannett is the culminating point of Montana, 12,824 feet high.

Among the glaciers found in these mountains and recently described by James P. Kimball is Grasshopper Glacier, which derives its name from the enormous quantity of grasshopper remains that are found on and in the glacier. Periodically the grasshoppers that thrive in the prairie to the north take their flight southward and must needs cross the mountains. Their favorite route seems to be across this wide glacier, and in the passage scores of them succumb to the rigor of cold and wind, fall helpless upon the snow and are finally entombed in the ice. In the course of time billions of them have been the victims of this glacier. They are, of course, carried by the ice river down into the valley and deposited at the melting edge of the ice, and Mr. Kimball says that thousands of tons of grasshopper remains are the principal material at the lower edge of the glacier. We hear very often of rocks and sand as forming the terminal moraine of glaciers, but here is a glacier whose principal morainal material is grasshoppers.

These insect remains are washed out of the ice in furrows wherever the sun's heat has grooved the surface into runlets of descending water. The grasshopper's permeate the glacier from top to bottom. No fragment of ice can be broken so small as not to contain remains. Most of the insects have been reduced to a coarse powder, and the furrows of them washed out by the runlets and naturally disposed in parallel lines are very dark in color.—Omaha Bee.

MADE FROM DREAMS.

Inventors Can Tell of Some Strange Experiences.

"It is remarkable how ideas of an inventive nature occur to one," remarked Henry Hollingsworth, a Cleveland inventor. "Frequently when engaged upon problems in mechanics I have gone to bed and dreamed what seemed to be a perfect solution of that which had been uppermost in my mind during the day. But the trouble is that upon awaking, while recollecting perfectly that I had dreamed the solution, it was impossible to recall the details necessary to a practical application of my idea. You know it is said of the automatic car coupler, of the double-jaw type, that the originator of the idea was a telegraph operator, who, while leaning back in his chair with his hands clasped behind his head dozing, was brought to his senses by the blowing of a locomotive whistle. That noise served as a connecting link for his thoughts. With his hands still clasped, sailor fashion, he slowly brought them around in front of him, and wondered why the cars of that train could not be connected with one another in the same way his hands were hooked together. As a result of this curiously suggested idea we have the almost universally used car coupler, the two jaws of which fit into each other and clasp after the manner of the human hands.

"There is a Western inventor who tells of dreaming of railroad spikes one night last summer. He saw around him nothing but spikes, hundreds and thousands of them, and tons and tons piled up in front of him. But these spikes differed from any other he had ever seen in that the four faces were grooved. He thought about those spikes when he woke up, and next night saw more spikes than ever in his dream. Then he became convinced that those spikes were intended as the foundation for the fortune that he had been striving for. As a result the Western man has applied for a patent upon the invention, which it is claimed effects a saving of 20 per cent. in the steel used, and makes a cheaper and better means of holding the rail to the tie than heretofore employed."—Washington Post.

A Literary Policeman.

The news of the distressing death of Charles Ashton, the "literary policeman," as he was called, will be received with genuine regret throughout the whole of Wales. Mr. Ashton was one of those patient plodders so numerous in North Wales where there is much less of the rush and stress of life than in the southern portion of the principality. A child of the Eisteddfod, he had published an historical work under its auspices. But the dream of his life was to produce a complete and authoritative bibliography of Welsh literature. Amid the picturesque solitudes of Dinas Mawddwy, where the policeman's life ought to be a happy one and the most heinous crime is the absence of the owner's name from a cart, Mr. Ashton toiled year in and year out upon his task, corresponding with scholars everywhere who were interested in the vast body of Welsh literature and were happy to help him with notes and suggestions.—Birmingham Post.

Oldest Tree in the World.

The town of Kos, the capital of the small Turkish island of that name lying off the coast of Asia Minor, possesses the oldest tree in the world. Under its shade Hippocrates inculcated his disciples in his methods and views concerning the healing art 2,000 years ago. Tradition carries the age of the tree back to the time of Aesculapius (of whom Hippocrates was a lineal descendant), which would add some 400 years to its age. A great part of the trunk is built round, and there is a fountain known as Hippocrates Fountain. The circumference of the trunk is 30 feet, and there are two main lower branches, which are supported by masonry columns.

MARLINTON, W. VA.

All calls promptly answered. Office at Yeager's Hotel.

Local Events.

Miss Delia Edgar is visiting at Clover Lick.

C. A. Yeager will build a residence near Captain Smith's.

A party from Lewisburg will camp in Pocahontas this summer.

R. W. Hill, Uriah Bird and B. M. Yeager were in Grafton last week.

J. W. Yeager has built a very neat law office near the Court-house.

L. M. McClintic, T. S. McNeel, R. K. Burns and I. F. Hill are on Cranberry this week camping.

Misses Emma Warwick, Mabel Ligon and Delia Edgar were visiting friends in Marlinton Monday.

Smith and Harper have orders for over 600,000 bricks. The first kiln of 250,000 will be ready for burning by August 1.

The name of the post office 5 miles below Franeford on the Lewisburg mail route has been changed from Hattie to Maxwelton.

Norman Price went to Lewisburg to attend the called meeting of Presbytery to consider the call of Rev G. W. Nickell to the Marlinton and Huntersville churches.

E. M. Arbogast and W. A. Bratton expect to build a big brick office building. L. M. McClintic will build a brick law office building this fall.

County Court met last Tuesday and after auditing claims, refusing to build roads and to grant liquor license adjourned to Saturday next when it will meet to lay the levy.

During the late flood the Middle Fork Driving Company put in about 10,000 logs. The breaking of a chain on one of the dams was the cause of not getting in 2,000 more.

Two gentlemen were in town last [illegible]k in regard to building the big [illegible]ll to be put in at Marlinton. [illegible]mill will be brought [illegible] to saw lumber to build [illegible]ildings, and the heavy ma[illegible]nery will be ready to be placed [illegible] the mill as soon as the railroad is finished to this point. They speak of building an engine house to take 200,000 bricks.

Dr A. L. Austin, Dentist, of Lewisburg, who has been practicing in Marlinton during the past month will go to Green Bank on Thursday where he will practice for several weeks. He will be found at the office of his brother Dr C. L. Austin. He will return to Marlinton at a later date, notice of which will be given in these columns.

The railroad track is four miles this side of Falling Springs. The laying of track is temporarily suspended until the track already laid can be ballasted. The rails laid are taken from the main line which are replaced with the heaviest rails manufactured. The work on Locust creek bridge is not progressing very fast and quite a lot of grading is to be done. To an outsider it would seem that if the railroad reached Marlinton by October Court it will do well.

The engineer of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company is at the mouth of Leather Bark, laying off the ground for the immense sawmill plant to be erected there. There 140 houses to be built at once for occupation by the employees of the company. The big mill will be in charge of Mr Slaymaker, who is said to be a very public spirited man and who takes a personal interest in the welfare of the community in which he chances to be. Much is hoped for from the establishment of this big industry in the county. There is said to be as much as 50,000,000 feet of lumber on the waters of Leather Bark alone.

The poorest wheat crop harvested in the Levels in the memory of man is being taken off this week. The fly is the trouble. This troublesome insect is a fly nearly as long as the common house fly but much slimmer. It lays its eggs in the fall at a certain period and if there is any wheat up the eggs are deposited in the ground at the root of the stalk. The eggs hatch about the time the house fly makes its appearance [illegible] in the spring, and the insect feeds on the stalk of the wheat until it is so weakened that it falls down. The [illegible] stalk may be well filled but the grains are shriveled. Much of it rots and the grass shoots up and makes it hard to harvest. In the Valley of Virginia formerly the farmers burned the wheat stubble and their straw ricks to kill out the pest but now it is thought that the average can be [illegible] by late sowing.

The Knapps Creek bridge is completed.

W. W. Beard in the Levels is preparing to build a big barn.

Fruit evaporators at Slaven's; get one before they are all gone.

The St Lawrence Company will cut 15,000,000 feet of white pine this year at Driscol.

Dr O. J. Campbell is now in Marlinton, located above the post-office. He will remain until next Wednesday.

F. Raymond Hill will locate in Marlinton about the first of September to practice law. He is a graduate of the University of Virginia.

What is the use of paying long-time prices and other people debts when you can get such bargains as I offer? Ladies' black hose 5c. Choice evaporated pears, 8c per lb. We have about 100 nice fans we will give away to the little girls.

Yours for bargains,
L. D. SHARP.

Linnwood, W. Va.

S. Nathan, of Philadelphia, and H. Nathan, of Laurel were in town Monday to see about the building of a roller mill at Marlinton if a site can be secured. No industry is more needed here. Mr Deeds of Indianopolis has been here to make arrangements about the machinery. It will probably be organized as a joint stock company.

Hang the flies! This process will take a long time; why not put up your wire windows right away? I will offer you wire screen windows which can be adjusted to different sizes of window for 38 cents and 48 cents each. Here comes a man telling me about the Arctic Icecream Freezer making icecream in fifteen minutes—$2.48 only.

Paul Golden.

In the Randolph Republican Convention one colored gentleman John McDowell, of Beverly, had a seat as a delegate. He is the first of his race to be recognized by any political party in this way in Randolph County, and it is supposed that on that account most of the colored people in the county will vote the Republican ticket at the coming election.—News.

The oldest inhabitant fails to remember any display of electrical phenomena surpassing what occurred in view of Huntersville Friday evening. A very dark and rugged cloud loomed just above the horizon from Buckleys Mountain to Browns Mountain which was illuminated by vivid flashes of lightning so continuous and frequent as not to be counted, and this too for an hour or more. Some of the flashes were of exceptional brilliance and magnitude. The silence in the meantime was very profound, but for an occasionally scarcely audible echo of very remote thunder. After the disappearance of this magnificent electrical display towards the north another cloud came up from the southwest attended with rain, thunder and lightning. The very earth seemed to be shaken.

News from former Citizens.

News from absent friends widely known in our county is always pleasant.

Robert H. Moffett lives at Moberly, Missouri, and is prospering in business.

Mitchell W. Beard resides at Lahoma, O. T., and speaks of farms, rating at six or eight hundred dollars, a few years since, now selling for three or four thousand.

J. W. Ervin, a nephew of the late James Ervin, of Jackson's River, near Warm Springs, Va., now a resident of Charleston, Arkansas, writes an interesting letter. From it we glean the following interesting item: "During the last winter of the war part of Wm. L. Jackson's command, of which I was a member, camped at Hillsboro. I belonged to the 19th Virginia Regiment. Capt Wm. L. McNeel and Capt. Jacob W. Marshall commanded Companies A and B of of the same Regiment. I was acquainted with Capt Marshall, brother Robert and sister Ellen in Glenville while a child. Miss Ellen was my second teacher.

Married.

Frank Tolbert Sharp, of Slaty Fork, and Miss Emma S. Doyle, of Clover Creek, were married on Wednesday, June 27, 1900 at the residence of W. P. Dilley, Rev M. W. Atkinson officiating.

After receiving the congratulations of the nice little company assembled to witness the ceremony, Mr and Mrs Sharp drove to Slaty Fork where they will reside for the present. They are a promising young couple and their many many friends wish them a long useful and happy life. X X X

GREEN BANK.

Fine growing weather, with considerable wind, hail and rain Friday night.

Peter Oliver, postmaster, threw his old hat away—It's a fine boy. Dr Little is also happy—It's a boy too, by heck!

Mrs and Mrs A. K. Dysard are visiting their daughter Mrs Dick Beard, of Academy.

L. J. R. Dysard was up to Durbin Sunday.

Oh Yes! Keep your eye on the indicator for they say another wedding is near.

Several of the boys are home for the Fourth.

There will be a good deal of wheat cut this the first week in July.

Col Dan O'Connel's drive started Saturday morning and passed Leather Bark Sunday morning at 9 o'clock.

A postoffice will be established at Leather Bark; also at Collins Depot.

A railroad will be built up Brush Run to the timber on Buffalo Mountain, in the near future.

Willis Gibson, of Vanderpool, is in this vicinity running out timber lands for E. M. Arbogast and others.

The Ladies of the Green Bank Aid Society will give a festival on July 21, 1900, in the church lot at this place. Ice Cream, Cake, Lemonade, &c. They will offer for sale a very nice quilt. Proceeds to go to go to repairing the Methodist church at this place. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Will commence at 11 a. m.—By order of the Committee.

Liquor License.

The county is infested with speakeasies all along the line of the Greenbrier Railroad from the top of Cheat to Droop Mountain. The liquor is hauled into the county with no attempt to hide the nature of the wagon load.
